"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world."
Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

The UHJ is in the end responsible for inciting Bahai fanatics and fundamentalists to attack other Bahais and non-Bahais merely for their views expressed on and off line in free forums of public discussion.

I recommend all newcomers to these matters read

Mahdi and others off AOL is thinly disguised fascism, clear and simple....

Jerri White, Spirituality Forums Administrator for AOL, is an extremely naive person when it comes to understanding what Bahais like Mark Foster and Susan Maneck are actually using AOL for. It seemed to me at times he might even be sympathetic to the Bahai fundamentalist view of things and consciously protecting it. Those interested could write him at

RBCFAdmin@aol.com

It seems to me Foster is bring his campaign of lies and character assassination against Mr Mahdi on AOL over here to trb. Perhaps Mr Mahdi should contact the FBI for Foster's stalking him....

Thank you for sharing this link with all of us on talk.religion.bahai. I look forward to reading your article.

Let me thank you for your book Modernity & the Millenium, which I have just recently read. It was a profound pleasure to read an intelligent work by a fellow Bahai on the great divide of modernity and Baha'u'llah's grappling with its awesome forces....

It's a pity and lasting disgrace that the ignoramuses on Mount Carmel have driven you out of the faith....

Please accept my heart-felt apologies.

Susan, I have read the article. It is amazing that the article quotes hadiths that clearly indicate the finality of Muhammad (saaw) and Islam, but it doesn't try to refute the source, all it does is give how Muslims somehow "developed attitudes" that made them "believe" that Islam is the last and Muhammad (saaw) is what he is, khatam an nabiyeen. It is pure beating around the bush, anti Islamic polemics. In order to make a refuted belief sound not refuted or make a belief that refutes your belief to make it like it doesn't refute you belief techniques such as twisting the text, not answering or refuting the comments occurs. If Islam clearly shows in many ahadiths and ayats the finality of Muhammad (saaw) why don't you guys try to show the hadith is weak my checking the isnad? When Muslims read this, they from their point of view become more convinced that bahais are against Islam by twisting the text and not even answering the question. I thought when reading the article I would see bahais trying to refute the source of the ahadith by showing a defective isnad, etc., but actually they tried to blame muslims for wrongly assuming such clear cut texts really meant what it says.

Get out here, the orientalist also said that the Quran developed its present form after many years, despite the copies of the Quran from the caliph Uthman era. When you have independent thought and an enlighten mind, you develop not just common sense but you set intellectual trends not just follow trends like orientalism designed to discredit Islam. You don't accept real criticism of ahadith because it doesn't agree with your beliefs, but you accept "modern criticism" because not only people like you can formulate wild theories but it gives you a flexibility to discredit Islam that real criticism doesn't allow. You know that you can't find any hadith isnad as faulty, that's why you cling to the orientalist standards so tightly. The reason why the orientalist developed this standard was because they knew that they couldn't discredit the ahadith or Quran thru studying the sources, isnad, text, etc., but they figured out if they develop some standard that allow them to formulate wild theories it can give them a chance to try to discredit Islam. A person is known best for setting a standard, for having enlighten thought that allows him or her to give new insight to something. A person who lacks these attributes just believes in the hype and makes it bigger by being a spokesperson for it. I know that you were part of the 5-year plan in Lebanon that tried to convert Muslims to the Bahai faith. So discrediting Islam and having a genuine almost innate hatred for Islam is very apparent from you. Like Allah said in the Quran, the enemies of Allah try to put out the Light of Allah but Allah's Light can never be put out. The movement to discredit Islam has plagued Muslims since day one, but Allah is making Muslims every second and even all of the attempts from the enemies of Islam will prove futile. La'anat Allah 'ala Kafirien.

Susan often talks about the so-called "modern standard" of criticism. Based on this concept, Susan rejects to examine the isnad or chain of the hadith, the source, the text, etc., because she claims that these things alone are not sufficient in determining the validity of something. Since Susan does not set intellectual trends but rather follows them, and easily believes the hype, she has adopted the orientalist standard in evaluating Islam that was solely designed to discredit Islam. The point I like to make here is that biographies of Muhammad (saaw) written by non muslim orientalist have in their books the Farewell Sermon of Muhammad (saaw). The interesting point is that Susan rejects this hadith although her fellow academic peers with their "modern standard" use this very hadith in their books. She rejects this hadith because 1. it conflicts the Bahai belief and 2. it doesn't refute Islam's claim of finality. To emphasize an obvious double standard, I would like Susan to comment on this to "clear" things up. If Susan can somehow prove that there is no double standard and there is intellectual sincerity on her part, I would like Susan to immediately address it.

Subject: Re: Baha'i Scriptures and Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Juan,

Not kind nor generous but honest. Modernity & the Millenium is a brilliant reading of the historical Baha'u'llah and the forces that helped to shape his revelation. It establishes beyond question what a huge variance exists between the Teachings of Baha'u'llah and the distortions the Bahai administration continues to fob off today on Bahais and non-Bahais.

Actually, I wrote an essay on Hayden a few years ago but have been unable to find a journal willing to publish it since his thinking on spirituality and race are very far indeed from the prevailing postmodern cliches and, for that matter, the one-dimensional thinking of the UHJ....

I too believe it is part of God's wisdom to have mutilated the UHJ, restricting it to only legislative matters, though they continue to transgress on the consciences of avowed believers and others. You say at the end of your article that "There is room for optimism about the future." I must disagree with you. I really can't believe the future holds much promise for the Bahai Faith or the UHJ. The many abuses during the last decade show how flawed the institution is and how extreme the measures are to which it is willing to go to retain a kind of tyranny over people's minds and souls that Baha'u'llah himself denounced, as you document so well in your book and articles. These tensions and antinomies will prove lasting ones for the Bahai Faith, as they are for the human soul....

I do concur that public opinion is now the only recourse for counterbalancing the tyranny of the UHJ. If it is going to lie to people in general, as well as to elected government officials, about the nature of the Bahai Faith and its practices, there should be consequences. If it won't engage and answer direct questions or appeals, it should have to hear the same questions from the sources of intelligent social opinion that it seeks ultimately to seduce and deceive into its ranks. If I have learnt anything during the more than two year battle for talk.religion.bahai, it is that driving everything into the open for people to judge and decide for themselves is the only way to handle the outright lies and deceptions that are now routine in Bahai circles.

I had a reply from a uni in England over what seems to be an identical message with my address as false author.

The present "charter" was never voted on. It was imposed during the fall of 1996 by the "moderators" emphasizing in a new and major way covenant breaking and the "moderators" right to suppress it.

Most people on Usenet as well as most Bahais do not realize this important fact about soc.religion.bahai's "charter."

Subject: Demagoguery - The Baha'i Technique

During the last year and a half, a number of observers have noted several common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

FG, May 12, 1992:
"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:
"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."

FG, June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"

K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:

"If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty] were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not character assassination by innuendo, what is?"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson18.htm>

K. Paul Johnson, December 30, 1998:

"It seems to me that part of what Fred calls "the Baha'i technique" is in fact far broader. It's the technique of all defenders of some religious orthodoxy or another in response to criticism of their beliefs or organization. And you're engaging in it here. Some principles by which it can be discerned:

1. Show scornful contempt for all criticisms, and the individuals making them. This has the advantage of furthering group solidarity and encouraging believers to regard criticism as contemptible. It also tells them "This will happen to you, too, if you step out of line." Unfortunately, it has the disadvantage of saying to observers, "We true believers are a bunch of hostile, sarcastic nasties who don't care at all what people in the outside world think of us, since we're too busy bashing critics to worry about the impression our tone or attitude makes." (See the Eckists or Scientologists or fundamentalist Christians on Usenet for real virtuosity in this regard.)

2. Personalize, personalize, personalize. If you can relentlessly focus attention on the individual(s) raising difficult issues, you just might keep yourself and others from facing the issues themselves. Not facing the crucial issues is of utmost priority.

3. Polarize at all possible opportunities. Never give an inch. Don't acknowledge even a single point that an "enemy" makes, or modify your vigilant tone for an instant. Prove that you're a "spiritual warrior" for the "true faith." Kindness is weakness, forbearance is never appropriate when God's on your side."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson22.htm>

Gibro28W, October 12, 1998:

"In summary, the biggest problem, as I see it, is that most Baha'is don't take criticism seriously--they tune it out as "negative" or "harmful to spiritual growth." This selfish attitude is very stupid. First of all, Baha'is entice people to join them. When they do, they indoctrinate them until they think like the group. But as soon as a red flare of doubt goes up in the convert's mind, they're cordoned off by the group and reminded of their "spiritual" obligations in the name of Baha'u'llah or the "Covenant." If left unresolved and doubt gives vent to prolonged criticism, the convert is sent packing or is kicked out. What we have here is a broken family that had failed to truly listen to the needs of its members in the first place.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb73.htm>

Barthaman on September 14, 1998:

"Baha'i dissenters, more or less, are wounded souls abandoned by their fathers, so-to-speak. They have been cast out and dismissed or shunned without having had a fair hearing. Consider their pain when the rest of their "family" dismisses them too. Can you know what it's like to be accused of heresy and shunned following a sincere intellectual conflict (inspired by doubt)--after you've sacrificed years in devoted service to your religion? Can you comprehend their sense of betrayal and injustice? This is why disillusioned believers leave their religions each year--while some still hang around, banging on the door now and then, demanding a refund for their lost youth. In time they will have to move on, however, writing the Baha'i Faith off as another lesson in fraud. Mock these people all you want--but for the grace of God, the next dissenter could be you. Don't be too confident, my friend."

Dave,

I've tried not to bother you knowing you had accepted handling the poll on the condition of extra time. People are emailing me and wondering what's going on. It has been ten days now. I'd appreciate your just letting people know the RESULTS as soon as possible.

Thanks, again, for volunteering and contributing your time and effort on such a volatile proposal....

I noted in the CFV that the results would be delayed - I anticipate that I will have the results tabulated next weekend. The results or an explanation of whatever actions will be posted then.

The "moderators" at soc.religion.bahai are violating other parts of the "charter" by doing so and transgressing on the basic covenant they entered into when Usenet permitted them to form a newsgroup....

And thanks, Frederick, for checking with Dave.

I'm sure that I speak for all of the proponents in saying that

Dear Fred,

Is there anything you can tell me about why the vote should be taking so long? Seems like there must be some problem with the vote.

I wrote a comment on Roger R.'s last post, but when I did so as a followup to him the server rejected it. So I posted again, this time as a separate post entitled "Baha'i Fear and Loathing." Could you forward that from trm to arb? I don't have the means to do so.

Hope all works out well this time. Happy 1999,

Paul

I don't know what's going on either. I'm worried something is really up. The votetaker had asked for more than the standard 5 days after the vote. We all assumed it was because of the holiday season. He's saying now he wants through this coming weekend....

I forwarded your message to arb.

I appreciate your words defending me to some extent lately. Few seem to realize I'm not the monster Bahais make me out to be....

Happy '99!

Dear Fred,

Thanks for forwarding the post. It's not that I can't access the alt. hierarchy; never have been able to access arb from my server. But in addition, when I tried to answer Roger, I got an error message saying it was rejected. Otherwise my response would have gone to arb because it was already in the headers, even though I can't read it.

Could you also post this (leaving out the above para and this line):

Having received anonymous abusive email in the past from the UK, with the same slangy style as shown by today's anonymous Brit, I was curious about who might be up to this on arb today, and if it might be the same person who wrote to me a couple of years ago. So I looked up an author profile for his/her account. Someone at this account has posted to srb as Rachael, a 28-year-old lifetime Baha'i whose parents wouldn't celebrate Christmas but who encourages her own children to do so. But s/he or another also posted from the same account as "Pete," with a style more in keeping with today's anonymous offerings on arb-- enthusing about someone calling Tim "Tiffany."

What I'd like to know is what any Baha'i can possibly be thinking when s/he posts like this. What impression of the Faith does s/he imagine is being created before the public? Care to explain, Pete/Rachael?

Subject: Context of my quote

Hello everybody--

On numerous occasions Frederick has posted a list of quotes regarding censorship and SRB. He quotes me:

>>For me, I have posted a couple of >>times on soc.religion.bahai and have gotten a couple of nasty emails and it >>just ruins my whole day!

This is an accurate quote. However, I think Frederick is misunderstanding/misusing the context. He is rightly concerned about censorship on SRB when posts are rejected. My comment, however, was about responses I received to posts that *were* put on SRB by the moderators. My comment, then, was not about censorship, since I did get to say what I wanted to. Some people did not like what I said and told me so. As far as I know they were not moderators.

In light of this, I'd appreciate it if Frederick would remove me from this list of quotes. Thanks.

Peace

Sent: Wednesday, January 06, 1999 9:44 AM
Subject: Antinomies - Robert Browning, Dostoevsky

From a May 1992 letter:

I've been reading lately a narrative poem by Robert Browning, "Bishop Blougram's Apology." I've read it a number of times over the years, and it's one that I continue to think about. The character of the bishop is partly based on John Henry Newman and another contemporary figure in the Roman Catholic Church, the latter of whom was especially noted for his abuse of power and position. Over dinner, the bishop justifies his corruption to a young journalist who has noticed his calculation, insincerity, and hypocrisy. In much of the poem, Browning is dealing with the nature of religious doubt. While the bishop is a hypocrite who embraces Catholicism because it gives him "cabin comforts" and the "estimation" of the masses, the journalist is charmingly naive in his insistence that religious faith should be "absolute." In a marvelous passage Browning recognizes the complex duality of the human soul:

No, when the fight begins within himself,
A man's worth something. God stoops o'er his head,
Satan looks up between his feet--both tug--
He's left, himself, i' the middle: the soul wakes
And grows. Prolong that battle through his life!
Never leave growing till the life to come!

Putting this truth in a sophist's mouth, Browning probes much deeper into the struggle for faith than the "pious" usually allow themselves. To my mind, the health of the spirit requires that freedom--given by God--to doubt and question and probe every single dogma of religion in its oppressively organized phase. On the other hand, Browning's point is partly that doubt itself, like evil and suffering, is a test of one's belief, for mature belief can only grow out of the struggle with doubt.

There is something deeply, inescapably, eternally dialectical in the human being and in the very nature of existence, the way it develops, evolves, progresses.

Dostoevsky, in his chapter "The Grand Inquisitor," In The Brothers Karamazov, meditates dialectically on the dilemma of free will and obedience to religious authority. Christ returns during the Spanish Inquisition and is imprisoned by the Grand Inquisitor who accuses Christ of leading men into confusion by giving them freedom of choice and conscience. The Grand Inquisitor informs Christ that

We have corrected Your work and have now founded it on miracle, mystery, and authority. And men rejoice at being led like cattle again, with the terrible gift of freedom that brought them so much suffering removed from them.

The Inquisitor goes on to tell Christ that man's "greatest need on earth" is "to find someone to worship, someone who can relieve him of the burden of his conscience, thus enabling him finally to unite into a harmonious ant-hill where there are no dissenting voices. . . ." In place of individual responsibility to God, the Inquisitor promises to free mankind from "the frightening torment they know today when they have to decide for themselves how to act." Christ listens to this sophist without uttering a word, and then, at the end, before being allowed to leave, rises and kisses the Inquisitor. Ivan, a nihilist, who relates this story, asserts all too accurately that in the modern world "everything is permitted." The Grand Inquisitor, grasping for power, a character to whom Nietzsche must have responded deeply, "doesn't believe in God." Dostoevsky knew these rich tensions were part of human nature. At times, the Bahá'í administration grossly fails to understand that Bahá'u'lláh has also blessed humankind with this burden of freedom and responsibility.

Subject: Re: Context of my quote

For the non-Bahai or news.groupie, I am responding to this message. Bahais have repeatedly, consistently attempted to threaten, intimidate, and coerce other Bahais and non-Bahais through "private" email. I agree with the many, many observers over the last few years that the only way to prevent such tactics by Bahais is the open light of day... where all may read and judge for themselves. Afshin,

I couldn't agree more!

I better not say this on news.groups right now, but thanks for your and your fellow Muslims' help.
It's hard to be sure, but I count possibly 48 Muslim YES votes.

Fred

Greetings. I recently finished reading this book as well as stumbling upon the bcca.org site. You mentioned that you taught this text in a course. I would be very interested in learning more about this text. Is there anyway I could purchase lecture notes, handouts, supplemental sources, etc. that you used while teaching? It would be greatly appreciated.

Best,
David

Thank you for your interest but I've learnt not to respond to Bahais through private email. I'd be happy to discuss it on the newly created talk.religion.bahai or alt.religion.bahai. The former should be widely available within a week or so.

Dave,

Thanks for taking on such a stormy proposal. I know it hasn't been easy for you and probably often a royal pain....

Has the RESULT been sent to soc.religion.bahai?

Dear Fred, Ron, John, Frank, Dave,

I am SO happy that the vote succeeded. I wish we could get together and exchange hugs. I feel so good about this. I feel the newsgroup will be a chink to let light in (though perhaps other stuff, too, but it's an imperfect world).

Love and good wishes for the future to you all,
Fran

Dear fellow proponents

Even though I had a very limited role to play in the process of establishing Talk Religion Baha'i I am very happy to see that the vote was successful and congratulate you all in its success.

Unfortunately I don't have very much spare time and you probably won't see many contributions from me on TRB, nevertheless, I hope that the quality of the debate is both positive and highly stimulating and conducted in a true Baha'i spirit that will attract the hearts of people and assist them to come to a better understanding of the knowledge and love revealed by Baha'u'llah and which is so sorely needed in the world at this time.

"The Bahai Technique":
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/technique.htm>

For the non-Bahai or news.groupie, I am responding to this message. Bahais have repeatedly, consistently attempted to threaten, intimidate, and coerce other Bahais and non-Bahais through "private" email. I agree with the many, many observers over the last few years that the only way to prevent such tactics by Bahais is the open light of day... where all may read and judge for themselves. I'd like to thank Dave Cornejo, the votetaker, for volunteering to conduct this 3rd interest poll for talk.religion.bahai. Usenet truly depends on such people contributing their time and labor for the benefit of others.

I also thank all of the news.groups regulars who have participated and contributed in one way or another during this 3rd interest poll and/or the previous two polls over the last two years.

I and other Bahais and non-Bahais are deeply indebted to all of you for your help and advice.

Thank you....

I don't believe you've had any role to play. You never once posted a single message in a public forum supporting trb nor did you even vote for the newsgroup, so profound was your "support" for it.

I've never been convinced that you were at all honest in your involvement and remained unconvinced. I find your message below quite contemptible....

Don't be a dill, Fred! I KNOW why John joined and where his time goes, and people have told me that such a proponent made them think twice.
Anyway, a sign of a great person is to be gracious in victory.

I know you must be pleased with the results, as I am. Thanks for all your effort on behalf of trb. I just hope the bastards aren't cooking up some scheme to abort it. But the time is almost up for that.

Schaut is a real piece of work! 5 personal attacks on me in one day, a record. Think I'll start ignoring him again. Even though he's a total asshole and deserves harassment since he's dished it out so much, I'm softhearted and can't help feeling sorry for him the way Tim is lambasting him. "Epistle to the Weasel" indeed. Funny that Tim abuses him, I'm polite to him, but he abuses me and not Tim. Wonder what's behind that. Well, he's shut up today as far as I'm involved which is good to see.

Congratulations and let's hope the new newsgroup gets more traffic than srb and arb combined!

Cheers,

Paul

Thanks. You're about the only person who has said anything kind about it! I'm worrying too that they're up to something. They always have been in the past.... I've done an Annotated NO voters this time too but am waiting until trb is up and running before posting it there and on arb. I'll attach it, though, for you....

I couldn't agree more with you about Schaut. If he shows up again refer to him as "Schauting"-- Fran used it in email with me last August and when I accused him of it a few times he disappeared for months! Probably Reini and some of the other literalists tell him to back off as well.

I appreciate it. Srb has really been on the boards lately. If you would, point out too that they haven't posted the RESULT as they should have as members of Usenet and participants all along otherwise in this poll. I love to kick Hyman every chance I get....

Srb shot itself in the foot (or ass) this time around in a number of ways. But I'm waiting for the 10 period to expire before I really get into it.

Thanks for all your help too, Paul. The first time I was really a lone voice. You and others have really made the difference....

At long last we can start discussing issues rather than why we haven't got a place to discuss issues... :-)

It's nice when things work out, especially as this one was a long time coming. I do think a major tragedy was averted for the Baha'i Faith, as failure would have resulted in a huge amount of accusations of intolerance and censorship. It will be interesting to see the pattern of posting to the NG. I notice that SRB struggles these days to get half a dozen posts a day, but I can not believe that that is the limit of world-wide interest in the Baha'i Faith. Clearly a better forum is needed, and TRB can be IT!

We have to start well, though. People have criticised Fred for posting so much to alt.religion.bahai, but Fred has had to cross-post other people's posts to mailing lists etc., which people don't seem to take account of. It would be good if we get a wide variety of participants instead of having the bulk of the articles from just a few. I believe it is up to us to set the tone, avoid acrimony, avoid discussing the past history of this proposal, and focus on the future. But like you, Fran, I believe we can do it.

Dear Fred:

I became a Baha'i in 1972, when the news of the entry by troops in South Carolina was still fresh, and all of us were excited by it. What I did not know was that by then the NSA had already pulled the plug on the process. They ordered the traveling teachers, like Mag Carney, out (and sanctioned those who did not obey this order), and pulled monetary resources out of teaching and put it into 'consolidation.' There is no doubt that the NSA did stop the process; I have done interviews with a number of eyewitnesses of the time. A reporter who interviewed an NSA member told me that the latter admitted that 'we [the NSA] put the skids on it.'

Chain conversion, like chain immigration, is a spontaneous process. It spreads by word of mouth. You had entire Baptist congregations declaring for Baha'u'llah, the minister included. You saw notices outside Black churches advertising 'Baha'i meeting on Sunday Night at 7:00 pm.' There were some declaration cards that were signed in error. I know of no scientific study of what proportion of them were. Robert Stockman has suggested that the proportion has been exaggerated.

But when you stop chain conversion, it can often go cold altogether. It is over with. Forever. The immediate networks and conditions that made it possible evaporate. This is what happened in the South. The NSA stomped out entry by troops, with deliberation and aforethought (and over the objections of a minority of NSA members like Dick Betts).

Why exactly the NSA stopped the process is not entirely clear. Obviously, the more conservative members of that body have tended to be very worried about losing their tight control over local communities, and the entry of large numbers of poor, rural, largely illiterate Blacks challenged their system of control mechanisms (you can't dissolve a sassy LSA if there isn't an LSA at all). Eyewitnesses did report to me hearing conservative NSA members speaking of their worries over loss of control. One Baha'i I knew personally who had done travel teaching in SC in 1971 mentioned to me problems with charismatic converts who raised alarums in Wilmette about the possibility for schism.

Eric Pierce reported that one prominent African-American believer active in the teaching work was convinced that it was stopped because of fears in Wilmette that the community would be swamped by the newcomers and that they might in turn elect a new NSA. I have lots of evidence that over the years the NSA's more repressive actions have often been motivated by fears of being unseated, and certainly a big demographic shift of this nature must have raised such fears. Whether they were the primary reason for the NSA to shut down the conversion process, I do not know. That some informed veteran Baha'is of the time thought they were is indisputable.

Dan Jordan told one friend of mine that in the mid-60s the NSA had voted on whether to punish a southern white Baha'i who refused to desegregate his shop. The NSA decided to take away his administrative rights. But Charlotte Linfoot had opposed this action. It seems to me incredible that in 1970-71 Charlotte was suddenly just delighted with the prospect of the influx of tens of thousands of poor, rural African-Americans (whom she had been content to have suffer Jim Crow segregation at the hands of *Baha'i* white shopkeepers on a few years before). Or that the idea that they might come to dominate the NSA thrilled her. Maneck has said that the NSA would have been delighted to see the South Carolina converts show up at national convention. Can she cite even one contemporary document, or even an interview with a principal, which would corroborate this unlikely proposition? It is a typical characteristic of propaganda that baseless allegations are put forward that seem contrary to common sense, which their authors hope will become plausible by virtue of the fallacy of authority or through constant repetition.

I have said before that I personally think that the issues in control outweighed the issues in race among most of the NSA members (but not all). I think both issues were present. What is truly amazing is that on the whole the NSA managed to a) stop this spontaneous chain conversion, b) avoid most of the community coming to know that they had stopped it, c) avoid any accountability whatsoever for doing so, and d) to implement a policy of disrupting further such outbreaks of spontaneous mass conversion, which they have pursued behind the scenes ever since. Do you think, if a referendum had been held in early 1971, a majority of US Baha'is would have voted to deliberately *stop* the process of the entry by troops in the South? Of course not. If the NSA had been so proud of what it did, it wouldn't have virtually covered it up. House of Justice member Ali Nakhjavani complained that this step set back the Baha'i faith in the U.S. 'by a generation.' He underestimated its impact.

But the real question is what can be learned from all this. The indication is that the structure and functioning of Baha'i national elections actually works against the best interests of the faith. The anxiety of sitting members about being unseated has caused them to act repressively over and over again. That is why I used to argue for term limits for NSA members, and for the abolition of a paid Secretary. Someone who receives $150,000 or more per annum in cash and perquisites will naturally be worried about losing that income. If the NSA members were unremunerated and knew they would only be on for 3-5 years, then they would be less likely to worry about being unseated, and would allow more free and open discourse and teaching work in the community.

The current system is clearly a failure. If one subtracts the Iranian immigrants, there are no more adult Baha'is in the US now than there were in 1978. Many of the most capable Baha'is have been chased out of the faith. And anyone who points out the problems is branded an enemy of the faith.

So I just plead with the open-minded to ask themselves this question: What went wrong in 1971 such that the entry by troops was stopped? And how could things be changed so as to make this sort of ultra-conservative cautiousness less of a constraint on community growth in the future? The point is not to condemn what happened in the past, but to make things better. The Baha'i faith has a great deal to offer the world. Its leaders are ensuring that its light is hidden under a bushel.

cheers Juan Cole

Dear Paul,

I hardly see anything which I posted in my introductory remarks which is all that different than what you yourself have said. Nor do I see how they could be interpreted as calumnies. For many of us the distinction between "serial monogamists" and "stable polygamists" in the spiritual realm is not all that important. The major purpose of my own introductory remarks was mostly to point out that you were not an unbiased observer but rather a disgruntled ex-Baha'i with a distaste for authority and a preference for the spiritual "flea market" approach of New Age Movements. I stand by that characterization. Or would you like to tell us you are not an ex-Baha'i, that you are perfectly happy with the Faith the way it is, or that obedience to authority presents no problems for you? If so, I will cheerfully admit my mistake and retract my remarks.

Dear Paul,

I discussed the article here because it was posted here. Had it not been, I certainly would not have brought it up! When you write things like this for publicly distribution their contents will be discussed and critiqued publicly. It is truly amazing to me the way you guys will say anything about anyone and then scream "backbiting" when anyone responds to your misrepresentations! But it was this hypocrisy that caused me to eventually begin see through all of this in the first place. Baha'u'llah urged the rulers to observe justice *adl* and the learned fairmindedness *infsaf*, but I found no fairmindedness among those who styled themselves "scholars."

Frederick,

I would appreciate it if you would not send me email anymore. I will see what happened to the soc.religion.bahai posting if/when I have time - despite your feelings on the matter it is hardly important for the record to get it posted there. The "record" resides on an isc.org ftp site and it is automatically maintained.

WRT when the group gets created; I don't know when that will happen, I don't and can't issue that message. Tale does that and quite frankly he's so busy right now I really wouldn't expect an answer any time soon. Emailing him will only annoy him and not acheive anything. It is in his queue and when he gets to it, it will be done. I'm sorry, but that's the state of Usenet today.

As for me, my participation in the process for talk.religion.bahai is all but over - you got your group passed so be happy and patient.

Subject: Re: Fw: fw Juan Cole on mass teaching & Maneck's AOL slander

1) I have never said that the motive or even a motive of the NSA in closing down the mass teaching in the South in the early '70s was 'racism.' It can be alleged all anyone likes that I have said this, but it cannot be demonstrated, because I have not. I have simply reported that some African-Americans at the time feared that such considerations entered in, and I have specifically admitted that they may well have been wrong. It seems to me, given the NSA's record, that without any doubt whatsoever a kind of paternalism was involved.

There is evidence that Charlotte Linfoot was consistently unsympathetic to Baha'i involvement in the civil rights movement from the lunch counter demonstrations of 1960 forward, and I am afraid the interviewing I've done with people who knew her leads me strongly to suspect that her quietism acted as a screen for discomfort with uppity Blacks. Whether this feeling entered into her vote on the South Carolina process, I am happy to admit I do not know. I am glad that it is now uncontested that the NSA did shut down the mass conversions, because only once that is established can there then be reasoned consultation on what the full range of motives for that was, and whether that was a good thing. I think you can imagine what Ruhiyih Khanum thought about it.

2) Bill Davis in one of his interrogations of the Dialogue editors in spring, 1988, specifically said that the NSA had been worried that 'A Modest Proposal' might come across to the delegates as a critique of the sitting NSA's record (enrollments had fallen off drastically and virtually no money was being put into teaching), and cost some of them election. Only the poor naifs who have never actually had anything serious to do with Wilmette are under the impression that no NSA member cares if he or she is reelected. Some of these elected officials are drawing substantial money out of the faith. The men all think they have a shot at getting elected to the UHJ, and moving up to salaries in the large six figures as well as enormous power in a community of 3 million. It is worries about being reelected that drives the poor things to be so repressive sometimes, which hurts the community generally, and the community if it were smart would find a way out of this bad situation.

3) I have never called 'the Baha'i faith' a 'cult' globally. I rather like most Baha'is I have known, and I admire the values for which the Baha'i faith stands. I'd like to see it succeed better than it has. My definition of a cult is a religious organization that exercises undue control over adherents and that engages in deviant practices. The Baha'i faith is not deviant, though there is a certain amount of personal corruption among its officials. In some communities, and at some levels, the degree of control that officials attempt to gain over adherents is troubling to me. In particular, I believe that in an open society like the U.S., the practice of shunning is generally a cult marker (as you have it among Jehovah's Witnesses, e.g.). Thus, what I would say is that in some communities and among some officials there are cult-like behaviors among Baha'is, and that there is more such cult-like behavior in the Baha'i community than there is in the Episcopalian or Methodist or Unitarian Universalist communities.

>It should be clear to anyone by now who has been following these discussion >that what happened between certain academics and the Baha'i administration >had little to do with scholarship *per se.*

Our current discussion cannot in fact shed any light whatsoever on the issues that caused Haifa to launch false and outrageous heresy accusations against a number of Baha'i academics and intellectuals in April, 1996, for their email messages. (Such a tolerant, universal, loving, Baha'i-like action!) One of the cheap polemical tricks used by some people is to employ things I have said and stances I have taken since I was mysteriously and suddenly assaulted as ex post facto justifications for the assault. Some of Talisman@indiana.edu is up on the Web. Anyone who can read my messages there and conclude that I was a covenant breaker is just a sicko. Obviously, once the high administration revealed to me how weird they are, I went on to critique them more seriously on the basis of this new knowledge. But using these new critiques, by someone now an outsider, to justify the initial assault is like saying the victim of an attempted rape provoked the rape when she sprayed mace at her assailant.

>As the House of Justice wrote me on >Feb. 8, 1998:
> "They sought to use the language, the occasions and the credibility of >scholarly activity to lend a counterfeit authority to a private enterprise >which was essentially ideological in nature and self-motivated in origin."

This sentence means absolutely nothing. It is obscurantist gobbledegook written by someone very anti-intellectual, very malicious and not very bright. 'Unduly vague' doesn't even come close! If this were a charge against a criminal in a U.S. judicial proceeding it would be laughed out of court.

I did not 'use' the language, 'occasions' (what does this mean--can't they learn *English*?), or 'credibility' (this also seems awkward) of academic scholarship. I *practiced* academic scholarship. I engaged my subject with the tools of analysis, contextualization, and the weighting of causality. I engaged in academic scholarship, in a sincere and frank search for the truth as I saw it (which I thought was what a Baha'i was *supposed* to do). I did this with regard to 19th century Iranian Baha'i history. I did it with regard to 20th century American. If I got something wrong, it would have been enough to present alternative evidence and analysis for my consideration. As an academic scholar, I am always open to the latter. Instead, I was presented with threats and demands I fall silent on pain of being shunned. How nice, gentle, loving, tolerant that was.

What does it mean that this so-called 'counterfeit' authority was being lent to an enterprise that was 'self-motivated?' I was sending email messages to friends. How could that not be 'self-motivated?' Which of you reading this has sent email messages to friends about a subject of interest to you in a way that was not 'self-motivated?' I fear that the word 'cult-like' leaps out from this phrase. Behavior cannot be 'self-motivated' in the Baha'i faith? Everything has to come from Central Direction, ala the Bolsheviks?

And how were my talisman@indiana.edu messages any more or less 'ideological' than the messages of anyone else who posted there, including the UHJ itself, which certainly at any one time has a collective 'ideology' (even though it shouldn't, and this is not its prerogative)? I'll bet you our friends in Haifa couldn't even *define* ideology in a way that made any social science sense. The real problem was not 'ideology' but 'ideas.' And the fact is that a majority on the UHJ (or maybe even a minority--the institution doesn't act in a rationalized fashion) didn't *like* my ideas, and they didn't want me sharing them publicly.

The problem is that my ideas, expressed as non-authoritative individual opinion, were none of their business. They are only authorized to legislate. They aren't historians, they aren't sociologists, and they aren't even theologians. Some of them are electrical engineers. If they had any sense whatsoever they would keep their opinions about things like professional history to themselves, because no one is interested in what some fundamentalist engineer thinks about history, regardless of what he's managed to get himself elected to. And because they couldn't debate my ideas, they took the creepy, lazy path and declared them heretical and tried to make them taboo. In doing this they only made themselves look ridiculous for all time. In a hundred years people will still be reading my book on Baha'u'llah. In a hundred years no one will have heard of any of the current House members.

>They go on to say:

>"Your own familiarity with these same persons' behaviour will have provided >you with ample illustration of the violence being done by their public and >private statements to Baha'u'llah's teachings,

O.K. Somebody give me a concrete example of some 'behavior' of mine that did 'violence' to Baha'u'llah's teachings any time in the period August 1972-April 1996. Anything at all. These Baha'i officials don't have the slightest idea what Baha'u'llah even stood for on most issues, and they reverse him whenever they find him inconvenient.

>which they profess to honour,

I did honor Baha'u'llah's teachings when I was a Baha'i. Someone should give me some evidence to the contrary. Some of the people these individuals in Haifa have promoted have been real sleazeballs, so who are they to stand in judgment of my profession of faith 1972-1996?

>and to the cause of scholarship, which they profess to serve.

I have spent my life in the cause of academic scholarship. I have never, ever, done violence to its methods, its integrity, or its findings. In fact, to agree to allow myself to be silenced or censored by the UHJ or NSA and to withhold from the public my research findings, as they insisted, would have been a very serious derogation of my professional duties and a betrayal of the public trust. These people don't have any respect for academic scholarship. They have never supported it in any way. They insist it be vetted (and therefore distorted and made dishonest). They have managed to throw out or alienate a majority of the Baha'i academics in Middle East studies who have dared actually pursue their profession and write something serious on Baha'i studies.

>We cannot separate method from spirit and character."

Again, the UHJ is not empowered to stand in judgment of the character of Baha'is. It is supposed to be leading Baha'is to build Mashriqu'l-Adhkars, according to 'Abdul-Baha. It is supposed to be doing major philanthropical and charitable work, according to Shoghi Effendi. It is supposed to legislate laws. It can only sanction actual behavior, not sincere non-authoritative expressions of individual conscience. This is scriptural. In fact, the UHJ has become a center of tyranny, of authoritarianism, of censorship, of repression, of imposed superstition and dogma. It has almost completely betrayed everything the Baha'i holy figures stood for. And it could not do that if there weren't some *very* serious flaws in the character of its members. Everyone should please pray for them, and for me.

cheers Juan Cole

Certainly, it stands out against the background of twentieth century poetry, also Polish poetry, which is agnostic or atheist. Yet the religious content of my poems is not the result of design by a believer; it grew out of my doubts, turmoil, and despair, as they searched for a form. If not for a strong heretical seasoning, the religious content would not have been there. Thus, my resistance to being squeezed into the rubric of "Catholic poet" was well founded."

Greetings, Frederick, from Ottawa.

Congratulations on the successful vote.
You have put an enormous amount of effort into this and you deserve a tremendous amount of appreciation.
You have my sincerest top wishes that this newsgroup will astound everyone in every beneficial way. May it have a remarkable and quite pleasing influence.

May this find you very well, and may the future amaze us by how well things turn out.

All the Best,
Michael

Actually, thanks for the suggestion. I'll send the RESULT in to srb right away, just to be sure they receive it.

Dear Mr. Hyman:

Since I have not seen the RESULT appear on soc.religion.bahai,
I am taking the advice of a news.groupie and sending you myself a copy of it. You may verify its authenticity on news.groups or news.announce.newgroups.

I'm sure people on soc.religion.bahai, having read the RFD and the CFV, would like to hear of the RESULT.

RESULT
unmoderated group talk.religion.bahai passes 218:63

There were 218 YES votes and 63 NO votes, for a total of 281 valid votes. There were 6 abstentions and 8 invalid ballots.

For a group to pass, YES votes must be at least 2/3 of all valid (YES and NO) votes. There must also be at least 100 more YES votes than NO votes.

A five day discussion period follows this announcement. If no serious allegations of voting irregularities are raised, the moderator of news.announce.newgroups will create the group shortly thereafter.

Newsgroups line:
talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

Voting closed at 23:59:59 UTC, 25 Dec 1998.

This vote was conducted by a neutral third party. Questions about the proposed group should be directed to the proponent.

RATIONALE: talk.religion.bahai

The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.

The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable to join discussions on alt.religion.bahai.

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Talk.religion.bahai fills the need for a fully open and universally accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. Postings may take any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. While this allows criticism, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbors, asking questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their question.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this newsgroup.

Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.

Cross-posting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers are encouraged to redirect follow-ups to reduce excessive cross-posting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected >from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.

END CHARTER.

>will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the >opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is >less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that >many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable

Dear friends,

I have continued the discussion of the Gnosis article with Mr. Paul Johnson on another list. I appears there were a number of misunderstandings. Besides being upset with my characterization of his religious background, Mr. Johnson believed I had compared his article to the National Enquirer and this prompted him to accuse me of backbiting. In fact I was comparing the National Enquirer to the discussions of community affairs that had gone on on Talisman, an assessment to which Mr. Johnson told me he agrees. He has since apologized to me. I would like to apologize to Mr. Johnson as well if I have misunderstood or misrepresented his spiritual journey in any way.
warmest,

Susan Maneck

Dear Mr. Glaysher:

Congratulations. Persistence pays off.

I am aware of the result of the TRB vote as one of the moderating team forwarded it to the moderators from another forum, for their information. The reason that the result has not been posted to soc.religion.bahai is that it has not yet been received as a submission for posting. The address bahai-faith@egroups.com is unknown to me.

If you would care to submit it I will post it. The address for submissions is:
bahai-faith@bccca.org. I suggest that you do not include the charter as this was already posted with the CFV and, as Baha'is believe in secret ballots, I will take posting the names of individual voters under advisement with the other moderators.

Our present policy is that only names and return addresses can be present in submitters' signatures.

Dear Mr. Hyman:

Since I have not seen the RESULT appear on soc.religion.bahai, I am taking the advice of a news.groupie and sending you myself a copy of it. You may verify its authenticity on news.groups or news.announce.newgroups.

I'm sure people on soc.religion.bahai, having read the RFD and the CFV, would like to hear of the RESULT.

RESULT
unmoderated group talk.religion.bahai passes 218:63

There were 218 YES votes and 63 NO votes, for a total of 281 valid votes. There were 6 abstentions and 8 invalid ballots.

For a group to pass, YES votes must be at least 2/3 of all valid (YES and NO) votes. There must also be at least 100 more YES votes than NO votes.

A five day discussion period follows this announcement. If no serious allegations of voting irregularities are raised, the moderator of news.announce.newgroups will create the group shortly thereafter.

Newsgroups line:

talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

Voting closed at 23:59:59 UTC, 25 Dec 1998.

This vote was conducted by a neutral third party. Questions about the proposed group should be directed to the proponent.

Proponent: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>

Proponent: Fran Baker <fran@crhc.uiuc.edu>

Votetaker: Dave Cornejo <dave@dogwood.com>

RATIONALE: talk.religion.bahai

The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.

The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable to join discussions on alt.religion.bahai.

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Talk.religion.bahai fills the need for a fully open and universally accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. Postings may take any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. While this allows criticism, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbors, asking questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their question.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this newsgroup.

Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.

Cross-posting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers are encouraged to redirect follow-ups to reduce excessive cross-posting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected >from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.

END CHARTER.

DISTRIBUTION:

In addition to the groups named in the Newsgroups: header, the CFV and the eventual RESULT posts will be mailed to these mailing lists:

Voting question & problems: Dave Cornejo <dave@dogwood.com>

Subject: FW: RESULT: talk.religion.bahai passes 218:63

Dear Mr. Cornejo:

I have been forwarded the results of the CFV for talk.religion.bahai, by Mr. Glaysher, one of the proponents. I have no problem with posting the results, but query posting the Rationale and the Charter, which have already been posted on srb, but were included with the results. I consider that posting how individuals voted is also questionable unless each voter's permission has been obtained. I have placed these matters under advisement with the rest of the moderating team, but I would like your views on the subject before we make a decision.

Many thanks,
Bill Hyman

RESULT
unmoderated group talk.religion.bahai passes 218:63

There were 218 YES votes and 63 NO votes, for a total of 281 valid votes. There were 6 abstentions and 8 invalid ballots.

For a group to pass, YES votes must be at least 2/3 of all valid (YES and NO) votes. There must also be at least 100 more YES votes than NO votes.

A five day discussion period follows this announcement. If no serious allegations of voting irregularities are raised, the moderator of news.announce.newgroups will create the group shortly thereafter.

Newsgroups line:
talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

Voting closed at 23:59:59 UTC, 25 Dec 1998.

This vote was conducted by a neutral third party. Questions about the proposed group should be directed to the proponent.

The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.

The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable to join discussions on alt.religion.bahai.

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this newsgroup.

The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.

END CHARTER.

In addition to the groups named in the Newsgroups: header, the CFV and the eventual RESULT posts will be mailed to these mailing lists:

I do not believe either one of us has the authority to delete the charter from the RESULT. It is part of the document and appears properly in each stage of the group formation process as regularly observed on Usenet. I am therefore sending you the original RESULT in a separate message to the address above.

>The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an >open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within >the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.

>The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather

unmoderated group talk.religion.bahai passes 218:63

There were 218 YES votes and 63 NO votes, for a total of 281 valid votes. There were 6 abstentions and 8 invalid ballots.

For a group to pass, YES votes must be at least 2/3 of all valid (YES and NO) votes. There must also be at least 100 more YES votes than NO votes.

A five day discussion period follows this announcement. If no serious allegations of voting irregularities are raised, the moderator of news.announce.newgroups will create the group shortly thereafter.

Newsgroups line:
talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

Voting closed at 23:59:59 UTC, 25 Dec 1998.

This vote was conducted by a neutral third party. Questions about the proposed group should be directed to the proponent.

The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.

The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable to join discussions on alt.religion.bahai.

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Talk.religion.bahai fills the need for a fully open and universally accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. Postings may take any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. While this allows criticism, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbors, asking questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their question.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this newsgroup.

Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.

>>There were 218 YES votes and 63 NO votes, for a total of 281 valid >>votes. There were 6 abstentions and 8 invalid ballots.
>>For a group to pass, YES votes must be at least 2/3 of all valid

>>RATIONALE: talk.religion.bahai
>>The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an >>open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within >>the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.
>>The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather >>than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and >>will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the >>opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is >>less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that >>many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable >>to join discussions on alt.religion.bahai.
>>
>>CHARTER: talk.religion.bahai
>>
>>All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, >>teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for >>discussion.
>>Talk.religion.bahai fills the need for a fully open and universally >>accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. Postings may take >>any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. While this allows >>criticism, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with >>their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbors, asking >>questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their >>question.
>>Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this >>newsgroup.
>>Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to >>start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on >>articles and threads written in more moderate terms.
>>
>>The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is >>prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, >>and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are >>prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not >>HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.
>>Cross-posting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers >>are encouraged to redirect follow-ups to reduce excessive >>cross-posting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected >>>from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.
>>
>>END CHARTER.

>Dear Mr. Cornejo:
>
>I have been forwarded the results of the CFV for talk.religion.bahai, by Mr.
>Glaysher, one of the proponents. I have no problem with posting the results, >but query posting the Rationale and the Charter, which have already been >posted on srb, but were included with the results. I consider that posting >how individuals voted is also questionable unless each voter's permission >has been obtained. I have placed these matters under advisement with the rest >of the moderating team, but I would like your views on the subject before we >make a decision.

>RATIONALE: talk.religion.bahai
>The newsgroup talk.religion.bahai is proposed to meet the need for an >open and unmoderated forum for discussion of the Baha'i Faith within >the structure of the Big 8 hierarchies.
>The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather >than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and >will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai the >opportunity to participate. It is noted that the alt.* hierarchy is >less well propagated than the talk.* hierarchy; this has meant that >many people who have voted YES on earlier proposals have been unable >to join discussions on alt.religion.bahai.
>
>CHARTER: talk.religion.bahai
>
>All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, >teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for >discussion.
>Talk.religion.bahai fills the need for a fully open and universally >accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. Postings may take >any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. While this allows >criticism, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with >their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbors, asking >questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their >question.
>Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this >newsgroup.
>Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to >start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on >articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

>The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is >prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, >and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are >prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not >HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.
>Cross-posting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers >are encouraged to redirect follow-ups to reduce excessive >cross-posting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected >from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.

Greetings, Frederick.

Thanks for your comment.

Well, whether others say anything nice or not, the credit is yours and the newsgroup has the potential to exert a beneficial influence, a bit like a free press in a totalitarian state. Personally, I'm pretty busy with many other things, and doubt I'll post much. Yet, I hope the free flow of information will be very helpful.

Thanks again for such persistence in the face of such adversity.

May this find you with everything going well, and may the future be ever better than what it replaces.

All the Best,
Michael

talk.religion.bahai is an unmoderated newsgroup which passed its vote for creation by 218:63 as reported in news.announce.newgroups on 11 Jan 1999.

For your newsgroups file:
talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

The charter, culled from the vote result announcement:

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Talk.religion.bahai fills the need for a fully open and universally accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. Postings may take any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. While this allows criticism, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbors, asking questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their question.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette in their use of this
newsgroup.

Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

The posting of articles not relevant to the Baha'i Faith is prohibited. Large ASCII graphics, large binaries, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely personal or commercial nature are prohibited. To facilitate viewing in news readers that are not HTML-capable, HTML-formatted postings are strongly discouraged.

Cross-posting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers are encouraged to redirect follow-ups to reduce excessive cross-posting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected >from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.

Subject: Re: fw 2nd Juan Cole on mass teaching Date: 1/19/1999 3:47 PM Eastern Standard Time
From: Smaneck
Message-id: <19990119154759.01069.00001016@ng-fi1.aol.com>

DR Cole writes:

>>1) I have never said that the motive or even a motive of the NSA in >>closing down the mass teaching in the South in the early '70s was 'racism.'

But then goes on to say of one of the members of that institution:

>the interviewing I've done >>with people who knew her leads me strongly to suspect that her quietism >>acted as a screen for discomfort with uppity Blacks.

Does anyone but me see a contradiction between those two statements? Why would one even bring this into the discussion if one did not feel it impacted the NSA's decision?

But I can do no better here than to quote the statement of one Baha'i on arb:

"The implication of racism seems abundantly clear to me. For someone to halt the influx of membership because the race of the people entering the organization "challenged their system of control mechanisms" is the very definition of racism."

As evidence that the NSA was concerned with their re-election prospects Juan writes:

>>2) Bill Davis in one of his interrogations of the Dialogue editors in >>spring, 1988, specifically said that the NSA had been worried that 'A >>Modest Proposal' might come across to the delegates as a critique of the >>sitting NSA's record (enrollments had fallen off drastically and >>virtually >>no money was being put into teaching), and cost some of them election.

My recollection is that Bill Davis' concern was not articulated in this way.
He believed that the desire to distribute the paper to the delegates represented an attempt to manipulate the elections. From the standpoint of the NSA there was concern that this represented a form of campaigning forbidden in the Baha'i electoral process.

>>Only the poor naifs who have never actually had anything serious to do with >>Wilmette are under the impression that no NSA member cares if he or she is >>reelected.

Not the issue. The issue is whether such personal considerations, whether or not they might exist, swayed the decisions of the NSA such that they would have attempted to call a halt to mass teaching in order to stop an influx of black believers who might shake the status quo. Even if the NSA members were as enamored with their position as Dr. Cole would have us believe, such an action would have been totally illogical. Dr. Cole knows as well as I that people brought in through mass teaching efforts rarely vote in Baha'i elections. Not in the US not elsewhere. As we've seen even ex-Baha'is like Larry who had seen the aftermath of mass teaching projects were prepared to attest that this is so. India is the area with the most experience with mass teaching. Both Dr. Cole and myself have conducted research in India so we are both well informed of the situation there. In a few decades the size of the Baha'i community grew from a few thousand to millions. Along with this increase in numbers was a fast shift in the demographic makeup of the community. Hitherto it had been made up of middle class urbanites mostly of Zoroastrian and Muslim background, with a few Hindu intellectuals. As a result of mass teaching the majority of Baha'is are now of Hindu background, often tribals or untouchables. This vast demographic shift seems to have little effect at the level of administration, where things still tend to be dominated by these same urbanite Baha'is often of Irani Zoroastrian extraction, who controlled things previously.

>Some of these elected officials are drawing substantial money >>out of the faith.

I believe only four members of the current NSA are drawing any kind of salary. There were even fewer in the early seventies, which is the period we are talking about.

>The men all think they have a shot at getting elected to >>the UHJ, and moving up to salaries in the large six figures as well as >>enormous power in a community of 3 million.

Oh my, *all* the men think they have a shot at this? I'd sure like to see the evidence for this. Remember, since we are talking about "all the men" we have to have more evidence than an anecdotal story about one member.
Also, I'd like to see the evidence that members of the House of Justice receive six digit salaries.

>>3) I have never called 'the Baha'i faith' a 'cult' globally.

On July 31, 1996 Dr. Cole wrote me the following: "This thing is a totalitarian cult, Susan; it destroys any thinking person who becomes active in it. Be careful." The title of Dr. Cole's article in the JSSR was to have been "Sects, Cults and Asian Religions: The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1996." I'm sure I can find other instances of this, if I had the time to look.

>But using these new critiques, by someone now an outsider, to >>justify the initial assault is like saying the victim of an attempted rape >>provoked the rape when she sprayed mace at her assailant.

Not a good analogy. A better one would be this: if a woman accuses another person of rape and then goes on to tell fantastic and impossible stories about her so-called assailant, how credible is her witness to the original crime?

Dr. Cole has given us here an example of his "scholarship" where the flimsiest evidence was being adduced, as Bruce points out, clearly to further a political agenda. From what I've seen of the Talisman archives, what Dr. Cole is doing now he was doing then, howbeit somewhat less hysterically.

>>What does it mean that this so-called 'counterfeit' authority was being >>lent to an enterprise that was 'self-motivated?'

It means people were using their authority as scholars to try and remake the Faith in their own image. Seems pretty clear to me, although perhaps it would not have six months earlier. The House of Justice had told me in their July 20, 1997 letter that I was being handed a crock of manure. I didn't believe them. So Baha'u'llah spent the next six months rubbing my nose in it. Eventually, I got the "whiff."

> In a hundred years people will still be reading >>my book on Baha'u'llah. In a hundred years no one will have heard of any >>of the current House members

Modest, aren't we? :-^)

>>Again, the UHJ is not empowered to stand in judgment of the character of >>Baha'is

It is empowered to stand in judgment, period. According to the Will and Testament:

"Whatsoever they decide is of God. Whoso obeyeth him not, neither obeyeth them, hath not obeyed God; whoso rebelleth against him and against them hath rebelled against God; whoso opposeth him hath opposed God; whoso contendeth with them hath contended with God; whoso disputeth with him hath disputed with God; whoso denieth him hath denied God; whoso disbelieveth in him hath disbelieved in God; whoso deviateth, separateth himself and turneth aside from him hath in truth deviated, separated himself and turned aside from God. May the wrath, the fierce indignation, the vengeance of God rest upon him!"

"Unto the Most Holy Book every one must turn, and all that is not expressly recorded therein must be referred to the Universal House of Justice. That which this body, whether unanimously or by a majority doth carry, that is verily the truth and the purpose of God Himself. Whoso doth deviate therefrom is verily of them that love discord, hath shown forth malice, and turned away from the Lord of the Covenant."

Juan writes:

>It can only sanction actual behavior, not >>sincere non-authoritative expressions of individual conscience.

However, 'Abdul-Baha writes:

"To none is given the right to put forth his own opinion or express his particular conviction. All must seek guidance and turn unto the Center of the Cause and the House of Justice. And he that turneth unto whatsoever else is indeed in grievous error."

Now as we have already discussed "opinion" in this case largely revolves around expressing opinions in matters of Baha'i law which go against the interpretations of the Guardian and the rulings of the House of Justice. It does not prohibit the expression of individual views (nazar) in general. But in many instances Dr. Cole was engaging in the former rather than the latter. In the case of the review he had been actively seeking to persuade people to boycott the review process. In other cases he had been encouraging agitation against various decisions on the part of the House of Justice. I submit that such behavior clearly constitutes *ra'i* in the explicit sense that it was intended in the Will and Testament.

Talk.religion.bahai is now available. You may have to reset or redownload the list or file of newsgroups from your ISP in order to subscribe to it. Since the purpose of the this mailing list was to help those unable to follow the discussion on alt.religion.bahai to do so until trb was formed, it is no longer needed.

I will be deleting it as a viable mailing list in just a few minutes.

If any of you wish to continue it, you have everyone's address above with which to do so. Please do not include me.

Juan,

Let me add again that Maneck is still trying to get herself appointed, as I've mentioned, on AOL as the replacement for Mark Foster who disappeared more than several months ago. AOL has over 14 MILLION subscribers, and a lot of them have to check in on the Bahai Forums since the Faith is listed on the main menus along with Xianity, Judaism, etc. There was a hugh influx in August onto alt.religion.bahai when I subscribed to AOL and a lot of AOL people voted YES this time around.

There are no URLs for newsgroups. Usenet is a separate system from the Web. www.dejanews.com is the major archive for it; everything else is partial, e.g., www.reference.com.

Hope you persevere and stick around, Juan. You're needed.
After two years of constant warfare, pretty much alone, I'm trying to phase myself out....

Juan,

Okay, then, you're using Netscape. Click on Options at the top of the screen; then Mail and News Preferences; Servers; News (NNTP) Server is where the name of the U of M news server or whatever one you're using goes. Mine is news.newsguy.com

News RC Directory there should be a path on your hard drive for saving to:

d:\netscape\news

Click OK

Your menus might be slightly different with the version of Netscape you're using but essentially the same most likely.

Click on File; Add Newsgroup; enter talk.religion.bahai and see what happens. You may have to download the list of new newsgroups in order to find it since the old one won't have it.

Ask a tech person at U of M what the name of the newsreader is. There must be one people are using there somewhere.

Good luck!

Fred

"It appears that my oeuvre is Christian and even (practically) irreproachable according to the criteria of Catholic theology. I am not so sure, though I like to hear this. Certainly, it stands out against the background of twentieth century poetry, also Polish poetry, which is agnostic or atheist. Yet the religious content of my poems is not the result of design by a believer; it grew out of my doubts, turmoil, and despair, as they searched for a form. If not for a strong heretical seasoning, the religious content would not have been there. Thus, my resistance to being squeezed into the rubric of "Catholic poet" was well founded."

Netscape will make posting much easier and faster. Don't give up on it though it may take some effort to get it correctly configured. Work on it for a while and then let me know if you can't get it connected.

A thought: Explain to me what Collabra is - a software version of Netscape or a newgroup service on its website? If the later, you may have to ask the webmaster to add it to the list of available newsgroups. See below:

Sometime shortly after the end of the 5-day discussion period, David Lawerence will send out the newgroup msg. He will repeat it after 1 week and 1 month. Many ISPs will automatically add the group based on this msg. Some will not. If your ISP doesn't have the group shortly, I suggest that you ask the newsmaster there to add it (Try news@isp.net, or newsmaster@isp.net) Ask politely. Include the msg ID of the results posting, and of the newgroup msg. Good luck.

Mr. Glaysher decided, on his own, not to submit to srb when his signature was truncated for containing a web-site address which had pointers to CB material. I had the privilege of truncated that first signature (after consultation with the other moderators). He accused me in other forums of forgery. It was mainly due to him that the moderators decided not to allow signatures to have more than the name and e-mail address. Mr. Glaysher has been able to post to srb at any time he so desired as long as he kept within our charter and current policy. This is still the case.

Fred....you and I have talked about this and I've talked to the Moderators @ soc.religion.bahai as well. But I see that this is your torch, either I'm amazed that in this world you can't find better issues to spend your efforts on that not helping Baha'is have access to CBs.

To reiterate what I thought was a made point:

1. Your signature provides links to groups that are frequented and supported by Covenant Breakers.
2. SRB will post your messages if you remove those links.
3. You won't remove those links, SRB has no problem with anything you say, they just don't want links to CB sites.
4. If you are a Baha'i, and you read the writings, then you should know that Baha'u'llah wishes us all to eschew the ungodly. Those that have been declared Covenant Breakers are pretty much the definition of this category. I don't care if their case is made strongly or not, or if you think they've been wrongly 'accused' or not. The choice of association is yours, the choice of declaring one a Covenant Breaker is not. If you become a Baha'i you are agreeing to certain principals and certain restrictions. If you are unwilling to be a Baha'i then don't, there is nothing forcing you.

What is my opinion on this?

Why I agree with your belief on freedom and the freedom of speech, I think your efforts are misplaced. From the communications I've had with you I think your perception of the Faith and supposed suppression in the Faith is warped. You can feel any way you wish, you can do anything you wish. SRB is a MODERATED newsgroup and as such reserves the right to not allow any posts that they see fit, just as any other moderated newsgroup, just as I moderate the mail-lists that I administrate. Move onto something else.

Greetings:

Censorship must be eradicated.

It is strongly recommended that all posts appearing in the moderated newsgroup soc.religion.bahai be downloaded and then posted in the unmoderated talk.religion.bahai so that they can be discussed freely.

In freedom,

Jai Maharaj

A few comments:

Mark Towfiq, a member of the "BCCA," the Bahai Computer and Communication Association, the far right wing of the Universal House of Justice online, campaigned against the 1st proposal for talk.religion.bahai: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Towfiq.htm>
BCCA at <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/BCCA.txt>

Bill Hyman vowed as early as August 1997 to censor me and is a notorious "moderator" of soc.religion.bahai: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb29.htm>

Albert Verbrugh is also a "moderator" of soc.religion.bahai; William Collins is a Bahai "administrator" in South Africa. Robert Moldenhauer, Graham Sorenson, and Tom Hodges are extremely rigid minds whose fanatical outpourings may be read in my BCCA archive opposing the 2nd interest poll: <https://209.185.180.230/~FG/Bahai-Discuss-Archive.txt>

This document available in a conveniently highlighted version: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/NOvoters3rd.htm>

Some might wish to compare this to the Annotated NO voters for the 2nd interest poll: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/NOvoters.htm>

Dr. Maharaj:

Thanks for responding. Your suggestion sounds like a good idea. Would you be willing to repost them? I'm afraid I'm very busy with talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, and the AOL Bahai Message Boards.

If you can regularly or once in a while, you might mark each subject as "SRB: " so people can distinguish them from those originally posted to talk.religion.bahai.

Thanks again.

Greetings:

Certainly, I will, but please post an announcement every few days on talk.religion.bahai that participants are invited to bring censored discussions out into the open by cutting-and-pasting posts from soc.religion.bahai into talk.religion.bahai and thus starting unmoderated threads. This technique works if several persons take this measure! It eventually results in the moderated newsgroup dying down.

Best wishes,

Jai Maharaj

Mr. Glaysher:
This submission will not be posted to srb as we do not accept cross posting.
I considered advertising maillist.com to the srb readership against our charter as it has been posting CB material. Your web page address has already been posted, and due to negative comments from srb readers I will not be posting it again.
All your submissions, which meet the standards of our charter will be posted, but your advertising will not.

Was the real purpose of your submission to srb to advertise your e-mail addresses, or to submit a quotation of Abdul-Baha? If the latter, your goal was attained - so why are you complaining?

Hmmm I re-read this in another area - and whilst this whole thing may seem rather petty - I can see where Fred is coming from (and believe me, anyone who searches the archives will see that Fred and I have occasionally had our "moments" - I am not his greatest fan (sorry Fred)). The thing that concerns me is this:
>>Mr. Glaysher:
>>
>>This submission will not be posted to srb as we do not accept cross >posting.
AFAIK I've cross-posted before and gotten away with it, I was not aware this was a "rule". (Must admit Fred, sometimes it's a bit much to see the same post on every newsgroup I try to read), but notwithstanding that, this seems rather flimsy as I have seen SRB posters cross-post, and I've done it myself from time to time.
I can understand rules against someone spamming every newsgroup under the sun, but I don't think Fred has quite reached THAT level yet.
>>I considered advertising maillist.com to the srb readership against our >>charter as it has been posting CB material.
Firstly, there is nothing in Fred's sig. file that mentions CB material. If THAT were a genuine excuse all Baha'is should be banned from the internet because CB material exists on it! The fact that on an open list CB material *can* be posted is hardly a valid reason for snipping an entire sig. file that merely mentions the list - *not* the CB material. One might as well ban any header that says AOL because some CBers have AOL accounts.
Not to mention that this one is WAY out there for another reason. I've never seen *other* SRB posters have their signature files snipped left right and centre, not to mention that Fred's sig. file is hardly a huge advertisement. Bill you are giving Fred fuel for his fire. I used to think Fred was paranoid - now I am not so sure! Justice *is* the Best Beloved of all things remember, regardless if it means you have to occasionally allow Fred to post to SRB.
You may not like what Fred has to say, but purposefully snipping his sig.file to try and make it as difficult as possible for people to *hear* what he has to say, comes across at best, petty ... at worst, confirmation of his accusations.
Anyway here is Fred's file:

I'd be interested in seeing what these complaints are. I must admit I find

For my two cents Bill, and I normally have a fairly high regard for SRB moderation, the more you try and silence Fred, the more he will object, struggle, and a larger issue will be made. If he really has nothing of import to say - then air it and let it dissolve - this suppression only feeds fuel to the fire and makes people like *me* sympathetic to what he has to say about SRB.

I haven't been on that the other Bahai newsgroup in several months, and I only read over the posts briefly when I was there. Why were you banned from posting? Are you a Bahai? I'm not an LSA member or anything like that, but I am a Bahai. I still have my card and I get my newspaper from National, at least. There are some issues I'm trying to resolve in my mind, so I'm just curious as to what happened on the newsgroup.

Sincerely,

Angela Shortt

Dear paranoid Freddie

I read all about the new discussion list on soc.religion.bahai.

Why don't you check the list before sending out your inaccurate emails?

While Baha'u'llah enjoined Bahais to hear "the midnight sighing of the

I believe soc.religion.bahai has violated its charter and obligations to Usenet so thoroughly and the evidence of it is so overwhelming that the best interests of Bahais and non-Bahais would be served by removing soc.religion.bahai from Usenet. Usenet provides for this process. While I cannot be the driving force behind such an effort, I would support and vote for it.

I believe a number of news.groupies would support the removal of soc.religion.bahai for the above reasons.

The BCCA's complicity in the two years of opposition to talk.religion.bahai is indisputable and were involved in attempting to defeat the proposal once again this third time through putting together the same carefully calculated NO vote that succeeded the 2nd time in scuttling the proposal.

Their vow that "steps have been taken to prevent his [FG's] posting to any forum for which we have responsibility [including soc.religion.bahai] and repeated interference in the interest polls violates the duties and obligations owed to Usenet:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Towfiq.htm>

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/BCCAvows.txt>

To all fair-minded observers, who scrutinize the RESULT with an impartial eye, it should be clear that Bahais did not vote for nor pass the talk.religion.bahai proposal. It was passed by mostly non-Bahais who could no longer tolerate the pervasive fanaticism and intolerance of the soc.religion.bahai "moderators."

Along these lines it has been suggested to me that people wishing to discuss a thread on soc.religion.bahai should repost it to talk.religion.bahai, perhaps marking each one in the Subject as "SRB:" so that all topics may be openly and freely discussed. Overtime, this should further ameliorate the censorship that has descended on srb and on the discussion of the Faith.

This is the usual anti-intellectualism one hears from the literalists among Bahais, who of course are running the lemonade stand.... Real leaders wouldn't worry about the kind of things Michael mentions below but respect the diversity of human opinion and temperament....

Over 600 Bahais voted NO on the first proposal. Roughly 240 voted YES for srb in 1995. Nevertheless, there are enough votes to rmgroup soc.religion.bahai, and I believe it should be done in the best interests of the Faith. Bill Hyman and his little band of fanatics has revealed all too appallingly that the dangers of fundamentalism exist in the Bahai Faith too.... No one should control who or what gets a hearing, and Abdul-Baha thought so....

Far from censoring srb, rmgrouping it would be preserving the gains made here with trb and assuring that all the literalists have no alternative but to learn to tolerate other opinions and religions, such as Islam....

It's quite clear that the BCCA runs soc.religion.bahai and has played a role all along in trying to defeat trb. A religion should not control a newsgroup, newsgroupies agree, and, I believe, will help to remove it....

Subject: Response to Windmill

Dear Fred:

Do you really think that you will get much support for your current goal to have Usenet unclassify srb? Many Baha'is and non-Baha'is like a moderated channel. It is so much more warm and friendly. I have found that even unmoderated Baha'i channels are less polite than srb due to the moderators being there to make sure that submissions comply to the charter.

I suggest you find a more realistic windmill.

I was the only member of the moderating team to vote for or against the formation of trb. The moderators of srb did not discuss it and my vote was purely personal. You admit that it was mostly non-Baha'is that caused its passage. Doesn't that tell you something? I voted against it because I was a subscriber to bahai-faith@coollist.com, a mail-list you started when your previous bid for trb failed. I did not like the constant bickering, most of it yours. Without moderators it is hard to stop. trb's charter is very similar to srb's, the main difference being that srb can enforce its charter. It brings out the best in people.

Unfortunately there is no local newsgroup server here and trb does not have e-mail mirroring otherwise I would subscribe to trb to see how it is turning out. I will visit it on the archives occasionally.

I think you're right. The problem comes in that srb is controlled by an appointed body, the BCCA or Bahai Computer and Communication Association, directly installed by the Bahai administrative order. Think about that: a newsgroup CONTROLLED by a religious organization. The BCCA has been central to the efforts to defeat trb all along. Proof of this can be found in their statement to me that "steps have been taken to prevent his posting to any forum for which we have responsibility" during the 2nd poll when many people began to support the idea of trb. One such forum they control is soc.religion.bahai though Bahais often lie about it and deny it.
See <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/BCCAvows.txt>

Far be it here from the oppressed becoming the oppressors; rather, this oppressed one would like to see a new world order in which others will not be likewise oppressed. That they can be shunted off to trb would be to permit indignities that are still transgressions of the basic openness of Usenet, committed by a religious body exploiting a free system of communication.

There can be no doubt that the Bahai Universal House of Justice itself has condoned the actions of the BCCA and soc.religion.bahai.

Such travesties will only continue while srb exists.

Subject: Re: Baha'u'llah's Tablet of Maq̣sud, on human unity, pt. 3

Juan,

At the outset I concede I'm unqualified to discuss the linguistic subtleties of Farsi and balk to even mention I was once many years ago a mediocre student of the language at the University of Michigan, retaining now next to nothing of the tongue, having learnt then very little of it.... With that plea for mercy, here goes:

>The 'station of learning' >or maqa:m-i ta'li:m is a reference to the entire range of learning, religious >and secular.

It seems to me the "received" translation also suggests the broad meaning; at least, I've always read it broadly....

>I think the phrase, "The Absolute Truth has taken nothing for himself" is >yet another proof-text for Baha'u'llah's opposition to the idea of theocracy.

> That is, God wants nothing of the world for himself or his religion, and his >religion is not to attempt to rule. God only wants the human soul for >himself.

You seem to neglect Baha'u'llah's passages relating to the creation of an organizational structure of some type. Metaphysically speaking, I agree with you.

> Baha'u'llah argues here for all human beings feeling themselves as 'one >soul' regardless of their backgrounds or beliefs, and he underlines that this >spiritual unity involves *kindness* and *compassion* toward all. It is not a >regimented unity imposed on individuals, but a voluntary unity that comes out >of a sense of God's spiritual power and an emulation of his tenderness and >mercy toward everyone.

"Regimented unity imposed": Your referent is clear; I would argue Baha'u'llah Himself does foreshadow this type of development in many tablets.... Given the nature of the human being, which is not capable of fundamental change, a teaching I would argue of Baha'u'llah himself, it only stands to reason....

> For "the clerics of this age" (`ulama:-yi `as.r ) the official translation >gives: "the learned and worldly-wise men of this age." This rendering is not >only erroneous but extremely misleading, since the Arabic word `ulama:' in >'Worldly-wise men' would have been something like da:nishmanda:n. And there >is no parallelism in the original Persian. Only the `ulama' are mentioned, >and in an unflattering manner.

At what point historically does the "official" translation suppress the word Ulama? Does a translation exist of this passage prior to the publication of the Tablets of Baha'u'llah in 1978? The anti-intellectual spin of "the learned and worldly-wise men of this age" has an obviously cynical usefulness in Bahai circles; many will admit having seen it put to such uses.... E.g., against people on Talisman, the Bahai Encyclopedia, Dialogue, etc....

>This point is important, because Baha'u'llah is wishing, in the original that >the `ulama'/clerics as a social class *allow* free investigation of his >religion. If that happened, he says, *and* if human beings discovered love and >unity, then the true meaning of liberty (hurriyyat) would become apparent.

Right here at this point is where the literalists may intervene and object. What a strange perverting of Baha'u'llah's own concerns.... Incidentally, I've always thought highly of your reading of the passage on liberty versus license.

>If we turn this around, we may conclude that he believed that people were >being prevented from discovering the meaning of liberty a) by the Muslim >clergy of that time and b) by a lack of appreciation for the need for human >recognition of the true nature of liberty. . . . He is *advocating* liberty, >and seems to me to be taking clear sides in the culture wars of the early >1880s.

My wife and I have often derisively referred to the "Bahai wars" over the last few years....

>Here is a case where I think the official translation turns the meaning of >the passage on its head, implying that Baha'u'llah is denouncing the notables >and intellectuals (men of the world) who were advocating liberty at that denouncing >the reactionary ulama or Muslim clergy, it is immediately clear that he was >*siding* with the pro-democracy notables (though perhaps admonishing them >against undue factionalism and rancor).

To what extent do you believe the Bahai administration has made a calculated effort to obscure such aspects of Baha'u'llah's Writings? It has, I believe, often been my praise of such references and dimensions of his or Abdul-Baha's thought that has brought about the frenzied opposition of the fundamentalists. They're very threatened by this kind of reading of Baha'u'llah's Writings; i.e., recognizing their blatant support for freedom, liberty, and democracy.

>In this >context of Muslim reformist parliamentarism, and resistance to it by >colonially minded Europeans who manifested their superiority by attacking >'fanatical' Islam in the press and by occupying Muslim lands, Baha'u'llah's >Baha'u'llah to begin by criticizing Muslim clerics for preventing the people >from appreciating "liberty" and at the same time to criticize those who >attacked Islam, situates him in the camp of Muslim modernism.

Can you speculate on why it appears so many Iranian Bahais and others have ended up in such a fanatical mindset? Why have they joined ranks with Khomeini?

Translating Baha'u'llah:

Interesting use of the word "hypocrisy" in this passage. It's certainly been my experience of life, Bahai included....

What tragedy. It makes me remember Robert Hayden's lines:

"Oh, what a world we make, oppressor and oppressed."

Life has left me little time for the last few years. I intend now to

Yes, it would depend on the individual; however, I've never

I take exception with Juan here. ISOLATION is highly characteristic of the Bahai Faith. I would not describe it as "very mild." Pioneering is certainly used to skim off many problem personalities by sending them out to the frontier, as it were. In my opinion, DAILY Bahai life is highly structured to create psychological ISOLATION which thereby increases the control the authorities have over such persons.
This is a MAJOR factor in Bahai community life that needs to be recognized and discussed much more. The whole battle against trb has been an attempted to keep Bahais ISOLATED from others' views and typifies much of what I am referring to.

Many Bahais very much have a cult-like mentality in this regard.
I've witnessed it in several different Bahai "communities" in two countries.

Including democracy, the "West," anything the Iranians running the Bahai Faith disapprove of. It occurs to me that the most ISOLATED Bahais are indeed the poor Iranians clinging to their derision of America and all of the above.

I agree Bahais are not extreme in this regard. Moderation

"Doctrines": It would have to be the covenant and the fanatical intrepretation given to it by the zealots whipping others with it...
Much evidence on this point has appeared online during the two years of discussion for trb.

The struggle over talk.religion.bahai certainly provides overwhelming evidence of this. It should be noted how the "administrators" use and hide behind stooges and lackies to accomplish their dirty work. The BCCA has especially been used this way by the UHJ.

I'm glad Juan has brought the "American" Bahai, a piece of propaganda trash I unsubscribed to 2 and half years ago out of disgust with the ever-worsening fanaticism and banality of the thing. I was shocked to receive a letter questioning my basic "loyalty" to the covenant and Baha'u'llah when I had merely asked that I not receive it anymore.... Clearly, it serves other

I'm not so confident as Juan. While I agree all of the above corruption takes place in the Bahai Faith, I doubt it can be remedied. I often expect it only to worsen or continue.

Business is good as it is; why risk changing it? What would be the motivation?

Here's Ruletherod's response to me regarding Susan's slanders and false accusations:

No, the statement is incorrect, as I told Susan. But the mistake is mine because I was caught unprepared (she sent me an IM), when she asked me, and I couldn't remember where exactly I'd been before settling with the Baha'i AOL boards. Susan said she'd be prepared to apologize for the mistake (after I corrected her) as she seemed to be facing some deadline, hence the hurry on her part at the time.

You can disregard the statement as it presently stands. I did recall, moments after she signed off, that I did visit the kind of moderated (censored) Baha'i website in question--and I quickly e-mailed Susan with the correction. I told her that I was only interested in being honest and I wasn't interested in "stabbing" you in the back.

I hope this clears this up for you. Although my visit to the censored website was brief (forgive me for forgetting the name and the people involved--I haven't looked for my records from last summer/fall), my postings were censored and I complained about it to two moderators overseeing the site (in a series of e-mails). But Susan felt my description of the site (in the end) did support your assertions--even though she disagreed with your strategy.

Best wishes, as always

Subject: Re: The Bahai Technique

During the last year and a half, a number of observers have noted several common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

FG, May 12, 1992:

"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:

"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."

FG, June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"

K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:

"If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty] were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not character assassination by innuendo, what is?"

Gibro28W, October 12, 1998:

"In summary, the biggest problem, as I see it, is that most Baha'is don't take criticism seriously--they tune it out as "negative" or "harmful to spiritual growth." This selfish attitude is very stupid. First of all, Baha'is entice people to join them. When they do, they indoctrinate them until they think like the group. But as soon as a red flare of doubt goes up in the convert's mind, they're cordoned off by the group and reminded of their "spiritual" obligations in the name of Baha'u'llah or the "Covenant." If left unresolved and doubt gives vent to prolonged criticism, the convert is sent packing or is kicked out. What we have here is a broken family that had failed to truly listen to the needs of its members in the first place."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb73.htm>

Barthaman on September 14, 1998:

"Baha'i dissenters, more or less, are wounded souls abandoned by their fathers, so-to-speak. They have been cast out and dismissed or shunned without having had a fair hearing. Consider their pain when the rest of their "family" dismisses them too."

Can you know what it's like to be accused of heresy and shunned following a sincere intellectual conflict (inspired by doubt)--after you've sacrificed years in devoted service to your religion? Can you comprehend their sense of betrayal and injustice? This is why disillusioned believers leave their religions each year--while some still hang around, banging on the door now and then, demanding a refund for their lost youth. In time they will have to move on, however, writing the Baha'i Faith off as another lesson in fraud. Mock these people all you want--but for the grace of God, the next dissenter could be you. Don't be too confident, my friend."

Anyone interested in this faith should take the time to question some of the Bahi members. This is just my opinion, but, I have found a lot of the Bahi membership completely change colors when you call into question any concern you have.
I have been harassed, bullied, even had rocks thrown at me by so-called bahi's. There "words" are very attractive to smart sensitive people looking to come to turns with a lot of today's spiritual questions, but when you dig a little deeper a very self protective cult emerges.
I'm just saying BE CAREFUL.

Some of the passages may be merely a matter of the individual translator's taste, but I would have to say the passage

>>"the clerics of this age" (`ulama:-yi `as.r ) the official translation >>gives: "the learned and worldly-wise men of this age."

was deliberately given this ideological spin; it's too far of a stretch or abuse of the original text to have been only a linguistic choice of synonyms, which this isn't even close to.... In this one revealing passage, published for the first time apparently in 1978 in TOB, the fanaticism of the Bahai ulama asserts its crippling control of Baha'u'llah's Revelation....

(I don't think some of the passages we are discussing had ever been >translated before TOB). It seems to me very odd to translate the word >in a 19th century Persian Tablet as anything but "Muslim clerics." It is small
'ulama'

I don't see how the conclusion can be escaped. Every pronouncement demonstrates that the more liberal, self-evident, and enlightened side of the Writings mean less and less with every passing year....

It seems this way to me too. In the Star of the West Abdul-Baha is very much progressively learning more about the West and benefitting from his contact with it at all levels. He clearly, consciously incorporates much from that experience. The party line has been to resolutely deny any of the figures learnt anything FROM the West--all is revelation and hikmat....

>> Can you speculate on why it appears so many Iranian Bahais
>> and others have ended up in such a fanatical mindset? Why >> have they joined ranks with Khomeini?

>I'm not comfortable ethnicizing the issue of theocracy.

Juan, all crude racial insinuations aside, the Bahai Faith is dominated by one racial group--it's indisputable, and we all know it's true.... To fail to take account of that dominance, leading often to abuse, would prevent an objective assessment of how decisions are often made behind the facade of peace and unity....

Many Baha'is have >authoritarian personalities, regardless of ethnicity, and theocracy seems to >appeal to them. Horace Holley, a WASP, was very much like that. It is very >odd that Baha'u'llah's extensive disavowals of any desire for theocracy, >`Abdul-Baha's careful erection of walls of separation between religion and >state, and Shoghi Effendi's admonition that the Baha'i administration should >never be allowed to supersede the machinery of state, should all have been >shouldered aside by a zealous desire for theocracy. I can't explain it.

I agree with you that there are many Bahais of other racial backgrounds who have totalitarian personalities. No dispute there. The fact remains that the Bahai Faith came out of the Iranian culture and has brought and retained much of the debilitating debris from that milieu. I would cite the common Iranian racist mentality against the West and America, etc.... Any experienced and intelligently sensitive Bahai ought to be able to think of many examples....

The evidence demonstrating the collusion of the BCCA with Bahai fundamentalists to undermine the support for talk.religion.bahai during the 2nd interest poll is overwhelming.

It should obvious to fair-minded people that Bahais like Mr. Schaut are very, very afraid of the evidence are indulging in slander techniques against me. Please be sure to read or skim through the brief 33k file of my pleas to the BCCA that they intervene on Bahai-Discuss to prevent the fanatics from once again disrupting an orderly interest poll. The brief Samplers should also be looked at and will give you a taste of what the 1 megabyte file of messages from Bahai-Discuss have to say about talk.religion.bahai....

The St. Louis Assembly lost $10,000 in a similar scam by its "Treasurer." The NSA installed cameras to spy on its employees at the National Center because so much money was disappearing....
Nary a word in the illustrious "American" Bahai....

The Bahai Faith has had its Jonestowns.... The murder of Dr. Daniel Jordan remains unsolved. Given the atmosphere of oppression and deceit, I continue to believe it quite possible that it was, as several other Bahais last summer independently acknowledged had occurred to them, an "inside job."

It should be obvious to most observers that the Bahai fundamentalists and fanatics who have been caught attempting to intimidate, blackball, bully, oppress, terrorize Bahais and non-Bahais through backchannel email communication are now frantic to suppress the evidence of their despicable, self-righteous deeds....

If they lived up to the Writings of Baha'u'llah in the first place, they wouldn't have anything to hide. I encourage anyone who receives such threats and hate mail as I've received in the past to create a website and post it online where the truth about such Bahai zealots can be read by any truth-seeking person:

Sometime shortly after the end of the 5-day discussion period, David Lawrence will send out the newgroup msg. He will repeat it after 1 week and 1 month. Many ISPs will automatically add the group based on this msg. Some will not. If your ISP doesn't have the group shortly, I suggest that you ask the newsmaster there to add it (Try news@isp.net, or newsmaster@isp.net) Ask politely. Include the msg ID of the results posting, and of the newgroup msg.
Good luck.

Subject: Re: Annotated NO voters - 3rd interest poll

Ron House:

You have not answered, that I've noticed, my request for you to document your suggestion that Bahais voted for and passed the proposal for talk.religion.bahai. I maintain that only approximately 27 Bahais voted YES. It seems clear looking again at the RESULT that non-Bahais interested in preserving free speech and conscience on the Internet passed trb.

Soc.religion.bahai was it's own worst enemy. I would have to cite a number of reasons talk.religion.bahai passed on the third interest poll:

1. Srb banned all discussion or even mention of talk.religion.bahai for nearly two years and apparently continues to do so.
2. Srb banned me for having a link on my website to Yahoo's Bahai links which in turn had a link to a covenant breaker's site, unequivocally revealing the fanaticism of the "moderators."
3. Srb then supposedly extended that ban to include all posters to srb, though in point of fact they've continued to allow others to post their web links.
4. Unlike the first two interest polls, my website created a memory or record of Bahai abuse of freedom of speech and conscience for the third poll that proved instrumental in documenting the intrigues of fundamentalist Bahais.
5. Alt.religion.bahai continued to grow providing a free forum for those concerned.

Please explain or defend your claim that Bahais voted YES for talk.religion.bahai. It appears to me there was a carefully calculated margin of votes essentially cancelling each other out, just enough to defeat talk.religion.bahai once again had not enough non-Bahais, news.groupies, and others demonstrated tyranny has not yet triumphed on Usenet....

Subject: Re: Call for Manuscripts - - New Publisher

Just received my first series of 10 ISBNs from R. R. Bowker....

While the first book I'll be publishing this August is moving along well, I'm considering also publishing this year a collection of the articles on my website I've called Assorted Controversial Documents:

"A Modest Proposal" 1987
"The Service of Women" 1988?
"Crisis of Faith" 5/15/96
Letter: Stephen Birkland, Continental Board of Counsellors 7/16/96
"Baha'i Leaders Vexed by On-Line Critics" Winter 1997
Mark Towfiq's NO Vote Campaign on BCCA mailing lists 3/12/97
Susan Maneck's NO Vote Campaign on AOL 12/7/98

and, in the right format, perhaps the following:

alt.religion.bahai FAQ & Chronology (Frequently Asked Questions)
The Bahai Technique (Essential Reading)

To the Universal House of Justice - March 31, 1997
To the Universal House of Justice - July 24, 1998

I'm hoping to find a few other contributors and perhaps someone to write an introductory essay that suggests an historical perspective and sets the proper tone for the book.

I believe the book should sell well for its type to public and university libraries.

I'm sure no one will be surprised by the title I have in mind....

I believe your impression is mistaken. After two years of reading soc.religion.bahai, talisman, Bahai-Studies, Bahai-Discuss and other BCCA private lists, and h-bahai, I assure you very few Bahais voted YES--I can only identify approximately 27 names on the YES side of the RESULT....

Talk.religion.bahai owes its existence to the revulsion two years of Bahai fanaticism inspired in the broader Usenet community.... Talk.religion.bahai owes its existence to the respect most non-Bahais and ex-Bahais feel for freedom of speech and conscience....

Incidentally, Bill Hyman, "moderator" of soc.religion.bahai, attempted to find a way to suppress posting the full RESULT to srb by deleting the names and addresses of all voters, including the evidence that he and other fanatics had voted NO.

Ms. Maneck's attack below on talk.religion.bahai should be compared to her use of lying as a Bahai technique known as "hikmat," a Bahai practice of deceiving non-Bahais.

I believe she's practicing this technique now on talk.religion.bahai in a number of ways.

<https://ccwf.cc.utexas.edu/~saf/bahai/docs/hikmat.html>

See also <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck1.htm>

Her hypocrisy should be quite clear to anyone who compares all these messages to some of her recent posts.

Paul,

I'm a little sad that no one has really responded to your message but largely cast it aside. I think you observe some very true things about the nature of the Bahai Faith these days that resonate with my experience of it as well. Too, I think highly of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha for similar reasons you mention, while wondering what has gone wrong that such a vindictive fanaticism has supplanted their Teachings....

I've been fascinated too watching trb develop along different lines from alt.religion.bahai. I'm completely amazed to connect and watch 30 to 60 messages or more download at a time. With over 800 messages in only 2 and half weeks, it doesn't appear to be talk.religion.glaysheer after all as the fanatics always claimed it would be....

I share your sense of pity at what the Bahai Faith has become....

Juan,

You've recently mentioned Carl Ernst. He directed the 8 week NEH seminar on India I participated in back in 1995. I assume you've met. I have a copy of his book Eternal Garden which you're perhaps familiar with. He's a little on the radical side to my tastes, though I respect him and learned a great deal from the experience.

Steven Scholl has given me permission to publish "A Modest Proposal." I hope others will agree to my also publishing in one volume the most disputed texts of the last decade or so:

"A Modest Proposal" 1987
"The Service of Women" 1988?
"Crisis of Faith" 5/15/96
Letter: Stephen Birkland, Continental Board of Counsellors 7/16/96
"Baha'i Leaders Vexed by On-Line Critics" Winter 1997
Mark Towfiq's NO Vote Campaign on BCCA mailing lists 3/12/97
Susan Maneck's NO Vote Campaign on AOL 12/7/98
alt.religion.bahai FAQ & Chronology (Frequently Asked Questions)
The Bahai Technique (Essential Reading)
To the Universal House of Justice - March 31, 1997
To the Universal House of Justice - July 24, 1998

Would you be willing to write an introductory piece? And/or perhaps one on the Michael McKenny incident? Actually, I'd be grateful for anything you'd be willing to do for the project including selecting and editing it.

Respectfully,

FG

Subject: Serious problem

Someone has apparently subscribed me to three or four different listservs. My mailbox is being absolutely flooded today with messages from them. A hotmail.com tech person suggested I BLOCK them under Options but it is not working. The blocking device is not reading the message as coming from the listserv but the individual. That means I'd have to BLOCK, who knows HOW MANY subscribers.

This is a serious disruption of the integrity of my account. In over two years with Hotmail nothing like this has ever happen. I'm certainly not blaming Hotmail. I realize it's some kind of kook out there.
I'm sorry to have to take up your time, but I really need your help to

Headers are below.

Thanks.

Dear Fred:

I think it is wonderful you're doing the book, and am honored to be invited to be involved, but have to beg off. A whole line of editors will put me against the wall and shoot me if I take on anything else before I finish what's on the plate. I will try to keep contributing to TRB, since I think the hope of provisional translations and commentary on them actually is a draw and will help make that list more successful.

cheers Juan

Juan,

I can understand you have other more compelling interests.

Could you tell me what you know, though, about the history of the "Service of Women" and who wrote it? The copy I have from Michael McKenny more than a year ago shows the following names below the title. Any idea to whom I should request permission to reprint?

The Service of Women on the Institutions of the Baha'i Faith

Anthony A. Lee, Peggy Caton, Richard Hollinger, Marjan Nirou, Nader Saiedi, Shahin Carrigan, Jackson Armstong-Ingram, and Juan R. I.

Cole.

As I mentioned Scholl has given me permission to reprint "A Modest Proposal" and his "Crisis of Faith." If you can think of anything else that might be suitable, I'd appreciate your mentioning it.

Thanks.

Paul,

I'd like to reprint your article "Baha'i Leaders Vexed by On-Line Critics" from Gnosis in a collection of pieces I mentioned recently on trb. It would at a minimum include these controversial pieces from my website:

A Modest Proposal" 1987
"The Service of Women" 1988?
"Crisis of Faith" 5/15/96
Letter: Stephen Birkland, Continental Board of Counsellors 7/16/96

Please let me know if this would be acceptable to you and whether you know of anything else I might include.

Thanks.

Someone has subscribed me to several listservs including yours that are flooding me with email. A hotmail tech person suggested I Block them under Options but it's not working because only the individual is being blocked. I need to block the entire listserv.

Please help! This is extremely frustrating. I've tried nearly a dozen times now to reach someone at hotmail to help I just keep getting autoresponders!

Subject: Antinomies - Browning & Dostoevsky

From a May 1992 letter:

I've been reading lately a narrative poem by Robert Browning, "Bishop Blougram's Apology." I've read it a number of times over the years, and it's one that I continue to think about. The character of the bishop is partly based on John Henry Newman and another contemporary figure in the Roman Catholic Church, the latter of whom was especially noted for his abuse of power and position. Over dinner, the bishop justifies his corruption to a young journalist who has noticed his calculation, insincerity, and hypocrisy. In much of the poem, Browning is dealing with the nature of religious doubt. While the bishop is a hypocrite who embraces Catholicism because it gives him "cabin comforts" and the "estimation" of the masses, the journalist is charmingly naive in his insistence that religious faith should be "absolute." In a marvelous passage Browning recognizes the complex duality of the human soul:

No, when the fight begins within himself,
A man's worth something. God stoops o'er his head,
Satan looks up between his feet--both tug--
He's left, himself, i' the middle: the soul wakes
And grows. Prolong that battle through his life!
Never leave growing till the life to come!

Putting this truth in a sophist's mouth, Browning probes much deeper into the struggle for faith than the "pious" usually allow themselves. To my mind, the health of the spirit requires that freedom--given by God--to doubt and question and probe every single dogma of religion in its oppressively organized phase. On the other hand, Browning's point is partly that doubt itself, like evil and suffering, is a test of one's belief, for mature belief can only grow out of the struggle with doubt.

Dostoevsky, in his chapter "The Grand Inquisitor," In The Brothers Karamazov, meditates dialectically on the dilemma of free will and obedience to religious authority. Christ returns during the Spanish Inquisition and is imprisoned by the Grand Inquisitor who accuses Christ of leading men into confusion by giving them freedom of choice and conscience. The Grand Inquisitor informs Christ that

We have corrected Your work and have now founded it on miracle, mystery, and authority. And men rejoice at being led like cattle again, with the terrible gift of freedom that brought them so much suffering removed from them.

The Inquisitor goes on to tell Christ that man's "greatest need on earth" is "to find someone to worship, someone who can relieve him of the burden of his conscience, thus enabling him finally to unite into a harmonious ant-hill where there are no dissenting voices. . . ." In place of individual responsibility to God, the Inquisitor promises to free mankind from "the frightening torment they know today when they have to decide for themselves how to act." Christ listens to this sophist without uttering a word, and then, at the end, before being allowed to leave, rises and kisses the Inquisitor. Ivan, a nihilist, who relates this story, asserts all too accurately that in the modern world "everything is permitted." The Grand Inquisitor, grasping for power, a character to whom Nietzsche must have responded deeply, "doesn't believe in God." Dostoevsky knew these rich tensions were part of human nature. At times, the Bahá'í administration grossly fails to understand that Bahá'u'lláh has also blessed humankind with this burden of freedom and responsibility.

My over 22 years of experience as a member of the Bahai Faith leads me to concur with this judgment. I believe the two years of opposition to talk.religion.bahai is largely the result of the stranglehold the Iranian Bahais exert over the Bahai Faith.

Part of their monopoly is the absolute control they have to interpret out of existence the more liberal and democratic beliefs of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha.

> I do not believe it is a TOS. Bahais regularly on the AOL Forums accuse other Bahais of being covenant breakers or worse and treat non-Bahais in extremely negative ways. Are you calling those people to account? I highly doubt it.<

Foster:
I haven't seen these things go on since I have been back. However, if it happens, I will have to consider whether I feel it falls under the guidelines.

Glaysher:
Susan Maneck has referred to my beliefs and opinions as "garbage." Will you be supporting such denigrating, derisive statements on the Bahai Forums by Bahais you deem within the pale?

> I asked three questions. Your answers are quite ambiguous.
When will you recommend alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai be added to the main menu of the Bahai Forums?<

Foster:
I make my report once a week. Next report that goes out.

Glaysher:
Will you make your report public so that all people may see what you're actually submitting? As I have said, I have no confidence in you whatsoever and ask you to post all of your side of our correspondence in public on Questions to Forum Leader, where I originally posted mine.

> Your answer about the Libraries misses the point. They do not function now nor allow anyone to upload to them? When will they be corrected so that people of all opinions may post whatever they wish?<

Foster:
Anyone can upload to the libraries. However, the forum manager must check all files for viruses and TOS violations before "releasing" them. I have never not released a file (at least not yet).

Glaysher:
Are they presently working properly? The first and only message shown is dated January 1998. If there is a technical problem with the way I am uploading to them, please inform me so that I and other may immediately upload to them. Under what conditions would you refuse not to release a file? Will you be censoring the Libraries for content?

>You do not answer my third question: Will you add a link to my website the Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience to the Web Sites on the main Forum menu? Will you allow other people to add their links as well regardless of their views?<

Foster:
I am not sure about that one. There are so many Baha'i websites. I have a few, and they are not listed either. Some decision needs to be made on how to handle it. For what it's worth, I would rather have a link to a central links page from which someone could access all sorts of Baha'i-focused sites.

Glaysher:
I'm a paying member of AOL. I'm asking for MY link to be placed on the list of Web Sites. I oppose adding only "central links pages" as I believe that will be tantamount to another form of censorship whereby only literalists and party-liners will be added. I specifically asked you that ALL links be added regardless of their point of view on the Bahai Faith. Obviously, sites not related to the Bahai Faith would not be appropriate and it is reasonable to limit such links to the topic. Again, a "central page" would be off-site, i.e., off AOL and manipulated by Bahais. I once more ask that MY link be added to the list of Web Sites immediately.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

> I asked you these questions in public under Question to Forum Leader. Please answer there in public so that others might know your policies as well.<

Foster:
Feel free to post my responses to the forum, if you like.

Glaysher:
I will post these exchanges there. In the future, please post them in the proper folder where I have posted and asked you the questions--Questions to Forum Leader. Please do not change to private email. I believe these are questions that broadly affect the Bahai Forums on AOL and should be discussed in public where other AOL members may contribute and follow along.

If anyone can help me figure out what Bahais have done to subscribe me to these listservs and help me get off them I'd appreciate it.

Other than a few rightwing Bahais like Ms. Maneck, who wish to conceal their various forms of deceit and treachery, only a couple of people have ever complained about their messages appearing on my website. She's definitely attempting to inflate the numbers and obscure that facts of how low she and other literalist Bahai lackies are willing to go to "serve" the Faith.

The same day Mark Foster, Bahai Forum Leader on AOL, after an absence of more than EIGHT MONTHS, began to forward every message I posted to the TOSGeneral, the LISTSERV onslaught commenced.... My messages on AOL were no more off-topic than anyone else's in those forums.

It's precisely the type of terrorist techniques Ms. Maneck and other Bahais so frequently use. See her denouncing and calling for a NO vote on talk.religion.bahai one week before the end of the interest poll. Note well that she never participated during the entire previous TWO years of discussion but came in screaming hysterics at the most sensitive of moments. Her demanding evidence here now smacks of more deceit....

Sorry, I had to pull this one. Calling people "thugs" is not really appropriate on the forum. I suggest that you focus on why you might disagree with a person's views and not call people names.

Dear PL,
May I pleas respond.
>But what you are really saying is that you simply don't _like_ what the >Baha'i Faith does or says all the time.
Of course I don't like the faith..and more, the Baha'i faith is seldom questioned, so almost all the time all you ever hear is unopposed dogma(except on-line) Most people are nice when they are not threatened.

>regard to the women on the UHJ issue, you do what you accuse them of doing:
>you simply dismiss their answer out of hand _because it >doesn't suit you_ or fit whatever you perceive to be "right."
Not true- I don't dismiss their answer I am using their standards of equality on the equality of men and woman. Therefore I like to bring it up in front of seekers in order to aid their "independent investigation of the truth"

>No one is forced to join or declare.
But often Seekers are not given the full picture. I have witnessed many times Baha'i attempting to paint a picture of the faith to suit the seekers preconceived notions of religion. If a seeker was Christian they will paint a picture that Jesus is the ONLY son of God. The wont come out and say that directly, but they will twist the truth around to the limit without actually lying, just to give that impression.

> If a seeker has a particular issue(s) that they are concerned with, they >should have commonsense enough to ask about it before they become Baha'is.
A seeker is usually an honest person asking for the first time about the Baha'i faith. A baha'i usually is very skilled at twisting words around to try to "sell" the faith. Since the Baha'i aren't too well known, a lot of times the poor seeker has only the Baha'i word to go on BAHAI's want to keep it that way for as long as posable to maintain control. That is why people like Wendy and ***** (censored by Mark Foster) look under a microscope for reasons to TOS people who criticize the faith.

>They may even get nasty.
PL--Not may. They have been nasty. and manipulative, and mean, and violent.

>As far as warning seekers to be careful, I wonder why anyone feels such >responsibility? Is it to warn them or could it be that you simply are still >so upset by the fact that the Baha'i Faith and individual Baha'i don't meet >your standards?

It is because the Baha'is have hurt me, and wouldn't support me when I needed help. I was very hurt by members of the faith and the "faith" turned a blind eye.. So yes, I hold resentment. Good or bad that's why I like to come and post here.
Love, Christine

>> his "faithless brother" Hussein's choice for a wife as a "lowborn Christian girl."

>> (Shoghi Effendi, "Citadel of Faith," p.78)

Mine too.... It's so revealing of the mentality many Iranian Bahais seek to conceal behind their sneers of contempt.

To call someone a "lowborn >Christian girl" is not a derogatory term, it merely represents the writer's wish to >explain that she was not born in a family of great means. But, for you to take this out >of context and to further call this a "slur" is certainly repugnant, offensive, and >derogatory!!

Here we have it again.... This cultural racism of Iranians manifests itself in many ways in everyday Bahai "community" life....

Hi Fred,

I mean the one on your website entitled "Relentlessly Aggressive Cult Apologists." I didn't save it, and can't print it from the site for some reason. But never mind, I would just rather try to forget all about him.

Thanks,

Paul

Paul,

I'm not sure which message you mean. I've been filtering out Schaut for more than week. Just tired of wasting time on him. Send it to me and I'll repost it though.

Someone has subscribed me to several listservs including yours that are flooding me with email.
A hotmail tech person suggested I Block them under Options but it's not working because only the individual is being blocked. I need to block the entire listserv.

I you are the listowner or can help, please remove my address from your list of subscribers.

Please help! This is extremely frustrating. I've tried nearly a dozen times now to reach someone at hotmail to help I just keep getting autoresponders!

Your vague blanket accusation of slander is no more true because you continue to repeat it week after week. I've asked you before and ask you again to present the "evidence."

I'm entitled to my opinions, and you may imagine they're "slander," but I certainly think otherwise. Your attack of slander may have slowed slightly before the very end of the poll. The exact time frame is now difficult to recall. I remember I thought it best to deal with your slander and demagoguery by attempting to ignore it. You were obviously trying to whip up passions. You were and are mistaken if you think that proves something for you....

It should be noted that one of the Bahai Techniques is to change the subject into who said what when why how etc.... In fact, this should perhaps be called the Maneck Technique. Might be a new regular posting in that....

Maneck is attempting to hide her anti-intellectual, non-scholarly fascism and terrorist techniques.... Perhaps she's worrying about getting tenure someday....

"Private"? Letters of coercion and deceit are not matters of private concern but public.... Notice this is the real issue. Bahai fundamentalists like Maneck want to continue to be able to terrorize people with impunity....

Pretty much the way I feel too.... Given all the lies and deceit and "hikmat" and hiding behind contemptible lackies, I don't know why I don't resign too....

I recall the words of Robert Hayden to me so many times:

Can you help me identify WHERE outside of hotmail they are coming from? The managers of the LISTSERVS all say they are not coming from their lists and my name does not appear on their subscriptions lists.

While it is true Juan suggested to me the possibility of creating talk.religion.bahai, I am the one who decided to sacrifice for two arduous years.... Juan leaves out the fact that the censorship he imposed on talisman was just as central to my decision to persevere as that on soc.religion.bahai. Having witnessed both his, Maneck's, and others' use and abuse of talisman and h-bahai for their own little academic projects, I became all the more determined that an unmoderated forum no one could control was essential.

Incidentally, I have intentionally restrained the number of my posts since January 18th so that the news.groupies and others who are still following along may judge for themselves whether the level of interest justifies the creation of talk.religion.bahai.

Dear Fred:

I hastened to clarify that you are certainly the protagonist of trb and to give you full credit.

Incidentally, why don't you try to find out Henderson's and the other NSA members' salaries and perks? You are still an enrolled member in good standing, as I understand it. And my understanding is that by Illinois law they have to let you inspect the budget, since it is an incorporated non-profit. And it is not as if they can do anything to you? I wish I'd done this before I left!

cheers Juan

But perhaps only Abdul-Baha's "hikmat," lying deceit, Towfiqism, calculated to appeal to the gullible Westerners who know no

"Actually find now" in reality only means that the NSA

I demanded they stop mailing it to me over two and a

My guess is that many of those 60,000 are also people way the fanatics are running the Bahai Faith....

The way Bahais have opposed and suppressed people for more than a decade now is the best answer to the question above along with the fundamentalist battle against the creation of talk.religion.bahai....

The Universal House of Justice is definitely to blame for all of this.... They've created and maintain an atmosphere of distrust and oppression. It's obviously what they want....

That's the way the UHJ runs itself today and all its sycophants....
It's had plenty of opportunity to prove otherwise during the last

Subject: REPOST - The Maneck Technique

Juan Cole, February 13, 1999:

"It is a very, very, very weird religion. And if anyone is reading Susan Maneck's absolutely bone-chilling screeds on the desirability of Heresy Trials and carefulness in Shunning, they are seeing what it is like at the core of the religion."

"I really am sorry for them and her, since they seem sort of filled with hate and quite paranoid, yet say they are preaching love, unity and tolerance. Susan will say, 'may your abdomen be split by lightning and your guts fall out you filthy heretic whom I wish I could just have shunned and buried', and then she'll sign herself "warmest" and slander a university by adding it to her sig line. As if what she is about has anything at all to do with *universities*!"

FG, February 15, 1999:

"Ms. Maneck's approach appears to me to be always to shunt the discussion off or back to who said what where when why how and so on.... The farther back in time the better, since the person's memory, being human, is bound to be unable to keep up or to have stocked the evidence needed on his or her hard drive or find it on dejanews.com. And it then allows her to claim pretty much anything she wants to while seeming to have discredited her opponent. Further, she relies on the tactics of demagoguery knowing they usually prevail and will be supported by other fundamentalist Bahais. By shrieking "slander" and referring to others' opinions as "garbage," she is able to create an emotional atmosphere that essentially negates whatever the topic or content might be and that allows her to appear to win what is often a narrowly legalistic point or interpretation."

"All of this is done, of course, in conjunction with her employing the more common Bahai techniques of intimidation and psychological demonization and terrorism."

Legitimacy of Dissimulation in The Bahai Faith????

by

Imran

Bahais as is their wont make a lot of unsubstantiated claims, like the Bahai Faith is in perfect harmony with other Divine faiths like Islam, Judaism, Christianity, etc., ....we have come to unite mankind on one platform without any bias and prejudice, ...we wish to establish unity, peace and equality among the people. These and such other statements though apparently very noble are masked with deception. To make the Bahais as well as non-Bahais aware of this deception was felt necessary. This article was written with this very objective in mind. Mentioned below are a series of incidents that will distinctly underline my claims. Hopefully at the end, this article will leave the reader more enlightened.

Bahais give credence to disguising their Faith from the common gullible populace, disclosing it, only once they convert to Bahaism. This practice is described as Dissimulation. As per principles of Taqaiya, Bahais conceal their Faith (or are at least permitted to conceal their Faith), if it serves their interests. (This practice was actually followed in Indonesia quite successfully. But when they had got too widespread and the Government got wise they were driven out.)

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani, one of Bahaisms most renowned missionaries, has written a book Behjatus Sudoor (in Persian) in 1914 A.H. His treatise is considered noteworthy among the Bahais. This book was written by him under explicit instructions from Abbas Affandi.. Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani is buried in Akka (the Bahai Mecca) near Bahaulлахs tomb.

In his book (Bombay edition) he states that ...when Bahaulлах sent me to Istanbul on Abdul Bahaas recommendation for preaching Bahaism there he advised me ...you should meet the masses with tact and your meeting with me should be disclosed in a very nonchalant manner, so they are not alarmed. And at all times bear in mind never to disclose your wealth, your destination and your religion, and implement this till the last possibility

Further in his book Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani has mentioned many meetings with the populace where he has strictly abided by Bahaulлахs edict i.e. concealing the faith. I have made an attempt below wherein such incidents are mentioned that will make evident to my readers the objective behind this dissimulation

Incident 1

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani narrates When I was condemned in Egypt and the people said about me az deene Islam kharij shudeh ast wa deene aaeene jadeedee bidat namudeh ast ... this man has forsaken the religion of Islam and accepted a new religion, I wrote a letter to the police officer saying with selfishness and the malice which they bore towards us have blamed us of following a new religion and a new book. But after a thorough scrutiny of facts, the falsehood of these accusations will be as evident for the king as the midday sun (Pg. 107) But he himself later mentions on pg. 184 ...it was made apparent with clear proofs (to one person) about the culmination of Islam and the advent of a new religion. The deceit in the two statements mentioned above is also as evident as the midday sun , wherein, on one hand Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani vociferously denies his (new) faith and on the other he makes apparent to others this very (new) faith.

Incident 2

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani narrates on pg. 86-88 of the same book that ... after I had been appointed as a missionary by Bahaulлах for preaching the religion of Bahaism and I arrived in Egypt, the Iranians protested that you have abandoned your belief on the Finality of Prophethood (Khatame Nabuwwat) and forsaken Islam and Muslims and you preach that Muhammad (PBUH) is not the last Prophet. Then I told them, baraaye tabligh naya aamdeheem wa khud ra qaabile eenkeh nisbat momineen een amr badheem namee daaneem ta cheh rasd bemuballageen ....I have not come to preach Bahaism, let alone being a Bahai, I do not consider myself equal to even a simple Bahai

Again, the doublespeak in Mirza Haider Ali Isfahanis words is unmistakable. He denies his Bahai inclination when he himself was appointed by Bahaulлах on the counsel of Abbas Affandi as a missionary. (Pg. 83) Then why this contradiction ??? This hypocrisy is in stark contrast with the teachings of Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) who said Lie is the key to all evil. No where does one find a single instance of Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) or Prophet Jesus (PBUH) advising their disciples to lie about their faith to the gullible so as to spread the message of Islam or Christianity. In fact Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) used to say "Refrain from lying even if it to your benefit, and always speak the truth even if it to your detriment". But we find Bahaullah and his successor advocating the philosophy of 'dissimulation' that totally contradicts the philosophy of the divine 'abrogated' religions. An institution based on lies and deceit can hardly be expected to survive for long, even though it may seem beneficial in the short term. This is something the Bahais must realise. Simply, increasing ones numbers is a very short sighted approach. The Bahais must focus more on resolving the glaring discrepancies inherent in their faith that I have mentioned in my earlier articles. They should not be too concerned about numbers. People will come to the Faith, provided the truth is with them.

Incident 3

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani, was once called to meet the Shah of Iran, Shujaudaulah. The latter had got wind of Bahai activism . Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani as was his wont, did not disclose his identity. However, unable to conceal his enthusiasm, in the course of his meeting, he extolled the virtues of Akka. Shujaudaulah, a very perceptive individual, remarked that ..unless a person is a Bahai, he will not speak such. You are a Bahai, however you are loathe to disclose it. But Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani keeping Bahaullahs admonition in mind tried to deceive the Shah by saying agar faanee momin wa mokin ast baayad hazratash dar jameea jahaat etaaat konam If I am a Bahai and have (truly) accepted the Faith, then I must observe all the commands of Hazrat Bahaullah (Behjatoos Sudoor Pg. 196) However by concealing his true identity (from the Shah) he has indeed observed one of the basic tenets of dissimulation laid down by Bahaullah.

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani's words: We have shattered the Muslims , coupled with the Bahai deceit and dissimulation with the Muslims (and others) bear ample testimony to his and Bahaullahs intentions. Bahai missionaries then as well today, propagate with this objective. These words of Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani should serve as a warning for people across all faiths especially the Muslims. Muslim Ulama (scholars) should take the initiative in this matter. They should study more about the Bahai faith and launch an awareness campaign amongst the common gullible Muslims. Protecting the faith (Imaan) of common Muslims in this era from attacks of Bahai missionaries (like Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani) is crucial.

Incident 4

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani recounts on pg. 206-7 of the same book ...I alongwith two other Bahais, Ghulam Hussain and Muhammad Sadiq had gathered at a place in Iran. In the morning, the Muslims had besieged the place. I handed over all the important documents regarding Bahaism to my companions and surrendered myself to the Muslims. They took me to a house outside the city and warned me that if I do not give them all the important documents to them they would cut me into pieces. Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani deceived them by saying that ..at midnight yesterday, a man representing Shah Shujaudaulah had come, and I surrendered everything to him. Consequently I was spared and my two companions meanwhile, also made good their escape with the documents.

Incident 5

The Bahais to preach their Faith among the Muslims, even go to the extent of praying Namaaz with Muslims. This is in stark violation of the Bahai tenet which strictly forbids a Bahai from praying like the Muslims. Let alone Namaaz they are not even permitted even to perform their ablutions (Wuzu) like the Muslims. This is quite evident, as Bahaullah claims to have abrogated Islam. However, Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani states in Behjatus Sudoor (Pg. 97) faanee wa Mirza Hussain Shirazi wa Darvesh Hussain sab meeaad bakhaaneh concal fateem wa nazde u wa aakhareen ham dar zaahir aadaabe Islam laahifz me namud zilm wa lu yatee bekitaabe jadeed wa shorue jadeed ra ham bedaleel aafakeeh wa anfaseeh saabit me kard One night I, Mirza Hussain Shirazi and Darvesh Hussain met at the residence of the council as planned. I used to prove the veracity of the new Book (Aqdas) and the new religion (Bahaism) with hidden as well as apparent proofs as the religion of Islam was abrogated. However we prayed Namaaz at the residence of the council in a manner similar to the other Muslims. And we always did this in front of others (non-Muslims) as well

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani and his fellow missionaries went to the extent of contravening the Bahai principle just to convert a few Muslims. They performed an unlawful act (as per their Faith) only to get close to the Muslims. Why did they resort to such deceitful ways to propagate ? Or did they believe that so long as the ends justify the means, then everything is permissible ? This mode of propagation of Bahaism is indeed strange. Never did Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) advice the missionaries to pretend to pray along with the Jews (of his time), although the Jews were Islams sworn enemies. He always used words of kindness and compassion with the people and attracted them towards Islam with his excellent morals. Quran says We have created the Prophet as an excellent exemplar for you To the extent that even the bloodthirsty infidels used to call Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) him Sadiq (Truthful) and Amin (Trustworthy). Now compare this, with Bahaullah, his character, his morals and the means he has employed to propagate Bahaism. Can anyone ever call him Sadiq (Truthful) and Amin (Trustworthy)?

And to think Bahaism has come to abrogate Islam! Why are the Bahais so insidious in their approach ? If Bahaism is such a beautiful religion then why use such means ? Why dont they attract the people with this so called beauty ? What is the need to resort to such guile ? Never in the history of the Divine religions (Islam, Judaism, Christianity) was such a mode of propagation permitted. On the contrary Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), and Prophet Jesus (PBUH) and Prophet Moses (PBUH), etc. always adopted sincerity in their approach and never cared to simply enhance the strength of their followers. In fact certain prophets had only a handful of followers, inspite of preaching for hundreds of years. Adam (PBUH) had preached for 930 years and managed to gather a negligible number of followers. As it is widely known even Prophet Noah (PBUH) at the time of the deluge had only eighty companions on his ark. Noah (PBUH) had preached for 950 years. Even Prophet Abraham (PBUH) after years of preaching could muster, but a few disciples. Even Prophet Jesus (PBUH) after all his exhortations and appeals had only twelve close disciples. Yet he never adopted deception to counter the Pharisees, who were thirsty for his blood. As a matter of fact a close study of past prophets will tell us that most, if not all, had only a paltry number of followers. However none of the Prophets took recourse to such populist measures even in the face of severe persecution.

Incident 6

Besides praying Namaaz along with the Muslims, the Bahai missionaries also employed other means such as becoming disciples/followers of renowned Muslim sages.

Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani mentions on pg. 27 of the same book az Yazd be Kaashshaan wa Tehran raft wa dar Tehran bejahat satr wa hifz wa ameed wa iqbaale izhaar iradat bejanaab ustad Ghulam Rezaae Shishe gar mar shud mashur muslim namud During my journey to Iran, I traveled from Yazd to Kaashaan and from there to Tehran. In Tehran, I visited a prominent Muslim sage/soothsayer, Ghulam Reza Shishah, and entered his fold. By doing this I hoped on one hand, to conceal my identity and on the other, to convert that sage/soothsayer. Mirza Haider Ali Isfahani was indeed a very intelligent missionary. He realised that if he was successful in converting a prominent Muslim sage, it would only be matter of time before all the other followers/disciples followed suit. Another example of Bahai guile. This is where the Muslim Ulama (scholars) have to be careful. Because if even one Aalim (scholar) falls prey to such Bahai cunning, their students/companions are most likely to emulate them. More incidents of a similar nature can be found on pg. 50

Incident 7

Mulla Ali Akbar was among students of Mulla Muhammad Sadiq. He was the leader (Imam-e-Jamaat) of the mosque in Shiraz. And from the pulpit he used to announce the claim of Mahdi of Mirza Ali Muhammad Shirazi ( Hazrat Aala). This was done with utmost discretion. Indeed what can be of greater danger to the Muslims that Bahaai propoganda is carried from their places of worship. The consummation of this dissimulation is very aptly described by Abbas

Affandi in his book Al Kaukabe Durriyah (pg. 452) peyusteh een taaefeh dar har dastgaahraah dashtand wa az kaar har keesi agaah budeh chandaan keh az harm saraae sultaanee har raaz nahaaee betawassit bahaaiyyaan keh dar pardeh een mastur daair medaad amur bedabd baraee ishaan makshuf meegasht

the result was that the Bahaais had spread their tentacles everywhere. And they were aware of everyones activities. To the extent that the discreet affairs of the women in the kings harem were known to them through the Bahaais who were employed with in the palaces This then was the extent of espionage among the Bahaais at that time. And it is shocking to say the least. And what is even more shocking is that Abdul Bahaa himself is the one admitting it.

And he does seem to confess it without any regret or remorse. As if he was proud of the Bahaai network functioning at that time.

Dissimulation in the Sayings of Abbas Affandi (Abdul Bahaa)

1) In Bahaism preaching discreetly has been emphasised to the extent that Abdul Bahaa has mentioned in his book Makaatab vol. 3, pg. 327 Hiding your faith has been made obligatory upon you. Also the author of Nuktatul Qaaf, Mirza Jaani writes on pg. 211 of the same book The father was concealing his faith from the son and the son from his father and the people of his house. 2) Abbas Affandi writes in a letter to Shaykh Farjullah Zaki who was sent to Egypt for preaching Bahauallah has made haraam (forbidden) the preaching of Islam in Egypt. It is required that Bahai friends keep low for a while. And even if someone questions about the Faith, they should pretend to be unaware of it. This letter was written on October 22, 1921

3) This decree on preaching in a concealed manner has been expressed further in no uncertain terms by Abdul Bahaa in his Makaatab vol. 3 pg. 496 to Shaikh Mohiddeen Kardi, masaaile hakeemeh ra asaas tazkereh karaar dheed na aqaad ra .while trying to incline the thoughts (towards Bahaism), priority must be given to skills, rather than fundamentals (of the Faith).

What can be more unsettling than a decree like this one issued by none other than the successor of Bahauallah??? Again this fashion of propagation is alien to the divine faiths, where all the past prophets had emphasised strictly on fundamentals of the religion. At no point of time did the prophets ever make any concessions on the principles. They were prepared to sacrifice their lives but unprepared to compromise on the foundation of religion. Again we see that the Bahai philosophy is the exact antithesis of the Sunnah of the earlier prophets.

This, then, was the mode employed by the Bahaais to spread the Faith. And it is very much in vogue till date in certain countries, like Indonesia. And that is very disturbing. It is a cause for concern for all Muslims. As it is said an hidden enemy is more dangerous than a thousand open enemies. The objective of this article was to make evident this hidden enemy, as it is also said forewarned is forearmed.

Mahdi

I am too tied to go into detail. But I just want people to know that someone has deleted 2 of my post. IMHO I find it Ironic that spammers can spread porno-emails all over the place, but honest opinions are deleted.

The Baha'i should start living by example, again, IMHO.
If anyone has the power to bring my post back, please do.

Subject: Re: Baha'u'llah as Democrat

Juan,

You select some very appropriate texts to demonstrate your case. I know you could have just as easily chosen another twenty or thirty or more passages as well. It is strange indeed to see the thinking of a man distorted into exactly the opposite of his published writings....

For the fundamentalists, their esoteric interpretations or corruptions rest on or are justified by hikmat, are they not?

Hello Mr. Glaysher,

I just read with interest the letter by Steve Scholl (sp?) to the Universal House of Justice re: Crisis of Faith on your website. However, I couldn't find any response on the page. Was there a response on the part of the House, and if so, do you have it elsewhere on your site? I would like to see how they responded. Thanks.

Peace,
Mary

I don't believe the UHJ every responded to it.
I might be wrong though. You might ask on talk.religion.bahai; others would know more about it than I do.

I believe the abuse of free speech on AOL is a legitimate topic of discussion for talk.religion.bahai and shall continue to post here anything I wish regarding it.

Some might want to notice that the same desire to prevent diverse opinions from being heard is the reason Bahais are attempting to drive myself and other people off of AOL through their false allegations of TOS violations. I have appealed this to the proper people at AOL and believe all people on Usenet and the Internet have the right to hear about the consistent opposition of Bahais to free speech and conscience....

Robert Hayden used to refer to them as THAT CROWD...
Most apropos. The man never expressed anything but contempt for them behind their backs.... complaining to me once he had given them too much too easily. I often recall that when I hear of another attempt to exploit his career by THAT CROWD....

I had missed this message of yours until now. There have been so many to trb I've had real trouble keeping up. I too understand what you mean. When people like Rick Schaut and some of the other literalists are known as what Bahais are, it's best to be considered a pink rhinoceros....

Greetings,

This is my first post to the list. If any other readers have connections to or information on the surname HOLSTON (also spelled HOLSTEIN, HOLESTON/HOLSTINE/etc), I'd appreciate a response.

The HOLSTONS/HOLSTEINS apparently were Swedes who immigrated to the Delaware Valley region in the first half of the 1600s. I'm trying to see if my HOLSTONS (in SW Virginia by the 1790s) are connected to those from colonial Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Thanks,

Don Holston

It's the Bahai fundamentalists who made contention unavoidable. Typically, they blame the victims of their oppressive tactics....

Good riddance. As far as I'm concerned you've done nothing on talk.religion.bahai but lie, falsely accuse others of "slander," and refer to people's views as "garbage." I hope you learn something from the current inquisition, enough to wake up....

Incidentally, I hope you stay off AOL too, since you and Mark Foster are obviously in cahoots. It would be a much nicer forum there to get rid of two Bahai fanatics at once....

Permit me to expatiate.... Sending email accusing other Bahais of being covenant breakers or having erred or being "dangerously close" to their thinking or creating "disunity" by not swallowing the approved idiocies; threatening others in numerous ways with email and anonymous telephone calls, several a day at crucial junctures of discussion or voting on talk.religion.bahai; cars pulling up in front of my house with people craning their necks to gawk in at the "center of sedition"; the BCCA lying and deceiving for more than TWO years about its opposition to free speech and conscience and scheming, apparently under the direction of Mark Towfiq, in sundry ways, for the defeat of talk.religion.bahai; the UHJ itself incontestably, tacitly supporting such techniques....

And now some other poor victim writhes on the rack....

I feel for him and know his pain.... Pray God, they not rip out his tongue so that some grace-filled day he may bear witness here, on talk.religion.bahai, to the horrors of the Bahai gulag....

It seems to me the Bahai right wing is primarily made up of Iranian Bahais, though many other nationalities have been dragooned into their faction or Jesuit order. This is especially true when it comes to the Bahai elections which are often quite meaningless. It should be obvious to anyone with any real sensitivity to what's taking place that the people with the real power are often behind the scenes influencing the outcome of "consultation."

I've witnessed this many, many times during my 23 years as a Bahai.

I blame the UHJ for this state of affairs and the continuing fanatical atmosphere that beclouds the Bahai Faith.

I believe you're onto something that's very important to understand. We're witnessing this phenomenon all the time here on Usenet. There's a set collection of answers and defenses that are repeated over and over, coached I'm sure, at times, from the sidelines by the Bahai Jesuit Order. In this sense, it has seemed to me for a very long time that the Bahai Faith is not a "living religion," but one quite ossified. There's a text; it's taught at summer schools and by Iranian Bahais and one mustn't depart from it.... Living religions evolve and permit their followers to probe its depths, returning with precious jewels all may share and benefit from.

Dear Fred,
Congradulations on your web page it is most informative in sorting out the truth from fiction. I recently became a member of the bahai some months ago, (I live in South Australia) like a lot of people I was drawn to the philosophy of the unity of bahais. However right from the beginning I noticed some reluctance to give me information where I can obtain some historical facts regarding the history of Hussein Ali (bahaullah) from an independant source. All I've managed to read of his early life is nonsense about having superior intelligence without ever having attended school etc.
Even something about him arguing a case in the courts at the tender age of seven etc. I'm sure you have come across this yourself. Anyway every time I question the veracity of these claims I'm promptly told that in time I'll come to understand.

My basic questions are: who or what confined him to the prison in Akka, (I presume his wife also lived there with him) what was the purpose of this penal city?
Also who provided the funds for his very comfortable existence in later years?
In fact my basic questions about bahaullah and his organization are simply, how, what, where and when.

I apologise for imposing on you but if you could give me some info on the history of bahaullah I would be most appreciative.

Yours sincerely, Frederick Laister.

I really don't know the answers to your questions.
My best advice would be for you to ask them on talk.religion.bahai where Juan Cole, of the University of Michigan, might be able to help you and other scholars.

Do you have access to Usenet? If not you could use www.dejanews.com by search for talk.religion.bahai and setting up your own free account on dejanews.

Good luck.

FG

It looks like testcase2@usa.net must have been it. For reasons I don't understand, not only have you set that account to nomail and turned off the listserv mail to me from Indiana.edu but it's also turned off ALL the listservs that were bombarding me with a 100+ messages a day!

Thanks a lot!

I'm really grateful to both of you for the time and effort you must have put into correcting this situation.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

trb3199-43099

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, December 04, 1998 9:48 AM
Subject: AOL Bahai Forums - Steve Case, Mark Foster

Dear Mr. Foster:

I and others on AOL would appreciate your resigning from your position [as Forum Leader] so that something may begin to improve. We have been discussing periodically since at least August your disappearance and now ask you to step down.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> Talk.religion.bahai voter ballot is on news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, alt.religion.bahai, or email the votetaker dave@dogwood.com requesting the trb CFV ballot.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> Talk.religion.bahai voter ballot is on news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, alt.religion.bahai, or email the votetaker dave@dogwood.com requesting the trb CFV ballot.

Rough Draft to Steve Case:

Dear Mr. Case,

There are serious and long standing problems with the way the Bahai Forums are run. As members of AOL, who pay $21.95 a month, we're concerned that AOL is permitting unknowingly a very high level of censorship and manipulation to take place by essentially religious zealots who will not permit others to speak their minds.

As members, former members, or non-members of the Bahai Faith, we have witnessed censorship practiced by Bahais in many forums on and off the Internet. We presently are attempting to create an unmoderated newsgroup, talk.religion.bahai on Usenet. FG's web site documents numerous abuses by Bahais of the human rights of members and non-Bahais:

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

We ask you to investigate the situation on the AOL Forums and appoint someone as Forum Leader who will be a fair and objective person allowing all opinions to find expression and not abuse their duties in favor of fanatical views or perhaps appoint two or three people to counterbalance one another with veto power so that at least some kind of system of checks and balances might exist to protect people from the tyranny of past Bahai Forum Leaders.

At the very least, we feel the resolution must allow the following changes under the Bahai Forums which some members have been advocating since the middle of August 1998:

alt.religion.bahai and any new future newsgroups on the Bahai Faith, such as talk.religion.bahai, should it pass, ought to be added to the list of available Newsgroups under Bahai

Libraries should finally function and accept all postings to them of any point of view uncensored by the Forum Leader.

Such web sites as FG's The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience should be added to Links <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> and any other link suggested by an AOL member ought to be automatically added to the list and not censored for religious reasons.

We know that the Bahai AOL Forums have had a stormy history. We hope that you will help us find a lasting solution to these profound problems of religious freedom and conscience. At the moment, we believe the "frozen" nature of the Bahai Forums very much plays into the hands of those opposed to freedom of speech and hope a compromise can be reached allowing for a new atmosphere of openness and toleration on AOL's Bahai Forums.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> Talk.religion.bahai voter ballot is on news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, alt.religion.bahai, or email the votetaker dave@dogwood.com requesting the trb CFV ballot.

Dear Shawna,

Thank you for acknowledging my message to Mr. Case. I appreciate your re-routing it to the appropriate person as AOL and I look forward to hearing from him or her.

Since my original message to you efforts by some Bahais to use the AOL forums to undermine the Usenet system of interest polling on talk.religion.bahai have only increased, especially by Susan Maneck. It's a very complicated situation with a long and tumultuous history on AOL.

I trust the person you're referring me to will have the patience and tenacity to help improve the Bahai Forums.

Respectfully,

Dear FG,

I am responding to your letter on behalf of Steve Case. Thank you for taking the time to write to us.

We appreciate member feedback because it is the best way for us to know what we are doing right -- and what we could do better.

I have passed your comments to the appropriate person at America Online.
Please feel free to write us again at any time.

Dear Mr. Case:

The continuing serious neglect of the Bahai Forums would not be solved in the best interest of all AOL members by appointing Susan Maneck. My experience with her on a scholar mailing list h-bahai at the University of Michigan and her recent attacks on the creation of talk.religion.bahai on Usenet convince me that she would not be a fair arbiter. She has recently threatened to violate Usenet interest poll custom by calling for a NO vote against the proposed newsgroup talk.religion.bahai, which has been defeated in the past by a massive NO vote campaign mounted by other Bahais in a similar fashion: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Towfiq.htm>

I hope you will help find a solution to prevent another such Bahai from having control over the free speech and conscience of AOL members.

Specifically she has continued to ignore my and others' concerns about 3 key areas. I've clipped them out of the REVISED PETITION:

alt.religion.bahai and any new future newsgroups on the Bahai Faith, such as talk.religion.bahai, should it pass, ought to be added to the list of available Newsgroups under Bahai

Libraries should finally function and accept all postings to them of any point of view uncensored by the Forum Leader.

Such web sites as FG's The Bahai Faith &
Religious Freedom of Conscience should be added to Links <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> and any other link suggested by an AOL member ought to be automatically added to the list and not censored for religious reasons.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> Talk.religion.bahai voter ballot is on news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, alt.religion.bahai, or email the votetaker dave@dogwood.com requesting the "trb CFV."

Subject: Antinomies - Robert Browning, Dostoevsky

From a May 1992 letter:

I've been reading lately a narrative poem by Robert Browning, "Bishop Blougram's Apology." I've read it a number of times over the years, and it's one that I continue to think about. The character of the bishop is partly based on John Henry Newman and another contemporary figure in the Roman Catholic Church, the latter of whom was especially noted for his abuse of power and position. Over dinner, the bishop justifies his corruption to a young journalist who has noticed his calculation, insincerity, and hypocrisy. In much of the poem, Browning is dealing with the nature of religious doubt. While the bishop is a hypocrite who embraces Catholicism because it gives him "cabin comforts" and the "estimation" of the masses, the journalist is charmingly naive in his insistence that religious faith should be "absolute." In a marvelous passage Browning recognizes the complex duality of the human soul:

No, when the fight begins within himself,
A man's worth something. God stoops o'er his head,
Satan looks up between his feet--both tug--
He's left, himself, i' the middle: the soul wakes
And grows. Prolong that battle through his life!
Never leave growing till the life to come!

ll. 690

Putting this truth in a sophist's mouth, Browning probes much deeper into the struggle for faith than the "pious" usually allow themselves. To my mind, the health of the spirit requires that freedom--given by God--to doubt and question and probe every single dogma of religion in its oppressively organized phase. On the other hand, Browning's point is partly that doubt itself, like evil and suffering, is a test of one's belief, for mature belief can only grow out of the struggle with doubt.

There is something deeply, inescapably, eternally dialectical in the human being and in the very nature of existence, the way it develops, evolves, progresses.

Dostoevsky, in his chapter "The Grand Inquisitor," In The Brothers Karamazov, meditates dialectically on the dilemma of free will and obedience to religious authority. Christ returns during the Spanish Inquisition and is imprisoned by the Grand Inquisitor who accuses Christ of leading men into confusion by giving them freedom of choice and conscience. The Grand Inquisitor informs Christ that

We have corrected Your work and have now founded it on miracle, mystery, and authority. And men rejoice at being led like cattle again, with the terrible gift of freedom that brought them so much suffering removed from them.

The Inquisitor goes on to tell Christ that man's "greatest need on earth" is "to find someone to worship, someone who can relieve him of the burden of his conscience, thus enabling him finally to unite into a harmonious ant-hill where there are no dissenting voices. . . ." In place of individual responsibility to God, the Inquisitor promises to free mankind from "the frightening torment they know today when they have to decide for themselves how to act." Christ listens to this sophist without uttering a word, and then, at the end, before being allowed to leave, rises and kisses the Inquisitor. Ivan, a nihilist, who relates this story, asserts all too accurately that in the modern world "everything is permitted." The Grand Inquisitor, grasping for power, a character to whom Nietzsche must have responded deeply, "doesn't believe in God." Dostoevsky knew these rich tensions were part of human nature. At times, the Bahá'í administration grossly fails to understand that Bahá'u'lláh has also blessed humankind with this burden of freedom and responsibility.

Prospero:

"Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,
Which is most faint....
But release me from my bands,
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;
And my ending is despair
Unless I be relieved by prayer,
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy itself, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardoned be,
Let your indulgence set me free."

"It appears that my oeuvre is Christian and even (practically) irreproachable according to the criteria of Catholic theology. I am not so sure, though I like to hear this. Certainly, it stands out against the background of twentieth century poetry, also Polish poetry, which is agnostic or atheist. Yet the religious content of my poems is not the result of design by a believer; it grew out of my doubts, turmoil, and despair, as they searched for a form. If not for a strong heretical seasoning, the religious content would not have been there. Thus, my resistance to being squeezed into the rubric of "Catholic poet" was well founded."

Hi Susan,

Yes, but still ... "two wrongs don't make a right."
My original comment was for Fred also. And as I always tell my daughter, no matter what anyone or everyone else does, you are responsible for yourself, and you can't go wrong taking the high road.

I hope that one day Fred will realize that if he indeed had any valid point to make on his so-called "technique," his continual spamming and spreading of vitriol only influences people to avoid his message. Obsession is not a pretty thing, and I hope Fred can find a way to overcome it and be happy instead.

Most sincerely,
Becky

Subject: Fwd: Bahai Forums - False TOSs by Mark Foster, Forum Leader

<<Message: Re: Bahai Forums - False TOSs by Mar...>>
Dear Jerry White:

Referring to me as having "long pink ears" is not insulting to me? I beg your pardon. It certainly is. If I were say anything even remotely like this Foster would TOS me. She's obviously taunting me and getting away with it to the delight of Bahai fundamentalists.

In my opinion, Maneck also violates the TOS rules by accusing me of "violating standard netiquette" when she and other Bahais are secretly emailing me, demonizing me on AOL, accusing me of being a covenant breaker (a Bahai heretic), and slander my character in sundry manner. "Unconscionable" is a loaded word that in my view applies to Maneck and Foster's tactics. Please read The Bahai Technique under Libraries if you have not yet a chance to do so.

In the second message below Maneck accuses me of slander, a charge she has repeatedly made with impunity on AOL, for expressing my own opinions about how she and Mark Foster are manipulating the TOS system to suppress Bahais like myself who do not share her fanatic views.

Maneck's own slander of me may be read at

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck1.htm>

The tactics she and other Bahais use against AOL members may be seen at

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

I also believe she and Foster are taking advantage of AOL's TOS system since one can email in just about anything to it and have a TOS lodged against people. That to me constitutes harassment and it is exactly what she and Foster have been doing to me and others in the Bahai Forums. Their intent is clearly to drive us out of the Forums and suppress the availability of all information that fails to pass their rigid criteria of orthodoxy.

That I referred to Mark Foster as the "putative Forum Leader" is not vitriol at all. It is a fact as I see it. He is neither interested in creating a forum, a public space where all citizens may speak freely, nor in leading but rather dominating and manipulating discussion by harassing and driving out people of different points of view. In my view, he does not deserve to be referred to as a Forum Leader but has betrayed the trust placed in him by AOL.

Please note that I had requested that alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai be added to the main menu for Newsgroups for the Bahai Forums. It has yet to be done. My uploading of files, which you referred to, has been suppressed by Foster for spurious reasons seeking to conceal information from Bahais and non-Bahais. To say that that information is available elsewhere is to miss the point. It is NOT available on AOL and many members will not find it on my website. It belongs also for easy convenience, which the Libraries are intended for too, on AOL. Foster constantly uses bogus reasons for his decisions to conceal his real intent of censoring dissident viewpoints. Similarly, he has refused to add a link to my website, The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience on the main menu for Web Sites while allowing many literal-minded fundamentalists to appear there that I and other AOL members and Bahais find narrow, dishonest, and restricting.

I continue to believe the only solution to the censorship that Foster has imposed on AOL is his resignation as Forum Leader or his removal by AOL, as AOL had to remove the former putative Bahai Forum Leader, Vahid whose real name was Edmund. Rather, Shakespearean, really....

Dear Charlotte,

While your annoyance to Fred doing this is well taken and he is certainly violating standard netiquette and perhaps copyright laws in forwarding other's posts, I don't think we can oppose the addition of newsgroups because of the unconscionable behavior of one of its members.

I think it is sufficient reason to refuse to add Mr. Glaysher's own website, however since he has total control of its contents. Besides, it is not like he doesn't "provide" us with that website address on a regular basis.

You're a liar. You claimed you have not targetted me, and you have.... Others have thought so too on AOL. You don't deserve to be called a "Forum Moderator." You're obviously censoring for the Bahai fundamentalists there, as has been done by others on soc.religion.bahai, bahai-discuss, and so forth.

Your specious excuses twisting the TOS rules only redounds to your shame....

Thank you for your more nuanced understanding of what I'm saying. It is the "behavior of some Iranians" within the Bahai Faith that I disapprove of and have always said so. There are exceptions. The general

Quite deeply, actually.... I've spent considerable parts of my adult life studying the Bahai Writings and the classical Iranian writers. If I had no respect for Iranians per se, I would certainly not have bothered. The accusation of racism against me is but merely another form of the Bahai Technique, in my opinion....

I would be quite interested in reading Draper's book as well. I have looked for it in the past but was unable at the time to find a copy of it. It should be fascinating reading as a crucial text influencing Abdu-l'Baha's intellectual development.

Sarah I love the poems you sent ..here is one you may like...

The troubles outside seem so far away.
The fighting of wars, making a world decay.
But here in my private little world,
I feel safe and secure, like a little girl.

But in my private retreat it's great.
So different from the world outside, a world full of hate.
I find only peace and love to surround me here.
The feeling of goodness like God is near.

So let me be a little girl so small,
Then I won't have to worry at all.
I'll stay here where I'm safe from the world.
I'll face tomorrow when I'm not a little girl.
I'll settle down with a day dream or two,
After the work is all done and the house is all clean.
Feeling like a little girl, that is hiding from time,
Knowing that I'm grown up in body and mind.

But WAIT, I can't give up my private little world.
Maybe I'll just give up being a little girl.
Life is hard when you are a grown up, it's so much colder.
Oh well, I'll worry about it tomorrow...when I'm older.

Gary,
The only method that works is to rename (or mark as hidden, or delete) all instances of WIN.COM on your hard drives, and then run setup from the DOS prompt.

Info courtesy of Sean Erwins's Windows 98 FAQ at <https://www.listmaker.net/win98/index.html#upgrade> .

Hope this helps!

Dear abuse@usa.net

Someone has been using an account at testcase2@usa.net for nearly a month now to bombard my FG@hotmail.com account with false subscriptions to listservs. Two listserv administrators at Indiana.edu have helped a lot to figure out where it's coming from and I include their messages below along with the header and message of one piece of mailing showing testcase2@usa.net in the FROM.

If you could turn off that account completely it would really help. I also ask you to identify to me who the person is behind the spam so that I might be able to do something about it. They've begun a second wave of attacks just yesterday and today from lists at www.onelist.com whom I've notified but seem to still be passing many of the messages, though not all, through the testcase2@usa.net address. The last message here shows that address again.

I had 475 messages in my inbox this morning most from this account testcase2@usa.net

Thanks in advance for anything you can do to stop this.

Desperately in need of your help,

FG

Gary,
The only method that works is to rename (or mark as hidden, or delete) all instances of WIN.COM on your hard drives, and then run setup from the DOS prompt.

I was especially struck by this once reading the Mathnawi and simply put it aside and have never had any desire to pick it up again. Much Bahai "literature" strikes me the same way....

<<As a MEMBER OF THE BAHAI FAITH for over 23 YEARS,>>

Fred -

You make a big point, both in these folders & in your web site, about how long you've been a Bahá'í & how devoted you are to the Faith. If this is true, then I have a question for you - Why do you have links on your web site to Christian & Muslim sites which declare Bahá'u'lláh to be a false prophet & the Bahá'í Faith to be a corruption of true religion (I'm speaking specifically of "Bahá'í Christian Fireside Letters" & "Answering Bahá'u'lláh")? This is not consistent w/ your claims of devotion.

In love and brotherhood,
Roy

This person is threatening me in a manner that only Bahais can do to other Bahais and which non-Bahais may entirely fail to perceive: He's intimating I'm disloyal to the Bahai Faith and its teachings and therefore a "covenant breaker," the worst accusation a Bahai can make of another. I request that you place a TOS on his account for this coercive tactic.

Fred -

As a further note, the "Answering Bahá'u'lláh" web site displays a copy of Bahá'u'lláh's picture. The Universal House of Justice has given guidance on this matter:

"Concerning the question of display of the photograph of Baha'u'llah, the Guardian's instructions were that this should be done only with the utmost reverence, and then only on special occasions."
(From a letter dated 1 August 17 written by the Universal House of Justice to an individual believer)

"It would be good to advise the young Persian believer who has this picture that, while we do not wish to suggest that he should remove the photograph from his book, it would be inappropriate for him to show it to others in a casual manner. As you know, the photograph of Baha'u'llah is very precious and it should be handled with due reverence and respect."

(From a letter dated 7 February 1972 written by the Universal House of Justice to an individual believer)

"The portraits of the Bab and Baha'u'llah should be shown infrequently and on very special occasions, such as a special observance connected with an event intimately associated with the Forerunner or Founder of our Faith.

"We do not think that the regular National Convention is such a special occasion, and we feel that the privilege of displaying these very precious portraits should not be abused."

(From a letter dated 12 July 1973 written by the Universal House of Justice to the National Spiritual Assembly of Panama)

Obviously, the creators of the web site had no such concerns regarding reverence. That someone professing to be a Bahá'í would create a link to this site on his own web site doesn't speak well for that person's profession of devotion to the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

In love and brotherhood,

Roy

This person is also intimating that I'm a covenant breaker and therefore a heretic. As a Bahai in good standing for more than 23 years, I find this insulting and request that you place a TOS on his account.

<< That someone professing to be a Bahá'í would create a link to this site on his own web site doesn't speak well for that person's profession of devotion to the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh. >>

Roy,

Of course there is a big difference between being a Baha'i, and being "a member of the Baha'i Faith". The person who you quoted just said he is "a member". 'Abdul-Baha was clear about what the qualities of a true Baha'i are.

True Baha'is believe in peace and unity, love, harmony, friendliness and fellowship with their fellow believers and humankind in general. They also engage themselves in service to humankind. The absence of those qualities shows a lack of Baha'i spirit, which is central to our Faith.

No matter how much some people offer their love and friendship, some others insist on eyeing it with suspicion and hatred. That is not the Baha'i way.

So be it. To them their religion, and to us, our religion.

where it's coming from and I include their messages below along with the header and message of one piece of mailing showing testcase2@usa.net in the FROM.

If you could turn off that account completely it would really help. I also ask you to identify to me who the person is behind the spam so that I might be able to do something about it. They've begun a second wave of attacks just yesterday and today from lists at www.onelist.com whom I've notified but seem to still be passing many of the messages, though not all, through the testcase2@usa.net address. The last message here shows that address again.

I had 475 messages in my inbox this morning most from this account testcase2@usa.net and another 319 this afternoon!!

Thanks in advance for anything you can do to stop this.

Desperately in need of your help,

FG

Gary,

The only method that works is to rename (or mark as hidden, or delete) all instances of WIN.COM on your hard drives, and then run setup from the DOS prompt.

<https://www.listmaker.net/win98/index.html#upgrade> .

Hope this helps!

Readiness Disclosure Statement

Re: Testing of Biomedical Equipment by Users.

If you are concerned about the voiding a system warranty by doing your testing, it infers you are talking about a relatively new system, in which case such testing ought to have been provided for in the contract. We at Catholic Healthcare West have decided not to rely merely on statements from the vendor with respect to mission critical systems. All mission critical systems are being tested, including all interfaces. For newly installed systems, we include such right to test in the contract, and to test as per our scripts. For older systems, we obtain not merely a Y2K compliance statement, but all test scripts and results thereof. We also seek copies from the vendor of any third party verification of such testing. And then we test the application ourselves.

You should note that many public Y2K Statements have the same caption as I have above, that is, they are given pursuant to the Federal Year 2000 Information and Readiness Disclosure Act that such statement cannot be used against the issuer in any legal action, with certain exceptions. Therefore, often the public Y2K Statement by a vendor are no more than a heads up, leaving you to decide whether you want to act on it or not. Where there are patient lives at risk, due diligence warrants that you treat such statements as informational only; nothing more. I have not heard that the FDA is advising hospitals to the contrary. And even if they were, until they put their dollars on the line or appropriate regulation is passed, their advice is but circumstantial evidence at best on what the standard for due diligence should be.

The statement given above is personal and has not been approved or endorsed by CHW. Austin O'Flynn

Debra --

I recently gave a speech to a medical society on Y2K issues that included a discussion about the status of biomedical devices. Research for the presentation clearly indicated that there are conflicting opinions about whether reliance on a vendor's claim of Y2K compliance is adequate, or whether the equipment should be tested independently by an experienced engineer. Hospitals have been cautious about relying on vendor certification, especially when the devices are critical to the welfare of patients. A New Zealand hospital reported that it had tested a number of pieces of one type of medical equipment and found that half were not Y2K compliant. This alarmed the hospital since the vendor had certified that the equipment was Y2K compliant. Some hospitals maintain that it is not only necessary to self test a particular device, but every single sample--a tedious and expensive process. I can supply the citations for the above, which do not represent formal medical studies but rather observations from medical practitioners. I would be interested in listserv opinion on what constitutes due diligence in this matter.

Louise

Hi,

I was wondering why DLLHOST.EXE remains active after local or remote instatiation of a Java COM object.

After running Rational Purify on my application, I found two stubborn interface pointer leaks:

[W] ILK: COM Interface leak from interface pointer 0x77bc9198, allocated in CoGetMalloc

Leak from IMalloc interface with reference count of 2 (0x77bc9198)

Allocation location

CoGetMalloc+0xc [C:\WINNT\SYSTEM32\ole32.dll

ip=0x67b2175c]
    VariantTimeToSystemTime+0x147e [C:\WINNT\SYSTEM32\oleaut32.dll

    JITResolveInterface+0x902 [C:\WINNT\System32\msjava.dll

[W] ILK: COM Interface leak from interface pointer 0x7c0da8f8, allocated in CoGetClassObject
    Leak from IClassFactory interface with reference count of 1 (0x7c0da8f8)
    Allocation location
    CoGetClassObject+0xc [C:\WINNT\SYSTEM32\ole32.dll

Could this be the reason for keeping DLLHOST.exe active or is there another explanation?

If yes, is there a solution/workaround for my problem? I explicitly release my interface pointers and set my COM objects to null after using them.

Richard.

I believe Ron is touching on something quite significant about in dealing with soc.religion.bahai, the BCCA, Bahais on Usenet nauseatingly spiritual and self-righteous who have been the most hypocritical, dishonest, and hateful in their opposition to the Dale touches here on a valid criticism of Bahai "Firesides." They are usually indoctrination sessions with little to no give and take.

In general, really, my fellow Bahais are incapable of "engaging sincere dissent." All they are taught to do by the UHJ is categorically condemn it, shun it, and pat oneself on the back....

I respect Dale's site and his sincerely held Christian beliefs.

This is a most interesting statement of Dr. Cole's which has been posted here, wherein he reaffirms his continuing belief in Baha'u'llah. He also expresses confusion as to why anyone might have suggested that he was in any way challenging the Covenant. While there were no doubt numerous mistakes made in the manner in which Dr. Cole and some other academics were dealt with, it seems to me that there are and were some legitimate concerns involved from the standpoint of the Covenant. Leaving aside a discussion of who did what to whom, I would like to focus on just one passage from Dr. Cole's present statement. Juan wrote:

>I abhor schism and urge all Baha'is to recognize the legitimate >authority of the Universal House of Justice in its legitimate spheres of >authority;

Now it may be that I am misunderstand Juan here, but the question that arises in my mind is would Juan arrogate to individual Baha'is the right to decide whether or not the Universal House of Justice *is* operating within "its legitimate sphere of authority"? If so, it is clear that the Covenant would thereby be deprived of its very purpose, namely to maintain the unity of the community in responsiveness to God, for anyone could now choose to violate the directives and ignore the policies of the House on the grounds that the person didn't happen to believe the House was acting within its proper "sphere." The Covenant would thereby become meaningless and we would thereby be subject to the very kind schisms which Juan says he decries, for some could even go so far as to suggest that the House of Justice itself has violated the Covenant.

warmest,

if not the entire problem – is that of ego. --Rob

In my experience, Rob, the Egos of Greatest Destruction have been select Baha'i VIPs with incorrigible egos who preach loyalty to the Covenant every chance they get. These people, because of this kind of posturing (for self-aggrandizement), in my observation, have done far more harm to the Faith than the people stigmatized as "Covenant-breakers," however justified or incorrect. The covenantbreakers are just easier targets.....while the Big Fish get away with murder. It's all a matter of perspective. It's the people with hidden agendas we need to worry about, not the soap box preachers of questionable information.

>Any authority that gets in the way of achieving their aims becomes suspect in their eyes.

Maybe. But before you cast Juan Cole (see post heading) as a traitor here, you'd have to walk in his shoes first....something few Baha'is here have done. As far as I know, the House hasn't branded him a covenantbreaker. Until then, we shouldn't even be arguing this in reference to him.

>God preserve us from falling into such a trap.

The hysteria surrounding this issue is itself a self-deceptive trap. If you don't agree with someone like him, simply ignore his message. But he has every right to express his sincere beliefs (however critical) like anyone else.....as other people have a right to listen if they so choose. We can be democratic about this, after all.

I believe Foster is using his power to target people with TOSs to silence and intimidate them and he does it here as well by deleting the person's message. Asserting false TOSs against people violates the TOS rules, and Foster does it constantly in my opinion.

The ones he's alleged against me are the same type and that's why I refused and refuse to accept the burden of emailing you TOSsed messages. AOL has them. I'm innocent untill proven guilty. The burden of proof is on you and Foster.

He continues to use his "authority" to the detriment of AOL members he disagrees with for religious reasons. I and others, for instance, requested a Folder titled "Bahai Censorship." He created one titled merely Censorship which misses the entire point of the Forum. Further, I've requested since August that alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai be added to the Newsgroup menu along with soc.religion.bahai, the fundamentalist newsgroup. He has continually made excuses and continues to drag it along.

I believe it's your responsibility to act as a fair arbiter and intervene. Notice it's a fair request. Alt.religion.bahai has had over 30,000 posts to it and existed since April of 1997. Talk.religion.bahai, newly formed on a Big 8 hierarchy, had 1,700+ posts in its first month.

AOL should not support the fundamentalists in what is essentially a legitimate debate over religious interpretations but allow a free and open discussion, which Foster is doing everything in his power to stymie.

It is my belief that their "legitimate sphere of authority" irrelevant, especially in terms of individual rights and free speech and liberty.

I hope my website documents many of the events of the last the Majnun incidents before long, not to mention the events now on AOL which have affected more people than just myself....

The spammer at testcase2@usa.net is definitely not running an opt-in mailing list. I DID NOT request 1,700 pieces of onelist.com email in a period of TWO days. My name is extremely rare and no else has owned my address.

Please help stop this bombarding of my account by deleting his and my address from every list you may run.

Thank you.

This is very unfortunate and quite sinister what the bahais on AOL did to you. I had my account terminated twice, and all I did was get a new account on a different credit (my mom's credit card so they wont recognize my first name). Please dont let the fundamentalists win, meaning that if you dont ever get back on AOL again. You need to stand up for what's right, and not let tyranny make you quit. When my account was cancelled twice, in a few minutes I was back on AOL with a different account and screen name because I knew that injustice will never make me into a quitter. I hope you will do the same. I am not sure if they will recognize your name if you use a credit card with the same name, because on the first time my account was cancelled I use another credit card with my name and nothing unusual happened. The second time I used my mom's credit card because I didnt have any more credit cards. But I hope to see you soon and back on AOL. Being back on AOL is a slap to the faces on the bahais who were sucessful in their campaign in kicking you off. The next post I will tell you about what happened while I was in the bahai chat, and what Wendy said about you.

Two days ago I was in the bahai chat room when I discussed bahai censorship with Wendy. I asked her about the treatment of some bahais when it came to independent thinking, and I cited you as an example. Wendy further said that Fred Glaysher is not a bahai and he might have some mental problems. I asked her why she said that about you, she replied that you spread lies about the bahai faith, you attack people with no reason at all, and you are trying to boost your ego. I told her what about all the personal verbal attacks against you, she said that you deserve such "criticism" because you have shown nothing but evil. I wonder where is Wendy's "compassion." Wendy said that bahais love everybody including their enemies, but how she expressed herself about you seem to be a clear cut contradiction to that principle.

You're welcome. You can post my message, I feel that letting people know what's going on is something that we need to do. Is it possible to give me a link to "talk.religion.bahai?" I for some reason never tried to go and see that place, mainly because I really didn't know where it was exactly. Also, will you updating your web page any time soon? Would you also list the posts from you and others that were yanked off by Mark?

Thanks.

Sure will list my and others' suppressed posts. Send anything you have and get them on as soon as I can which may take a while though.

On AOL go Keyword Newsgroups and then Expert Add talk.religion.bahai and it should be right there for you. Let me know if you can't find it.

So they finally did it. I'm not surprised because most of the regulars at the AOL board (there are many more where they came from) are the intolerant supporters of Baha'i orthodoxy. And then you have the rabid fanatics (mostly women in my opinion) who think they own the Baha'i faith ("Don't you go messing with MY religion, buddy!"). Even some Baha'is who've recently joined the Faith think it's their exclusive club and that you and I were born yesterday--that we're the unwelcome Strangers in the Night. The irony is that they're reducing the religions of both the Bab and Baha'u'llah to a series of sentimental tea cliques and spoiled brat clubs for women. I had higher hopes, but what can you accomplish when you're routinely perceived as one of the enemy to be shunned.

It's their shunning mentality, backed up by select writings, that kills it for me. (They conveniently forget the other writings about fanaticism, reason over emotion, justice, etc.) The more they hold those self-serving writings up like a crucifix and cloves of garlic, the more resigned I am never to support the Baha'i faith again. If they want enemies, they'll have them. And their definition of the word "enemy" is: "Think like us or you're not one of us."

One of our friends recently told me: The Baha'is like Wendy, Sunni and Zaynab are doing untold damage to the reputation of the Faith themselves (in they eyes of neutral lurkers) with their narrow-minded, smug and exclusionary attitudes...and that the harm they're doing to the Faith is an unrecognized justice. They're their own worst enemies but they're too filled with "holy certitude" to know this. They think I'm the one with a screw loose.....but that's another story.

Let me know how things ultimately turn out for you. There's no one else to side with me at the board anymore (as PL has left and Larry is too turned off) and the regular crowd is giving me the cold shoulder in the hope that I'll just leave. I've pretty much done that for now.

Mark's arrival has somehow dulled everything. It was better when it was a free-for-all and the non-Bahai folder was at the top of the list. The threat of censorship chills everything.

I was also surprised to learn that many of the regulars at the board like Wendy, Roger, Debbie and some others are far older than I me. I'll be 46 myself this May.

Please keep these thoughts confidential or they'll hang me with them. Thanks. Take care, friend.

<<Message: Re: Bahais terminate my AOL account ...>>
Sure, Fred. Give me some time to make a revision that's more instructive than inflammatory (I've got some errands to run today). I think it's always best to try to reach (communicate with) the opposite camp instead of inspiring more of the hatred that blinds them. And then there are the neutral observers that need to be informed too without doing serious harm to the sincere ideals and aims that the Faith has to offer.
Best wishes.

Until later.....Rule

Fred, I followed the stream of thought of our last e-mail discussion by mentioning similar points (the one's that I wanted to reword) in some AOL board folders.

I was replying to comments (to earlier postings of mine) by Wendy and Roy. Wendy was saying I wasn't a Baha'i in the Forum Leader folder (not entirely true--but still none of her business) and in the Baha'i Laws folder, Roy was encouraging me to turn in my Baha'i card and "gracefully bow out." Anyway, I took the opportunity to express my views. Just wanted you to know. --Rule

PS--I've noticed that the discussions at the Baha'i Studies list rarely stoop to the levels we've encountered at the B. spirituality board. Susan also sounds closer to some of our positions there, despite her committed allegiance to the UHJ/Covenant. I would have been better suited to that site....less frustrated, perhaps.

The Bahai fascists in the Administration did not "allow" talk.religion.bahai to be passed. They definitely fought it tooth and nail right up to the very last shrieks of Susan Maneck.... Once again, it was non-Bahais who voted for and created talk.religion.bahai. The record is in the RESULT on my website and elsewhere for those who care to look more in detail.

Let me mention that the moment trb passed, the fundamentalists dug in their heels on AOL by bringing back Mark Foster as "Forum Leader." More on that shortly.

Subject: Bahai Censorship on AOL

In August of 1998 I took out an account on AOL. It quickly became apparent that my fellow Bahais were using AOL in such a way as to further suppress knowledge and information.

It appeared to me that there were four main issues.

Alt.religion.bahai, which had been created in April of 1997 and which had had more than 20,000 messages posted to it, was not even offered in the list of AOL newsgroups. AOL personnel with which I spoke over the phone were very puzzled why it wasn't and even implied that some action would have had to have been taken to keep it from automatically being picked up and added to their newsgroups. It took more than a month of strenuous effort to get AOL to add alt.religion.bahai.

On the AOL Bahai Forums it became apparent that Bahais were manipulating and controlling information by NOT making it available, by essentially preserving the frozen, non-functioning state of affairs or the status quo:

1. The Libraries were not accepting new uploads for others then to download and read.
2. The list of Newsgroups on the Main Menu for Bahai offered only soc.religion.bahai with no mention of alt.religion.bahai or talk.religion.bahai once it was created in January of 1999. Coupled with soc.religion.bahai's suppression of all mention of alt.religion.bahai or talk.religion.bahai, this prevents people new to AOL from even hearing of their existence.
3. The available links for Web Sites on the Main Menu for Bahai did not offered my website The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience, though it has to be one of the most visited sites on the Bahai Faith with more than 7,000 hits since May 1998.

As the months went by my repeated attempts to improve these deficiencies met with greater and greater opposition from the Bahai fundamentalists on AOL. Similiarly, my requests, beginning in August of 1998, that the Forum Leader, Mark Foster, who no one had seen for months, resign, for derilection of duty, were increasingly opposed while various excuses were offered for his absence. Not until talk.religion.bahai was passed five months later in January 1999 did he suddenly reappear only to begin immediately reporting absolutely EVERY message I posted to AOL as a TOS. It quickly became clearly to me that he was back in order to target and build a case against me to have me suspended from AOL. My account was then temporarily suspended on three different occasions and finally terminated March 6, 1999.

Of the four issues, only two have partially been remedied.

1. Alt.religion.bahai and now talk.religion.bahai are available on AOL's list of newsgroups.
2. The Libraries are accepting some uploads though Foster banned the 15+ megabytes I uploaded in late February of my entire archive of discussion for talk.religion.bahai and which is at least available on my website. It's obvious Foster is finding pretexts for suppressing uploads.

While Foster has claimed since mid-January that alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai would be added to the Main Menu under Newsgroups, he continued to make excuses for it not happening.

As of March 9, 1999 they were not yet listed under Newsgroups along with soc.religion.bahai.

All of these factors, coupled with Mark Foster's abuse of his position as Forum Leader and his harassing and targetting of dissenting voices leaves no doubt in my mind that he and other Bahais, undoubtedly some among the Bahai Administration, are involved in censoring discourse on AOL.

The immediate pretext for terminating my account, according to the AOL official with whom I spoke with on the phone, was that I had point out in a newly created Folder called Censorship that I and other AOL members requested one titled Bahai Censorship and thereby undermined the authority of the Forum Leader....

In closing let me add that AOL personnel are extremely uninformed about the Bahai Faith, especially its practice of censorship, and it's ability to exploit its TOS system....

Don't trust Susan. I've watched her on Looking again at your message, I'm not sure you need to revise it. I could post it as from an AOL member who request anonymity. I don't see anything in it that would identify you:

FYI - TO PROTECT THE INNOCENT:

So they finally did it. I'm not surprised because most of the regulars at the AOL board (there are many more where they came from) are the intolerant supporters of Baha'i orthodoxy. And then you have the rabid fanatics (mostly women in my opinion) who think they own the Baha'i faith ("Don't you go messing with MY religion, buddy!"). Even some Baha'is who've recently joined the Faith think it's their exclusive club and that you and I were born yesterday--that we're the unwelcome Strangers in the Night. The irony is that they're reducing the religions of both the Bab and Baha'u'llah to a series of sentimental tea cliques and spoiled brat clubs for women. I had higher hopes, but what can you accomplish when you're routinely perceived as one of the enemy to be shunned.

It's their shunning mentality, backed up by select writings, that kills it for me. (They conveniently forget the other writings about fanaticism, reason over emotion, justice, etc.) The more they hold those self-serving writings up like a crucifix and cloves of garlic, the more resigned I am never to support the Baha'i faith again. If they want enemies, they'll have them. And their definition of the word "enemy" is: "Think like us or you're not one of us."

One of our friends recently told me: The Baha'is like Wendy, Sunni and Zaynab are doing untold damage to the reputation of the Faith themselves (in their eyes of neutral lurkers) with their narrow-minded, smug and exclusionary attitudes...and that the harm they're doing to the Faith is an unrecognized justice. They're their own worst enemies but they're too filled with "holy certitude" to know this. They think I'm the one with a screw loose.....but that's another story.

Let me know how things ultimately turn out for you. There's no one else to side with me at the board anymore (as PL has left and Larry is too turned off) and the regular crowd is giving me the cold shoulder in the hope that I'll just leave. I've pretty much done that for now.

Mark's arrival has somehow dulled everything. It was better when it was a free-for-all and the non-Bahai folder was at the top of the list. The threat of censorship chills everything.

I was also surprised to learn that many of the regulars at the board like Wendy, Roger, Debbie and some others are far older than I am.
I'll be 46 myself this May.

Dear Fred,

I've edited the following Email you sent me (representing my previous message). Such revision is necessary or all the people I've mentioned will get hurt--not my intention. I want to avoid the personal and just speak to the issue. Because of select words in my original message, some Baha'is would know right away that I'd written it (and they might anyway). So I've changed them too. Yes, you can leave my name off it this time so readers will just consider the message on its own merits. People will be more accepting of my criticisms if they're not quite so harsh (words that were written when I was upset). After all, my target audience is a general one, representing all kinds of lurkers. We have to be tactful and accurate in the final analysis.

Thank you.

>So they finally did it [terminated your account]. I'm not surprised because some of the regulars at the AOL board (there are many more where they came from) are the intolerant supporters of Baha'i orthodoxy. And then you have a few zealous extremists who think they own the copyright on the name Baha'i ("Don't you go messing with MY religion, buddy!").

Because some Baha'is don't know "the opposition" well, they imagine we were born yesterday and haven't studied the Writings; that we're the unwelcome Strangers in the Night. The sad irony is that they're reducing the religions of the Bab and Baha'u'llah to a series of sentimental tea cliques and spoiled brat clubs for society's disfranchised women. I had higher hopes, but what can you accomplish when you're routinely perceived as one of the enemy to be shunned?

Fred, you need to take this version down immediately and replace it with the one I sent you this morning. This will burn all my bridges as Baha'is and non-Baha'is will be forwarding it to others. Larry won't like it either because it was sent out without his permission.

Oh God, I thought you'd wait long enough for my response. I'm writing under this screen name because I'd didn't see it under my other one. Some of the Baha'is I mentioned below are friends who won't like being listed in this context. I'm embarrassed and saddened. Zaynab, for instance, changed toward me in recent days--now she'll think I've stabbed her in the back.

Its sad what happened to you, I hope things will work out for the better. I often am in the bahai chats, and some of the bahais like Wendy, Zaynab, and Jool are elated at your non-presence on AOL. It is kind of sad that they will consider you as a non-bahai and a mad man. I see often from people like then a snobbish type of I am better than you and I will not deal with those below me type of attitude. They give the impression that they are real bahais and anybody who is not up to their standards are less bahai are not bahai at all. Of course as you know I dont agree with the bahai faith, but that doesnt mean I will not stand up for a fellow human being when he is being oppressed or suppressed without right. In this case, a person's religion is irrelevant, but his honor and him being human is relevant. I have seen persons or groups of people try to bring down a person, but I never saw such a well-organized campaign of trying to take a person down all because his views on censorships are too much for them to handle.

Barthaman, you are also Ruletherod, apparently?

I wouldn't worry about burning bridges with the Bahai fanatics since none really exist.... Who's Larry?

You can blame it on me. My fellow Bahais need to hear the undiluted Truth.... I'm sorry if you're mad at me for posting it. I waited a few days and asked you if it would be okay anonymously. I clipped your name and closing and don't really think it will matter since the fanatics have gone into the shunning mode with anything I post.

Other people too need to know the truth....

You're first draft has more vigor and life to it.

Private conversations are often candidly to the point because we're assuming our words are not being lurked upon by the people who would be most offended -- including the people we care about. When we think otherwise, we're less candid with the truth.....unless it's a public forum.....and even there we don't invite people into our locker rooms to study our anatomy.

I realize the misunderstanding in this instance. However, my silly comment about some people being older than me may be taken wrong by some as a putdown -- and age has nothing to do with the issues we've been addressing. Anyway, I hope that when the dust clouds finally settle I won't be a handful of bones six feet under.....with my soul stored in someone's freezer.

Mr. Mahdi,

Thanks for saying all this. I appreciate hearing from someone on AOL who's fair and honest about what is taking place there. You fully understand the complexity of the deceit that some Bahais are committing there, unlike the people in charge of the AOL TOS system.

I've posted your message on talk.religion.bahai. Hope you don't mind. I think others would benefit from hearing your views too.

The significant point in all this is the fact that Bahais

The "compilations" mentality is part of the problem of Bahai fundamentalism. It often has led to a narrow-minded, literal ignorance lording itself over others and driving people

Ms. Maneck's quip does not respond to the fact that Juan Cole and she herself acknowledged approximately a month ago that a new Bahai inquisition in the midwest had begun. Perhaps she would like to share with people on Usenet the verdict....

I can only take her earlier remark regarding her being more "effective" on the bahai-studies mailing list to refer to her ability to censor and manipulate the discussion there as she and Mark Foster have done on AOL, and he in his previous position as the "moderator" of bahai-studies. Incidentally, evidence of Foster's censoring me on bahai-studies may be found in my archives on my website by searching for his name in files roughly a year to a year and a half ago.

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected;
and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas,
amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world.
Moreover, if interrogation of conscience, which is one of the private possessions of the heart and the soul, take place in this world, what further recompense remains for man in the court of divine justice at the day of general resurrection? Convictions and ideas are within the scope of the comprehension of the King of kings, not of kings;

and soul and conscience are between the fingers of control of the Lord of hearts, not of [His] servants."

Fredrick,

I have read your reposts today. I see you have requoted Juan Cole; I guess because it is a public e-mail, that is okay to do?

I thought your letter to the UHJ was a move in the right direction. While I do not support extremes of liberty (as Baha'u'llah has written), I am distressed at the closing down of dialog, Talisman 1 - and I think you should get an answer to your letter(s).

I do not equate the killing of an Iranian Bahai to be equal to the supressing of certain literature -- killing is worse. I do think there is an overboard attempt to get writing campaigns at every killing. Wasn't it Shoghi Effendi who prohibited Bahai's from leaving Iran? And now because of Fundamentalistic Muslims - they are being killed.

The effort a few months ago to actually go to school officials in local communities to protest the closing of a Bahai college -- that was way overboard -- and in that instance I could agree that it would be hypocritical to ban publications and yet protest the closing of a college.

Well I originally wrote not to critique your article but to ask you a few questions...

Are you still a Bahai? With some Bahais resigning or being forced out, I wasn't sure what your status was.

Was there ever pressure put on you to resign?

In the unlikely case anything I write here is of interest in stimulating other conversation and because I am not sure of net etiquette, here is the following request -- Do not put this or any part of this on your web site, trb, or any other internet or other place. You may however excerpt parts from it without naming me, however I would prefer if you just take these ideas as your own.

(I am a Bahai from NJ)

The reality of the situation is that both these Bahais have repeatedly attacked and attempted or been successful at censoring other Bahais and non-Bahais in several different forums.

Alas, you seem to be right.... The Bahai Faith appears to be in the grips of a narrow-minded fanaticism that's thoroughly intolerant of the liberty and freedom of conscience its Founders lauded and respected. Like most reactionary coups, this one

Not in the least extreme nor incendiary.... The UHJ has betrayed the Teachings of Baha'u'llah on freedom of speech and individual liberty. It's consistently support the fundamentalists and fanatics on soc.religion.bahai, the BCCA mailing lists, AOL, and elsewhere in cyberspace. Offline, there's an irrefutable record of Bahai abuse of the consciences of many, many Bahais and non-Bahais.

The responsibility for these many acts of suppression and censorship lies in the hands of the members of the UHJ.

You might read Juan Cole's Modernity & the Millennium, available from Columbia University Press, for a discussion of Baha'u'llah and Abud'l-Baha's commitment to values that the UHJ has definitely abandoned and undermined.

Can't say I'm surprised.... She has on many occasions

It is true that she and the supposed "Forum Leader"

Juan Cole, February 13, 1999:
"It is a very, very, very weird religion. And if anyone is reading Susan Maneck's absolutely bone-chilling screeds on the desirability of Heresy Trials and carefulness in Shunning, they are seeing what it is like at the core of the religion."

"I really am sorry for them and her, since they seem sort of filled with hate and quite paranoid, yet say they are preaching love, unity and tolerance. Susan will say, 'may your abdomen be split by lightning and your guts fall out you filthy heretic whom I wish I could just have shunned and buried', and then she'll sign herself "warmest" and slander a university by adding it to her sig line. As if what she is about has anything at all to do with *universities*!"

FG, February 15, 1999:
"Ms. Maneck's approach appears to me to be always to shunt the discussion off or back to who said what where when why how and so on.... The farther back in time the better, since the person's memory, being human, is bound to be unable to keep up or to have stocked the evidence needed on his or her hard drive or find it on dejanews.com. And it then allows her to claim pretty much anything she wants to while seeming to have discredited her opponent. Further, she relies on the tactics of demagoguery knowing they usually prevail and will be supported by other fundamentalist Bahais. By shrieking "slander" and referring to others' opinions as "garbage," she is able to create an emotional atmosphere that essentially negates whatever the topic or content might be and that allows her to appear to win what is often a narrowly legalistic point or interpretation."

"All of this is done, of course, in conjunction with her employing the more common Bahai techniques of intimidation and psychological demonization and terrorism."

Mr. Mahdi,

I wonder whether you've noticed if alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai have yet been added to the Newsgroup menu on the main Bahai menu?

I had asked Foster to do it in the middle of January and he continued to drag his feet on it and make excuses about it. They obviously don't want the 14+ million people on AOL to know about either one.

I'd appreciate it if you could check and let us know on talk.religion.bahai.

Thanks.

Fred

Subject: Bahai Bullies & the UHJ's Fundamentalism

I'm alarmed at the recent Bahai attempts, by someone writing under the pseudonym Gyr Falcon and others, at character assassination, ridicule, and generally portraying me and others as disturbed individuals. Please notice that the Bahai who is hiding behind Gyr Falcon has also been posting false messages under my name yet not a single Bahai has protested his doing so.

I have never claimed to be perfect. At times I have apologized to Bahais, Muslims, and other non-Bahais when I felt, or was convinced, that I was wrong or had spoken unfairly. I find the constant technique to portray me as a megalomaniac or paranoid quite offensive.

Fair-minded Bahai and non-Bahai observers may judge for themselves whether my and others' allegations of censorship are valid by reading the "Assorted Controversial Documents" on my website at

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

As further corroboration that I am not the only person concerned with the intolerance and censorship that has overtaken the Bahai Faith, I recommend Professor Juan Cole's new book Modernity & the Millennium: The Genesis of the Bahai Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East, available through Columbia University Press or Amazon.com at

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/o/qid=924015204/sr=2-1/002-1823748-4014252>

In his conclusion, which would never have passed the system of Bahai "review" that the UHJ imposes on all publications brought out under their control, Professor Cole quite accurately identifies the distortions that have been wreaked upon Baha'u'llah's Teachings:

"Some contemporary leaders of the Baha'i Faith have given answers increasingly similar to those of fundamentalists, stressing scriptural literalism, patriarchy, theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values. While the values of the nineteenth-century Baha'i movement, which was far more tolerant, continue to exist as a minority view, by the late 1990s a different set of emphases prevailed." (196)

He himself and many others have suffered at the hands of the fundamentalists who have taken control of the religion:

"The rise of academic Baha'i scholarship has caused tension in the community, whose present-day leadership tends to be fundamentalist and antiliberal in orientation, and this has led to pressure on a number of prominent academics to resign or dissociate themselves from the movement." (201)

These same forces of fundamentalist orthodoxy are evident on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai for impartial viewers to witness. They will be evident to all perceptive observers of whatever forum Bahais may be trying to influence.

As a Bahai for more than 23 years, I myself have always found especially repulsive the manner in which Bahai fundamentalists attempt to manipulate the institutions and leaders of government, the United Nations, and public opinion, while pretending to values they deride in private or at Bahai-only meetings.

Ultimately, it is the Bahai Universal House of Justice that is responsible for the perversion and corruption of such clear and elevating teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha as the following:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world."

Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

The UHJ is in the end responsible for inciting Bahai fanatics and fundamentalists to attack other Bahais and non-Bahais merely for their views expressed on and off line in free forums of public discussion.

I recommend all newcomers to these matters read "The Bahai Technique":

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

As further corroboration that I am not the only person concerned with the intolerance and censorship that has overtaken the Bahai Faith, I recommend Professor Juan Cole's new book Modernity & the Millennium: The Genesis of the Bahai Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East, available through Columbia University Press or Amazon.com at

In his conclusion, which would never have passed the system of Bahai "review" that the UHJ imposes on all publications brought out under their control, Professor Cole quite accurately identifies the distortions that have been wreaked upon Baha'u'llah's Teachings:

"Some contemporary leaders of the Baha'i Faith have given answers increasingly similar to those of fundamentalists, stressing scriptural literalism, patriarchy, theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values. While the values of the nineteenth-century Baha'i movement, which was far more tolerant, continue to exist as a minority view, by the late 1990s a different set of emphases prevailed." (196)

He himself and many others have suffered at the hands of the fundamentalists who have taken control of the religion:

"The rise of academic Baha'i scholarship has caused tension in the community, whose present-day leadership tends to be fundamentalist and antiliberal in orientation, and this has led to pressure on a number of prominent academics to resign or dissociate themselves from the movement." (201)

These same forces of fundamentalist orthodoxy are evident on talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai for impartial viewers to witness. They will be evident to all perceptive observers of whatever forum Bahais may be trying to influence.

As a Bahai for more than 23 years, I myself have always found especially repulsive the manner in which Bahai fundamentalists attempt to manipulate the institutions and leaders of government, the United Nations, and public opinion, while pretending to values they deride in private or at Bahai-only meetings.

Ultimately, it is the Bahai Universal House of Justice that is responsible for the perversion and corruption of such clear and elevating teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha as the following:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world."

Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

The UHJ is in the end responsible for inciting Bahai fanatics and fundamentalists to attack other Bahais and non-Bahais merely for their views expressed on and off line in free forums of public discussion.

I recommend all newcomers to these matters read "The Bahai Technique":

Let me thank you for your book Modernity & the profound pleasure to read an intelligent work by a fellow Bahai on the great divide of modernity and Baha'u'llah's grappling with its awesome forces....

It's a pity and lasting disgrace that the ignoramuses

Please accept my heart-felt apologies.

Susan, I have read the article. It is amazing that the article quotes hadiths that clearly indicate the finality of Muhammad (saaw) and Islam, but it doesn't try to refute the source, all it does is give how Muslims somehow "developed attitudes" that made them "believe" that Islam is the last and Muhammad (saaw) is what he is, khatam an nabiyeen. It is pure beating around the bush, anti Islamic polemics. In order to make a refuted belief sound not refuted or make a belief that refutes your belief to make it like it doesnt refute you belief techniques such as twisting the text, not answering or refuting the comments occurs. If Islam clearly shows in many ahadiths and ayats the finality of Muhammad (saaw) why dont you guys try to show the hadith is weak my checking the isnad? When Muslims read this, they from their point of view become more convinced that bahais are against Islam by twisting the text and not even answering the question. I thought when reading the article I would see bahais trying to refute the source of the ahadith by showing a defective isnad, etc., but actually they tried to blame muslims for wrongly assuming such clear cut texts really meant what it says.

Get out here, the orientalist also said that the Quran developed its present form after many years, despite the copies of the Quran from the caliph Uthman era. When you have independent thought and an enlighten mind, you develop not just common sense but you set intellectual trends not just follow trends like orientalism designed to discredit Islam. You dont accept real criticism of ahadith because it doesnt agree with your beliefs, but you accept "modern criticism" because not only people like you can formulate wild theories but it gives you a flexibility to discredit Islam that real criticism doesnt allow. You know that you cant find any hadith isnad as faulty, thats why you cling to the orientalist standards so tightly. The reason why the orientalist developed this standard was because they knew that they couldnt discredit the ahadith or Quran thru studying the sources, isnad, text, etc., but they figured out if they develop some standard that allow them to formulate wild theories it can give them a chance to try to discredit Islam. A person is known best for setting a standard, for having enlighten thought that allows him or her to give new insight to something. A person who lacks these attributes just believes in the hype and makes it bigger by being a spokesperson for it. I know that you were part of the 5-year plan in Lebanon that tried to convert Muslims to the bahai faith. So discrediting Islam and having a genuine almost innate hatred for Islam is very apparent from you. Like Allah said in the Quran, the enemies of Allah try to put out the Light of Allah but Allah's Light can never be put out. The movement to discredit Islam has plagued Muslims since day one, but Allah is making Muslims every second and even all of the attempts from the enemies of Islam will prove futile. Susan often talks about the so-called "modern standard" of criticism. Based on this concept, Susan rejects to examine the isnad or chain of the hadith, the source, the text, etc., because she claims that these things alone are not sufficient in determining the validity of something. Since Susan does not set intellectual trends but rather follows them, and easily believes the hype, she has adopted the orientalist standard in evaluating Islam that was solely designed to discredit Islam. The point I like to make here is that biographies of Muhammad (saaw) written by non muslim orientalist have in their books the Farewell Sermon of Muhammad (saaw). The interesting point is that Susan rejects this hadith although her fellow academic peers with their "modern standard" use this very hadith in their books. She rejects this hadith because 1. it conflicts the bahai belief and 2. it doesn't refute Islam's claim of finality. To emphasize an obvious double standard, I would like Susan to comment on this to "clear" things up. If Susan can somehow prove that there is no double standard and there is intellectual sincerity on her part, I would like Susan to immediately address it.

Subject: Re: Baha'i Scriptures and Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Juan,

Not kind nor generous but honest. Modernity & the Millennium is a brilliant reading of the historical Baha'u'llah and the forces that helped to shape his revelation. It establishes beyond question what a huge variance exists between the Teachings of Baha'u'llah and the distortions the Bahai administration continues to fob off today on Bahais and non-Bahais.

Actually, I wrote an essay on Hayden a few years ago but have been unable to find a journal willing to publish it since his thinking on spirituality and race are very far indeed from the prevailing postmodern cliches and, for that matter, the one-dimensional thinking of the UHJ....

I too believe it is part of God's wisdom to have mutilated the UHJ, restricting it to only legislative matters, though they continue to transgress on the consciences of avowed believers and others. You say at the end of your article that "There is room for optimism about the future." I must disagree with you. I really can't believe the future holds much promise for the Bahai Faith or the UHJ. The many abuses during the last decade show how flawed the institution is and how extreme the measures are to which it is willing to go to retain a kind of tyranny over people's minds and souls that Baha'u'llah himself denounced, as you document so well in your book and articles. These tensions and antinomies will prove lasting ones for the Bahai Faith, as they are for the human soul....

I do concur that public opinion is now the only recourse for counterbalancing the tyranny of the UHJ. If it is going to lie to people in general, as well as to elected government officials, about the nature of the Bahai Faith and its practices, there should be consequences. If it won't engage and answer direct questions or appeals, it should have to hear the same questions from the sources of intelligent social opinion that it seeks ultimately to seduce and deceive into its ranks. If I have learnt anything during the more than two year battle for talk.religion.bahai, it is that driving everything into the open for people to judge and decide for themselves is the only way to handle the outright lies and deceptions that are now routine in Bahai circles.

Subject: The Identity of Gry Falcon

Fred, I am 99.99 percent certain that the cowardly clown aka "Gry Falcon" is an AOL member who is very familiar with the bahai message boards. On the page mocking me, he used the same backround that I used on my webpage that is only available to AOL members. Second, somehow he knew my AOL experience with bahais and the bahai message boards. I have narrowed it down to a few candidates who could be Gry Falcon: Ruletherod (Rule has recently "reverted" to the bahai faith and made an apology to all bahais he offended and retracted on his previous beliefs of bahai censorship), Nadle, Susan, and of course Mark. I believe it to be Rule because for the simple fact of the style of the "humor," but it could be any of the above.

Subject: Bahai Censorship - Technique

During the last several years or more a number of observers have noted the common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

FG, May 12, 1992:
"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:
"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/House2.htm>

FG, June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"

K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:

"If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty] were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not character assassination by innuendo, what is?"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson18.htm>

Gibro28W, October 12, 1998:

"In summary, the biggest problem, as I see it, is that most Baha'is don't take criticism seriously--they tune it out as "negative" or "harmful to spiritual growth." This selfish attitude is very stupid. First of all, Baha'is entice people to join them. When they do, they indoctrinate them until they think like the group. But as soon as a red flare of doubt goes up in the convert's mind, they're cordoned off by the group and reminded of their "spiritual" obligations in the name of Baha'u'llah or the "Covenant." If left unresolved and doubt gives vent to prolonged criticism, the convert is sent packing or is kicked out. What we have here is a broken family that had failed to truly listen to the needs of its members in the first place."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb73.htm>

Barthaman on September 14, 1998:

"Baha'i dissenters, more or less, are wounded souls abandoned by their fathers, so-to-speak. They have been cast out and dismissed or shunned without having had a fair hearing. Consider their pain when the rest of their "family" dismisses them too. Can you know what it's like to be accused of heresy and shunned following a sincere intellectual conflict (inspired by doubt)--after you've sacrificed years in devoted service to your religion? Can you comprehend their sense of betrayal and injustice? This is why disillusioned believers leave their religions each year--while some still hang around, banging on the door now and then, demanding a refund for their lost youth. In time they will have to move on, however, writing the Baha'i Faith off as another lesson in fraud. Mock these people all you want--but for the grace of God, the next dissenter could be you. Don't be too confident, my friend."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb66.htm>

Juan Cole wrote, February 23, 1999:

"There is nothing to be puzzled by. Right wing Baha'is only like to hear the sound of their own voices (which are the only voices they will admit to being "Baha'i" at all)."

"Obviously, the world is so constructed that they cannot in fact only hear their own voices. They are forced to hear other voices that differ from theirs. This most disturbs them when the voices come from enrolled Baha'is or when the voices speak of the Baha'i faith."

"The way they sometimes deal with the enrolled Baha'is is to summon them to a heresy inquiry and threaten them with being shunned if they do not fall silent."

"With non-Baha'is or with ex-Baha'is, they deal with their speech about the faith by backbiting, slandering and libelling the speaker. You will note that since I've been on this list I have been accused of long-term heresy, of "claiming authority," of out and out lying (though that was retracted, twice), of misrepresentation, of 'playing fast and loose with the facts,' and even of being 'delusional.' I have been accused of all these falsehoods by *Baha'is*, by prominent Baha'is. I have been backbitten by them."

"This shows that all the talk about the danger a sharp tongue can do, all the talk about the need for harmony, for returning poison with honey, for a sin-covering eye, is just *talk* among right wing Baha'is. No one fights dirtier than they when they discover a voice they cannot silence and cannot refute."

"Paul Johnson has seen all these things, as well, for the past five years. He can explain it to you."

Cf. K. Paul Johnson's general reflections on coercive techniques
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson21.htm>

And LaAeterna's method of silencing opponents
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb65.htm>

Comments on the related techniques of Susan Maneck:

Juan Cole, February 13, 1999:

"It is a very, very, very weird religion. And if anyone is reading Susan Maneck's absolutely bone-chilling screeds on the desirability of Heresy Trials and carefulness in Shunning, they are seeing what it is like at the core of the religion."

"I really am sorry for them and her, since they seem sort of filled with hate and quite paranoid, yet say they are preaching love, unity and tolerance. Susan will say, 'may your abdomen be split by lightning and your guts fall out you filthy heretic whom I wish I could just have shunned and buried', and then she'll sign herself "warmest" and slander a university by adding it to her sig line. As if what she is about has anything at all to do with *universities*!"

FG, February 15, 1999:

"Ms. Maneck's approach appears to me to be always to shunt the discussion off or back to who said what where when why how and so on.... The farther back in time the better, since the person's memory, being human, is bound to be unable to keep up or to have stocked the evidence needed on his or her hard drive or find it on dejanews.com. And it then allows her to claim pretty much anything she wants to while seeming to have discredited her opponent. Further, she relies on the tactics of demagoguery knowing they usually prevail and will be supported by other fundamentalist Bahais. By shrieking "slander" and referring to others' opinions as "garbage," she is able to create an emotional atmosphere that essentially negates whatever the topic or content might be and that allows her to appear to win what is often a narrowly legalistic point or interpretation."

"All of this is done, of course, in conjunction with her employing the more common Bahai techniques of intimidation and psychological demonization and terrorism."

This FAQ will be reposted approximately every two weeks.

People with only web access might want to use www.dejanews.com www.reference.com or www.newsguy.com They all offer reading and posting capabilities for people who can't directly access alt.religion.bahai or talk.religion.bahai and filter out spam.

Alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai are available on America Online (AOL) Keyword, Newsgroups, then search for alt.religion.bahai or talk.religion.bahai

If your ISP does not offer talk.religion.bahai, follow this news.groupie advice: "If your ISP doesn't have the group shortly,
I suggest that you ask the newsmaster there to add it (Try

NOTE: Not all people agree on the interpretations given below.

Question #1 "Why create arb or t.r.b.?"

ANSWER #1: Because many people believe they experienced or are continuing to experience censorship when attempting to post to soc.religion.bahai. See the quotations from Abdul-Baha:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

ANSWER #2: Because the Bahai writings support free speech and religious conscience.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

ANSWER #3: [fill in the blank according to your own opinion.]

Question #2: "Why do the srb moderators oppose trb?"

ANSWER: Perhaps they'll supply an answer to place here.
(Two years later their NO votes are their only answer.)

Question #3: "Are Bahais opposed to freedom of speech and conscience?"

ANSWER: Despite glowing words of love and support for other people's opinions, despite the Universal House of Justice stating at least publicly it is not opposed to an unmoderated forum, the record of actual behavior by Bahais and on soc.religion.bahai and the experience of many Bahais and people who have left the Bahai Faith give serious reason for concern.

Subject: Bahai Censorship - On AOL

In August of 1998 I took out an account on AOL. It quickly became apparent that my fellow Bahais were using AOL in such a way as to further withhold knowledge and information from AOL's more than 14 million members.

It appeared to me that there were four main issues.

Alt.religion.bahai, which had been created in April of 1997 and which had had more than 20,000 messages posted to it, was not even offered in the list of AOL newsgroups. AOL personnel with which I spoke over the phone were very puzzled why it wasn't and even implied that some action would have had to have been taken to keep it from automatically being picked up and added to their newsgroups. It took more than a month of strenuous effort to get AOL to add alt.religion.bahai.

On the AOL Bahai Forums it became apparent that Bahais were manipulating and controlling information by NOT making it available, by essentially preserving the frozen, non-functioning state of affairs or the status quo:

1. The Libraries were not accepting new uploads for others then to download and read.
2. The list of Newsgroups on the Main Menu for Bahai offered only soc.religion.bahai with no mention of alt.religion.bahai, or talk.religion.bahai once it was created in January of 1999. Coupled with soc.religion.bahai's suppression of all mention of alt.religion.bahai or talk.religion.bahai, this prevents people from even hearing of their existence.

3. The available links for Web Sites on the Main Menu for Bahai did not offered my website The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience, though it has to be one of the most visited sites on the Bahai Faith with more than 7,000 hits since May 1998.

As the months went by, my repeated attempts to improve these deficiencies met with greater and greater opposition from the Bahai fundamentalists on AOL. Similiarly, my requests, beginning in August of 1998, that the Forum Leader, Mark Foster, who no one had seen for months, resign, for derilection of duty, were increasingly opposed while various excuses were offered for his absence. Not until talk.religion.bahai was passed five months later in January 1999 did he suddenly reappear only to begin immediately reporting absolutely EVERY message I posted to AOL as a TOS. It quickly became clear to me that he was back in order to target and build a case against me to have me suspended from AOL. My account was then temporarily suspended on three different occasions and finally terminated March 6, 1999.

Of the four issues, only two have partially been remedied.

1. Alt.religion.bahai and now talk.religion.bahai are available under AOL's Keyword Newsgroups, Expert Add.
2. The Libraries are accepting some uploads, though Foster banned the 15+ megabytes I uploaded in late February of my entire archive of discussion for talk.religion.bahai and which is at least available on my website. It's obvious Foster is finding pretexts for suppressing further uploads.

While Foster has claimed since mid-January that alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai would be added to the Main Menu under Newsgroups, he continued to make excuses for it not happening. As of March 9, 1999 they were not yet listed under Newsgroups along with soc.religion.bahai.

All of these factors, coupled with Mark Foster's abuse of his position as Forum Leader and his harassing and targetting of dissenting voices, not only mine, leaves no doubt that he and other Bahais, including some among the Bahai Administration, are involved in censoring discourse on AOL.

For an instance of "back-channel" email coercion on AOL see <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

For an instance of Foster's double standard handling fundamentalist Bahais see Susan Maneck's accusations on AOL against me of "slander" and references to my views as "garbage": <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Maneck1.htm>

The immediate pretext for terminating my account, according to the AOL official with whom I spoke on the phone, was that I had pointed out in a newly created Folder called Censorship that I and other AOL members had requested a Folder entitled Bahai Censorship and thereby undermined the authority of the Forum Leader....

In closing let me add that AOL personnel are extremely uninformed about the Bahai Faith, especially its practice of censorship, and its ability to exploit the TOS system....

Dear Members of the Universal House of Justice:

As a Bahai, I am saddened by the news of the execution of yet another Bahai in Iran. However, the immediate public statements made by Firuz Kazemzadeh of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, reminiscent of Robert Henderson's piece in The New York Times on January 13th of this year, appear equally lamentable for their blatant hypocrisy: "We had hoped that President Khatami's assertions about freedom, justice and the rule of law in Iran would apply to the Baha'is of that country.... We urge the international community to protest vigorously Mr. Rowhani's killing and to seek justice for the beleaguered Iranian Baha'i community."

The tragic loss of Bahai lives in Iran and the subsequent exploitation of their deaths by Bahai spokesmen, often in the American media, always courting the President and other members of the government, has become a predictable pattern rendered intolerable in the context of continuing and pervasive Bahai censorship and denial of human and civil rights in the United States and elsewhere. Such incidents as I queried you about in my unanswered email of March 31, 1997, available on my Web site, regarding the crushing of the magazine Dialogue, the resignations of a number of scholars from the Bahai Encyclopedia, the attacks on the listserv known as Talisman I at Indiana University, the harassing and blacklisting of many individuals, Bahai and non-Bahai, suggest profoundly deep-seated problems within the Bahai community and administration.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/To-UHJ1.htm>

To these incidents must now be added the apparent conspiracy for more than a year and a half of the Bahai Computer and Communications Committee (BCCA), under the chairmanship of Mark Towfiq, to defeat twice now, along with the collusion of other Bahais, the creation of an unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith which would be known as talk.religion.bahai. You may find extensive documentation for all of these violations of the basic human rights of many Bahais and non-Bahais on my Web site, "The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience": <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

Because the third interest poll for talk.religion.bahai on Usenet is approaching, after August 28th, I ask you again to investigate the BCCA and its depriving me of access last November from all private Bahai-only mailing lists at a crucial moment just when the tide of discussion was going very much in favor of the newsgroup, noted by many observers. I also ask whether you supported or were involved in that decision? The relevant files can be found on my Web site under Bahai-Discuss Archives.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

Similarly, I would like to know whether your institution or the BCCA has approved of or advocated the recent ban of my email signature file by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai, as well as their complete ban for more than a year and a half now on all discussion regarding talk.religion.bahai.

The prevailing atmosphere of suppression of free speech and religious conscience that now characterizes the Bahai Faith cannot but call into question the honesty of many members of the Bahai administration and perhaps the institutions themselves.

I ask once more whether censorship is allowed in the Bahai Faith and what passages of the Bahai Writings support it, what are the "rules," if you will, of Bahai censorship?

Subject: Bahai Censorship - Bullying & UHJ's Fundamentalism

I'm alarmed at the recent Bahai attempts, by the troll Gyr Falcon and others, at character assassination, ridicule, and generally portraying me and others as disturbed individuals.

I have never claimed to be perfect. At times I have apologized to Bahais, Muslims, and other non-Bahais when I felt, or was convinced, that I was wrong or had spoken unfairly. I find the constant technique to portray me as a megalomaniac or paranoid quite offensive.

Similarly, the tactic of accusing me of spam for posting my opinions is calculated to discredit the validity of my and others' concerns regarding censorship in Bahai forums and has also been used on AOL. Such accusations reveal the frustration that Bahai fundamentalists apparently feel over my having found ways of enduring and resisting the onslaught of their concerted attacks, while preserving a historical record on a markedly ephemeral medium for innocent Bahais and non-Bahais....

Fair-minded Bahai and non-Bahai observers may judge for themselves whether my and others' allegations of censorship are valid by reading the record preserved under "Assorted Controversial Documents" on my website at

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

As further corroboration that I am not the only person concerned with the intolerance and censorship that has overtaken the Bahai Faith, I recommend Professor Juan Cole's new book Modernity & the Millennium: The Genesis of the Bahai Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East, available through Columbia University Press or Amazon.com at

In his conclusion, which would never have passed the system of Bahai "review" that the UHJ imposes on all publications brought out under its tight control, Professor Cole, of the Department of History at The University of Michigan, quite accurately identifies the distortions that have been wreaked upon Baha'u'llah's Teachings:

"Some contemporary leaders of the Baha'i Faith have given answers increasingly similar to those of fundamentalists, stressing scriptural literalism, patriarchy, theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values. While the values of the nineteenth-century Baha'i movement, which was far more tolerant, continue to exist as a minority view, by the late 1990s a different set of emphases prevailed." (196)

He himself and many others, as evidence under the "Assorted Controversial Documents," have suffered at the hands of the fundamentalists who have taken control of the religion:

"The rise of academic Baha'i scholarship has caused tension in the community, whose present-day leadership tends to be fundamentalist and antiliberal in orientation, and this has led to pressure on a number of prominent academics to resign or dissociate themselves from the movement." (201)

These same forces of fundamentalist orthodoxy are evident on AOL, talk.religion.bahai, and alt.religion.bahai for impartial viewers to witness. They will be evident to all perceptive observers of whatever forum Bahais may be trying to control and influence.

As a Bahai for more than 23 years, I myself have always found especially repulsive the manner in which Bahai fundamentalists attempt to manipulate the institutions and leaders of government, the United Nations, and public opinion, while pretending to values they deride in private or at Bahai-only meetings.

Ultimately, it is the Bahai Universal House of Justice that is responsible for the perversion and corruption of such clear and elevating teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha as the following:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world."

Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

The UHJ is also in the end responsible for inciting Bahai fanatics and fundamentalists to attack other Bahais and non-Bahais merely for their views expressed on and off line in free forums of public discussion.

I recommend all newcomers to these matters read "The Bahai Technique":

"It is a very, very, very weird religion. And if anyone is reading Susan Maneck's absolutely bone-chilling screeds on the desirability of Heresy Trials and carefulness in Shunning, they are seeing what it is like at the core of the religion."

"I really am sorry for them and her, since they seem sort of filled with hate and quite paranoid, yet say they are preaching love, unity and tolerance. Susan will say, 'may your abdomen be split by lightning and your guts fall out you filthy heretic whom I wish I could just have shunned and buried', and then she'll sign herself "warmest" and slander a university by adding it to her sig line. As if what she is about has anything at all to do with *universities*!"

FG, February 15, 1999:

"Ms. Maneck's approach appears to me to be always to shunt the discussion off or back to who said what where when why how and so on.... The farther back in time the better, since the person's memory, being human, is bound to be unable to keep up or to have stocked the evidence needed on his or her hard drive or find it on dejanews.com. And it then allows her to claim pretty much anything she wants to while seeming to have discredited her opponent. Further, she relies on the tactics of demagoguery knowing they usually prevail and will be supported by other fundamentalist Bahais. By shrieking "slander" and referring to others' opinions as "garbage," she is able to create an emotional atmosphere that essentially negates whatever the topic or content might be and that allows her to appear to win what is often a narrowly legalistic point or interpretation."

"All of this is done, of course, in conjunction with her employing the more common Bahai techniques of intimidation and psychological demonization and terrorism."

FYIDismissal of Judge James F. Nelson, Chair of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States, in April, 1999.April 6, 1999

Delegates to the 1999 Baha'i National ConventionBeloved Friends, We deeply regret the necessity of informing you that James F. Nelson has been guilty of gross negligence in the performance of his duties as a member of the National Spiritual Assembly and that, although he has expressed his profound regret for the related occurrences, and has effected full restitution of the damage done, he has felt impelled, by his awareness of the high responsibility of the post in which he has been serving, to tender his resignation from the membership of the National Spiritual Assembly, and the National Spiritual Assembly has accepted this resignation.

At this painful moment the National Spiritual Assembly offers James Nelson its loving support and prayers.

Here is all I know about the situation.

Jim Nelson was helping an elderly Baha'i in Pasadena with her finances. I believe he had some power to sign checks from her account for paying bills, etc. She told Jim that she wanted her payment to the huquq [the 19% tax on some income to be paid to the Universal House of Justice in Haifa, Israel according to Baha'i law] to be set up as an endowment rather than being a lump sum payment. On her death, Jim placed the huquq funds from her accounts into a new account under his name. This led to protests from the estate's executor and prompted the NSA to go on the war path with claims of wrongdoing. I do not know if the executor of the estate is a Baha'i or not. Since the huquq funds would be directed to Haifa, one can imagine why [National Spiritual Assembly secretary-general Robert C.] Henderson would be upset by Jim's action. Henderson has been accused in the past of mismanagement of funds, of hijacking contributions earmarked to the World Centre into a special NSA account, skimming off the interest and then at the end of the year sending the principle along to Haifa. But this is purely personal speculation on my part.

This is the only thing I have heard in terms of "wrongdoing" on Nelson's part, whereas Henderson's letter to the delegates refers to "related occurrences" in the plural. As for restitution, I understand that the money never went anywhere and, in the end, the funds were handled according to the wishes of the deceased Baha'i in the way Jim was planning to set up in the first place.

So, what does this all indicate? My take is that for years there has been rivalries and factions on the NSA, especially between the West Coast Gang led by the Nelsons (with Bill Davis and Juana Conrad) vs. the Henderson/Kazemzadeh block. I have heard that in their rebuke to Nelson the NSA referred to his "careless" behavior, while in the letter to the delegates they refer to "gross negligence in the performance of duties." My view is that if the NSA was sincere in their concern for Nelson and his spiritual growth, they would have simply accepted his resignation and informed the delegates that after years of service, Judge Nelson has resigned for health or personal reasons. The letter to the delegates seems to me to be a blatant campaign maneuver. It seems aimed at (1) publicly humiliating Jim Nelson and (2) helping guide the delegates in their voting for a candidate from the Henderson/Kazemzadeh Good Old Boys Network rather than from the now suspect Nelson Network.

As someone who has dealt with Henderson and Kazemzadeh in the past and had them use lies and slander in their attacks on my beliefs and behavior, this latest outburst is not at all surprising and fits their modus operandi perfectly. That is to say, the timing and the pure sleaziness of this blatant political maneuvering fits with their history of self-promotion combined with vicious personal attacks against those who might threaten their grip of power over the American Baha'i community.

Having been absent from these Baha'i cultural wars now for several years, I do find it fascinating that since many of us old "heretics" have either left the faith, lost rights, or gone into the grand occultation of self-imposed exile and inactivity, the leadership, at a loss for enemies, seems intent on feeding on each other.

Needless to say, it will be interesting how the delegates respond to this news, whether they will back Henderson and Kazemzadeh by voting in one of their cronies or protest this action by voting in a West coast candidate. Steve

-----Date: 4-14-99
To: talisman@umich.edu From: Juan Cole Subject: Re: NSA elections

Actually, early twentieth century Baha'is under `Abdul-Baha had perfectly democratic elections, and were instructed to do it that way by `Abdul-Baha. During WW I when there was conflict over whether to support the war effort or adopt a pacifist stance, hawks like Mason Remey organized a campaign for the NSA in 1917 in which they captured it and reversed the previous pacifist policy! Older Baha'is spoke of the times when Republican and Democratic Baha'is wouldn't speak with one another.

The problem with the current situation is not merely that the voting records of the NSA members are completely unknown. It is that the activities and policies of the NSA as a whole are almost completely unknown! What exactly do these people do? What policies have they made? What effect have the policies had? Have they been good for the growth of the community, numerically and spiritually? Without knowing the answer to this question, how can the delegates even begin to vote intelligently? Though, as we have seen, the very rules of the elections leave them with little potential impact.

We know that there were about 48,000 adult Baha'is with good addresses in the US in 1978. There are now about 60,000. In the meantime 12,000 Iranians immigrated. This means that there has been no growth in over twenty years. *None*. Of course, hundreds if not a few thousands of people have come in during the past two decades, but enormous numbers of them have gone right back out. Would any CEO who had not increased his earnings a single penny over twenty years be reappointed by the board?

The exclusivistic policies of Mr. Henderson, who is frankly mean-spirited, have contributed enormously to this Great Stagnation. He was the one who cracked down on Dialogue magazine in such a nasty way. He bullied Baha'i travel agents in 1991, for the Lord knows what reward from the corrupt Corporate Travel Consultants. He agitated behind the scenes for a crackdown on talisman@indiana.edu. He has chased travel teachers out of the country, seeing them as an electoral threat should they become successful. I have no idea about the propriety of Jim Nelson's book-keeping practices, but surely for Henderson to publicly smear him after Jim served on the NSA 1971-1999, in circumstances where Nelson cannot even publicly defend himself, is the height of sleaze. Henderson has arranged for himself to live rent free free in a 9-bedroom mansion (having the Bourgeois studio knocked down to build it, against UHJ instructions) with free Baha'i maids and gardeners, and his main business seems to be bullying Baha'is into silence behind the scenes. And I fully acknowledge that he is probably acting rationally given the way the Baha'i system is structured.

So, I think all these things are related: the fact that the Baha'i faith in the US has been going nowhere fast for decades; the fact that the electoral system seems to elect the ambitious and greedy (and paranoid) to the top offices; the fact that even initially upright people are made perpetual incumbents, exposing them to the temptations of absolute power held for decades and corrupting them; the fact that the electoral system provides an incentive for the incumbents to slap down and chase out potential competitors; the fact that it would not be in the incumbents' interest for the faith to expand, become more open, attract a lot of new voters who might rock the boat.

Term limits would go a long way toward solving all these problems. In fact, why not have staggered elections for 4-year terms? You could elect 5 members in 2000 and 4 in 2002. People who don't serve as long as Nelson did might not become tempted to act high-handedly. They wouldn't face reelection and so would have no reason to fear being unseated by active young folks. Counselor Fred Schechter, one of the people who falsely accused me, once told a friend of mine that anyone who becomes active in the faith will be attacked (by the faith's officials, it is implied). We hadn't at the time realized that Schechter intended to *act* on this observation!

This is a dysfunctional system, folks. There are ways in which it destroyed Dan Jordan (forcing him to live a lie and to resort to secret trysts), Allen Ward, and now Jim Nelson--not to mention the spiritual harm it has wreaked on the Baby Boom intellectuals who were enticed in with promises of tolerance and justice (!!!).

When Glenford Mitchell had become a huge pain in the ass as NSA secretary and was finally elected off it to the UHJ, everyone breathed a big sigh of relief. And when Henderson came in, the word was that he was a good guy, and we were all relieved. And then in a few short years he demonstrated that he was an even bigger pain in the ass than Mitchell had been. Even dumping Henderson wouldn't solve the problem. The *system* creates the Hendersons and the Nelsons. If anyone cared about the fortunes of the faith as opposed to the size of their marble offices, they would fix the system.

cheers Juan

O Shaykh! My Pen is abashed to recount what actually took place. In the land of Sad (Isfahan) the fire of tyranny burned with such a hot flame that every fair-minded person groaned aloud.

--

Briefly, in every city the evidences of a tyranny, beyond like or equal, were unmistakably clear and manifest, and yet none arose in self-defence!

The Faith of God hath cried everywhere, by reason of thy tyranny, and yet thou disportest thyself and art of them that exult. There is no hatred in Mine heart for thee nor for anyone. Every man of discernment beholdeth thee, and such as are like thee, engulfed in evident folly. Hadst thou realized that which thou hast done, thou wouldst have cast thyself into the fire, or abandoned thine home and fled unto the mountains, or wouldst have groaned until thou hadst returned unto the place destined for thee by Him Who is the Lord of strength and of might.

How numerous the oppressors before thee who have arisen to quench
the light of God, and how many the impious who murdered and pillaged until the hearts and souls of men groaned by reason of their cruelty! The sun of justice hath been obscured, inasmuch as the embodiment of

Judge fairly, O ignorant tyranny, and cast away justice; whereupon all created things have lamented, and still thou art

all. By God! The things thou possessest shall profit thee not, nor what thou hast laid up through thy cruelty. Unto this beareth witness thy Lord, the All-Knowing. Thou hast arisen to put out the light of this Cause; ere long will thine own fire be quenched, at His behest. He, verily, is the Lord of strength and of might. The changes and chances of the world, and the powers of the nations, cannot frustrate Him. He doeth what He pleaseth, and ordaineth what He willeth through the power of His sovereignty.

**--

O Shaykh! While hemmed in by tribulations this Wronged One is occupied in setting down these words. On every side the flame of oppression and tyranny can be discerned.

Kitab-I-Aqdas:

Do thou remember the one whose power transcended thy power, and whose station excelled thy station. Where is he? Whither are gone the things he possessed? Take warning, and be not of them that are fast asleep. He it was who cast the Tablet of God behind him when We made known unto him what the hosts of tyranny had caused Us to suffer. Wherefore, disgrace assailed him from all sides, and he went down to dust in great loss. Think deeply, O King, concerning him, and concerning them who, like unto thee, have conquered cities and ruled over men. The All-Merciful brought them down from their palaces to their graves. Be warned, be of them who reflect.

Hearken ye, O Rulers of America and the Presidents of the Republics therein, unto that which the Dove is warbling on the Branch of Eternity: "There is none other God but Me, the Ever-Abiding, the Forgiving, the All-Bountiful." Adorn ye the temple of dominion with the ornament of justice and of the fear of God, and its head with the crown of the remembrance of your Lord, the Creator of the heavens. Thus counselleth you He Who is the Dayspring of Names, as bidden by Him Who is the All-Knowing, the All-Wise. The Promised One hath appeared in this glorified Station, whereat all beings, both seen and unseen, have rejoiced. Take ye advantage of the Day of God. Verily, to meet Him is better for you than all that whereon the sun shineth, could ye but know it. O concourse of rulers! Give ear unto that which hath been raised from the Dayspring of Grandeur: "Verily, there is none other God but Me, the Lord of Utterance, the All-Knowing." Bind ye the broken with the hands of justice, and crush the oppressor who flourisheth with the rod of the commandments of your Lord, the Ordainer, the All-Wise.

--

O people of Constantinople! Lo, from your midst We hear the baleful hooting of the owl. Hath the drunkenness of passion laid hold upon you, or is it that ye are sunk in heedlessness? O Spot that art situate on the shores of the two seas! The throne of tyranny hath, verily, been established upon thee, and the flame of hatred hath been kindled within thy bosom,

in such wise that the Concourse on high and they who circle around the Exalted Throne have wailed and lamented.
We behold in thee the foolish ruling over the wise, and darkness vaunting itself against the light.

**--

Say: O people, should ye choose to disbelieve in Him, refrain at least from rising up against Him.
By God! Sufficient are the hosts of tyranny that are leagued against Him!

Tablets of Baha'u'llah:

Neither the ascendancy of the oppressor nor the tyranny of the wicked hath been able to thwart
His Purpose. How glorified is His sovereignty, how exalted His dominion!

**--

Great God! Although His signs have encompassed the world and His proofs and testimonies are shining forth and manifest as the light, yet the ignorant appear heedless, nay rather, rebellious.
Would that they had been content with opposition. But at all times they are plotting to cut down the sacred Lote-Tree. Since the dawn of this Revelation the embodiments of selfishness have, by resorting to cruelty and oppression, striven to extinguish the Light of divine manifestation. But God, having stayed their hands, revealed this Light through His sovereign authority and protected it through the power of His might until earth and heaven were illuminated by its radiance and brightness. Praise be unto Him under all conditions.

**--

May Our Glory rest upon the people of Baha whom neither the tyranny of the oppressor nor the ascendancy of the aggressor have been able to withhold from God, the Lord of the worlds.
(Effulgences)

**--

O thou who dost magnify My praise! Give ear unto that which the people of tyranny ascribe unto

Me in My days. Some of them say: `He hath laid claim to divinity'; others say: `He hath devised a lie against God'; still others say: `He is come to foment sedition'. Base and wretched are they. Lo! They are, in truth, enslaved to idle imaginings.

O kindreds of the earth! Incline your ears unto the Voice from the divine Lote-Tree which overshadoweth the world and be not of the people of tyranny on earth-- men who have repudiated the Manifestation of God and His invincible authority and have renounced His favours-- they in truth are reckoned with the contemptible in the Book of God, the Lord of all mankind. (Words of Paradise)

**--

Well is it with the king who keepeth a tight hold on the reins of his passion, restraineth his anger and preferreth justice and fairness to injustice and tyranny.

The word of God which the Supreme Pen hath recorded on the sixth leaf of the Most Exalted Paradise is the following: The light of men is Justice. Quench it not with the contrary winds of oppression and tyranny.

Justice is, in this day, bewailing its plight, and Equity groaneth beneath the yoke of oppression. The thick clouds of tyranny have darkened the face of the earth, and enveloped its peoples. Through the movement of Our Pen of glory We have, at the bidding of the omnipotent Ordainer, breathed a new life into every human frame, and instilled into every word a fresh potency. All created things proclaim the evidences of this world-wide regeneration. This is the most great, the most joyful tidings imparted by the Pen of this Wronged One to mankind.

Referring to the land of Ta (Tihiran) We have revealed in the Kitab-i-Aqdas that which will admonish mankind. They that perpetrate tyranny in the world have usurped the rights of the peoples and kindreds of the earth and are sedulously pursuing their selfish inclinations. The tyrant [Prince Mahm d Mirz , the Jal lu'd'Dawlih, Governor of Yazd, Persia.] of the land of Ya (Yazd), committed that which hath caused the Concourse on High to shed tears of blood.

But where are to be found earnest seekers and inquiring minds? Whither are gone the equitable and the fair-minded? At present no day passeth without the fire of a fresh tyranny blazing fiercely, or the sword of a new aggression being unsheathed. Gracious God! The great and the noble in Persia glory in acts of such savagery that one is lost in amazement at the tales thereof.

Verily, the birds abiding within the domains of My Kingdom and the doves dwelling in the rose-garden of My wisdom utter such melodies and warblings as are inscrutable to all but God, the Lord of the kingdoms of earth and heaven; and were these melodies to be revealed even to an extent smaller than a needle's eye, the people of tyranny would utter such calumnies as none among former generations hath ever uttered, and would commit such deeds as no one in past ages and centuries hath ever committed. They have rejected the bounty of God and His proofs and have repudiated the testimony of God and His signs.

A year ago an oppressor ruled over this city, and at every instant caused fresh harm. By the righteousness of the Lord! He wrought that which cast terror into the hearts of men. But to the Pen of Glory the tyranny of the world hath never been nor will it ever be a hindrance. In the abundance of Our grace and loving-kindness We have revealed specially for the rulers and ministers of the world that which is conducive to safety and protection, tranquillity and peace; haply the children of men may rest secure from the evils of oppression.

The Great Being saith: O well-beloved ones! The tabernacle of unity hath been raised; regard ye not one another as strangers. Ye are the fruits of one tree, and the leaves of one branch. We cherish the hope that the light of justice may shine upon the world and sanctify it from tyranny. If the rulers and kings of the earth, the symbols of the power of God, exalted be His glory, arise and resolve to dedicate themselves to whatever will promote the highest interests of the whole of humanity, the reign of justice will assuredly be established amongst the children of men, and the effulgence of its light will envelop the whole earth.

--

There can be no doubt whatever that if the day-star of justice, which the clouds of tyranny have obscured, were to shed its light upon men, the face of the earth would be completely transformed.

--

The Great Being, wishing to reveal the prerequisites of the peace and tranquillity of the world and the advancement of its peoples, hath written: The time must come when the imperative necessity for the holding of a vast, an all-embracing assemblage of men will be universally realized. The rulers and kings of the earth must needs attend it, and, participating in its deliberations, must consider such ways and means as will lay the foundations of the world's Great Peace amongst men. Such a peace demandeth that the Great Powers should resolve, for the sake of the tranquillity of the peoples of the earth, to be fully reconciled among themselves. Should any king take up arms against another, all should unitedly arise and prevent him. If this be done, the nations of the world will no longer require any armaments, except for the purpose of preserving the security of their realms and of maintaining internal order within their territories. This will ensure the peace and composure of every people, government and nation. We fain would hope that the kings and rulers of the earth, the mirrors of the gracious and almighty name of God, may attain unto this station, and shield mankind from the onslaught of tyranny.

In these days the tabernacle of justice hath fallen into the clutches of tyranny and oppression.

Beseech ye the One true God--exalted be His glory--not to deprive mankind of the ocean of true understanding, for were men but to take heed they would readily appreciate that whatever hath streamed from and is set down by the Pen of Glory is even as the sun for the whole world and that therein lie the welfare, security and true interests of all men; otherwise the earth will be tormented by a fresh calamity every day and unprecedented commotions will break out.

Be ye warned, O men of understanding. It ill beseemeth the station of man to commit tyranny; rather it behoveth him to observe equity and be attired with the raiment of justice under all conditions. Beseech ye the One true God that He may, through the power of the hand of loving-kindness and spiritual education, purge and purify certain souls from the defilement of evil passions and corrupt desires, that they may arise and unloose their tongues for the sake of God, that perchance the evidences of injustice may be blotted out and the splendour of the light of justice may shed its radiance upon the whole world.

The Faith of God hath cried everywhere, by reason of thy tyranny, and yet thou disportest thyself and art of them that exult. There is no hatred in Mine heart for thee nor for anyone. Every man of learning beholdeth thee, and such as are like thee, engulfed in evident folly.

We have heard that the provinces of Persia have been adorned with the adornment of justice. When We observed closely, however, We found them to be the dawning-places of tyranny and the daysprings of injustice. We behold justice in the clutches of tyranny.

We beseech God to set it free through the power of His might and His sovereignty.

**--

How numerous the oppressors before thee who have arisen to quench
the light of God, and how many the impious who murdered and pillaged until the hearts and souls
of men groaned by reason of their cruelty! The sun of justice hath been obscured, inasmuch as the embodiment of tyranny hath been stablished upon the throne of hatred, and yet the people understand not. The children of the Apostle have been slain and their possessions pillaged.
Say: Was it, in thine estimation, their possessions or themselves that denied God? Judge fairly, O ignorant one that hath been shut out as by a veil from God. Thou hast clung to tyranny and cast away justice;
whereupon all created things have lamented, and still thou art among the wayward. Thou hast put to death the aged, and plundered the young. Thinkest thou that thou wilt consume that which thine iniquity hath amassed? Nay, by Myself! Thus informeth thee He Who is cognizant of all.
By God! The things thou possessest shall profit thee not, nor what thou hast laid up through thy cruelty. Unto this beareth witness Thy Lord, the All-Knowing.

**--

O `Ali! Woes and sorrows are powerless to restrain thy Lord, the All-Merciful. Indeed He hath risen to champion the Cause of God in such wise that neither the overpowering might of the world nor the tyranny of the nations can ever alarm Him. He calleth aloud betwixt earth and heaven, saying: The Promised Day is come. The Lord of creation proclaimeth: Verily, there is no
God besides Me, the Almighty, the All-Bountiful.

**--

How vast the number of places that have been ennobled with your blood for the sake of God.
How numerous the cities wherein the voice of your lamentation hath been raised and the wailing of your anguish uplifted. How many the prisons into which ye have been cast by the hosts of tyranny. Know ye of a certainty that He will render you victorious, will exalt you among the peoples of the world and will demonstrate your high rank before the gaze of all nations. Surely

He will not suffer the reward of His favoured ones to be lost.

**--

Persevere thou in helping His Cause through the strengthening power of the hosts of wisdom and utterance. Thus hath it been decreed by God, the Gracious, the All-Praised. Blessed is the believer who hath in this Day embraced the Truth and the man of fixed resolve whom the hosts of tyranny have been powerless to affright.

**--

In this Day the Straight Path is made manifest, the Balance of divine justice is set and the light of the sun of His bounty is resplendent, yet the oppressive darkness of the people of tyranny hath, even as clouds, intervened and caused a grievous obstruction between the Day-Star of heavenly grace and the people of the world. Blessed is he who hath rent the intervening veils asunder and is illumined by the radiant light of divine Revelation. Consider how numerous were those who accounted themselves among the wise and the learned, yet in the Day of God were deprived of the outpourings of heavenly bounties.

Hidden Words:

23. O DWELLERS IN THE CITY OF LOVE! Mortal blasts have beset the everlasting candle, and the beauty of the celestial Youth is veiled in the darkness of dust.
The chief of the monarchs of love is wronged by the people of tyranny and the dove of holiness lies prisoned in the talons of owls. The dwellers in the pavilion of glory and the celestial concourse bewail and lament, while ye repose in the realm of negligence, and esteem yourselves as of the true friends. How vain are your imaginings!

**--

64. O OPPRESSORS OF EARTH! Withdraw your hands from tyranny, for I have pledged Myself not to forgive any man's injustice. This is My covenant which I have irrevocably decreed in the preserved tablet and sealed it with My seal of glory.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

3 August 1999

From: Department of the Secretariat Baha'i World Center

Dear Baha'i Friend,

Clearly, no one would dispute the right of Dr. Cole to write and publish whatever work a publisher is prepared to handle. Nor has anyone questioned the right of a Baha'i who is interested in such a book to purchase it. To suggest that the House of Justice is saying otherwise would be to seriously misconstrue the nature of its concern . . .

As a participant in various Internet discussion groups over the past five years, and particularly in the last year or two, you cannot but be aware from these exchanges that Dr. Cole has embarked on a deliberate assault against the Baha'i Cause, in which he has not hesitated to attack its institutions, to misrepresent its fundamental teachings, and to abuse the trust of Baha'is who had been led to believe that they were engaged with him in a detached and scholarly search for the truth. These same Internet exchanges exposed you, like other participants, to a flood of calumny and invective against a great many of your fellow believers, on the part of Dr. Cole, that is scarcely credible in rational discourse.

Had such a book as Modernity and the Millennium been written by a disinterested non-Baha'i scholar, its misconception of the nature of Baha'u'llah's Mission and its other shortcomings would have represented no more than understandable weaknesses of an honest attempt to explore a religious phenomenon as yet little understood in the West. Indeed, in this context, such an attempt to make the Baha'i Faith comprehensible to the Western academic mind, however inadequate it might appear to knowledgeable Baha'i scholars, would surely have earned its author a measure of genuine Baha'i appreciation for the writing and research skills deployed in devising it.

As you -- like other participants in certain Internet discussion groups -- are well aware, however, the book's author is not a disinterested scholar.

Rather, he is a deeply embittered individual who, as his book was in preparation, had just denounced in the most intemperate language an apparent twenty-year allegiance to Baha'u'llah, in the wake of a failed attempt on his part to impose his private ideological agenda on the Baha'i community's study of Baha'u'llah's Message. Modernity and the Millennium represents an effort to provide the current stage of this long-running scheme with the underpinnings of scholarly rationalization.

What is this rationalization? Although distorted by its evasion of Baha'i Texts that contradict its main assertions, and blurred by reliance on speculations peculiar to its author's purpose, the thesis appears to run somewhat as follows: Baha'u'llah's work and Writings represent essentially one of several efforts by Middle East thinkers to work out a "response" to the challenges posed by European modernity in the form of rationalism, revolution, nationalism, economic upheaval, feminism and other contemporary developments. Although Oriental in origin, this particular "response", in contrast to various others, was unusually "progressive", "liberal", "idealistic", even "radical". Because it "grew up" in a congenial modernist era, its Author was able gradually to adjust and revise the ideas with which

He had been "grappling", through benefiting (in a manner generally insinuated rather than explicitly stated) from successive interactions with other thinkers and movements. By 1862, apparently in order to deal with the problem of religious exclusivity in the Muslim world, and in response to some form of "private mystical experience", He "decided to make a prophetic claim of his own" . . .

The Covenant, the distinguishing feature of Baha'u'llah's Revelation, has been made the central target of this effort (a maneuver that Dr. Cole's book is at particular pains to shore up). Although forced to acknowledge the appointments of `Abdul-Baha and the Guardian as Interpreters of Baha'u'llah's Message, every effort has been made to call such authoritative interpretation into question wherever it presents a problem for the notions being promoted.

Similarly, although ostensibly acknowledging that the Universal House of Justice is Head of the Baha'i Faith today, this opposition has tried by every means possible to undermine the broad authority conferred in Baha'u'llah's own words and emphasized in the Master's Will and Testament.

(In Dr. Cole's book, this agenda makes its appearance in the conclusion: namely, that the Faith founded by Baha'u'llah has failed in its mission because, like "the Khomeinist state in Iran", it has been somehow captured by "fundamentalists", by which term Dr. Cole has repeatedly characterized the members of the Universal House of Justice.) . . .

With loving Baha'i greetings,

[A much-quoted message regarding talk.religion.bahai.]

MESSAGE:

The Universal House of Justice has received your two email messages of 6 October 1997 regarding the proposed newsgroup "talk.religion.bahai", and we have been asked to reply.

The House of Justice does not feel that it can comment on the validity or appropriateness of various reasons for voting for or against the proposed newsgroup.

Individual Baha'is who are interested in the matter must come to their own decision, based upon the dictates of their conscience and their understanding of the principles of the Faith.

In general, the House of Justice has no objection to Baha'is' participating in public, unmoderated discussions about the Faith, whether those discussions take place in person or through some form of electronic communication. The wisdom of participating in particular discussions, must, of necessity, depend upon circumstances prevailing at the time.

When, through such discussions, the Faith is attacked or erroneous information about it is disseminated, it may become necessary for individual Baha'is to actively defend it. In some circumstances, however, to avoid participating in argumentative exchanges, attracting attention to enemies of the Faith, or engaging Covenant-breakers, it will be more appropriate to withdraw from the discussion.

While the institutions of the Faith may, on occasion, find it necessary to offer the friends guidance related to their participation in particular discussions, generally

this, too, is a matter left to the individual.

You are free to share this advice, electronically or otherwise, if you feel it appropriate.

Religious organizations that treat individuals the way the uhj does usually have, at times or eventually, throughout history, stooped to murder people who speak out against tyranny and reprehensible suppression of human rights and freedom of conscience. Many rational people, fully informed of what was in fact done to the people named below, would not fail to arrive, hesitation aside, at the same conclusion:

From: Patrick Henry <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com>

Given the uhj's oppressive tactics and violation of the human rights of Linda and John Walbridge, Stephen Scholl, other editors of the Dialogue magazine, the Bahai Encyclopedia editors who resigned in protest, David Langness, Juan Cole, Michael McKenny, Nima Hazini, former Assistant to the Auxiliary Board Paul Dodenhoff who resigned, and so on, and so on, and so on.... All the victims documented on my website.... I hesitate to put the uhj above any reprehensible act.... Including conspiracy to murder Dr. Daniel Jordan.

I have been a member of the Bahai faith since 1976. My ID Card may be found on my website. I have never been contacted by the uhj or any of its underlings to the contrary.

Anything I have ever said is a matter of the sanctity of my individual God-given conscience that both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha claimed would never be violated in their religion.

I shall "cc" this message to the uhj so that they hear from me directly on the matter.

I would consider it an honor to be one of its official victims; indeed, the highest spiritual achievement of my Bahai life, defending Baha'u'llah's Teachings from the fanaticism that has overwhelmed and hamstrung his Revelation.

July 24,1998

Dear Members of the Universal House of Justice:

As a Bahai, I am saddened by the news of the execution of yet another Bahai in Iran. However, the immediate public statements made by Firuz Kazemzadeh of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, reminiscent of Robert Henderson's piece in The New York Times on January 13th of this year, appear equally lamentable for their blatant hypocrisy: "We had hoped that President Khatami's assertions about freedom, justice and the rule of law in Iran would apply to the Baha'is of that country.... We urge the international community to protest vigorously Mr. Rowhani's killing and to seek justice for the beleaguered Iranian Baha'i community."

The tragic loss of Bahai lives in Iran and the subsequent exploitation of their deaths by Bahai spokesmen, often in the American media, always courting the President and other members of the government, has become a predictable pattern rendered intolerable in the context of continuing and pervasive Bahai censorship and denial of human and civil rights in the United States and elsewhere. Such incidents as I queried you about in my unanswered email of March 31, 1997, available on my Web site, regarding the crushing of the magazine Dialogue, the resignations of a number of scholars from the Bahai Encyclopedia, the attacks on the listserv known as Talisman I at Indiana University, the harassing and blacklisting of many individuals, Bahai and non-Bahai, suggest profoundly deep-seated problems within the Bahai community and administration.
To-UHJ1.htm

Committee (BCCA), under the chairmanship of Mark Towfiq, to defeat twice now, along with the collusion of other Bahais, the creation of an unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith which would be known as talk.religion.bahai. You may find extensive documentation for all of these violations of the basic human rights of many Bahais and non-Bahais on my Web site, "The Bahai Faith &
Religious Freedom of Conscience": bahai.htm

Because the third interest poll for talk.religion.bahai on Usenet is approaching, after August 28th, I ask you again to investigate the BCCA and its depriving me of access last November from all private Bahai-only mailing lists at a crucial moment just when the tide of discussion was going very much in favor of the newsgroup, noted
by many observers. I also ask whether you supported or were involved in that decision? The relevant files can be found on my Web site under Bahai-Discuss Archives.
BCCAmenu.htm

Similarly, I would like to know whether your institution or the BCCA has approved of or advocated the recent ban of my email signature file
by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai, as well as their complete ban for more than a year and a half now on all discussion regarding talk.religion.bahai.

The prevailing atmosphere of suppression of free speech and religious conscience that now characterizes the Bahai Faith cannot but call into question the honesty of many members of the Bahai administration and perhaps the institutions themselves.

I ask once more whether censorship is allowed in the Bahai Faith
and what passages of the Bahai Writings support it, what are the "rules," if you will, of Bahai censorship?

My Response to:

uhj message to Iranian bahais - 26 November 2003 - Day of the Covenant

Passages from The Secret of Divine Civilization that the uhj has conveniently left out of the balance in its 26 November 2003 message
to Iranian bahais:

O ye that have minds to know! Raise up your suppliant hands to the heaven of the one God, and humble yourselves and be lowly before Him, and thank Him for this supreme endowment, and implore Him to succor us until, in this present age, godlike impulses may radiate from the conscience of mankind, and this divinely kindled fire which has been entrusted to the human heart may never die away.

(Abdul-Baha, The Secret of Divine Civilization, p. 1)

One of the principal reasons why people of other religions have shunned and failed to become converted to the Faith of God is fanaticism and unreasoning religious zeal.

(Abdul-Baha, The Secret of Divine Civilization, p. 52)

We regard fanaticism and zealotry as redounding to our credit and honor, and not content with this, we denounce one another and plot each other's ruin, and whenever we wish to put on a show of wisdom and learning, of virtue and godliness, we set about mocking and reviling this one and that. "The ideas of such a one," we say, "are know nothing of the true state of affairs and the real basis for all such talk, and remain completely unaware of the fact that a thousand selfish purposes are concealed behind the supposedly religious speakers of this type are motivated by virtuous zeal, when the truth is that such individuals keep up a great hue and cry because they see their own personal ruin in the welfare of the masses, and believe that if the people's eyes are opened, their own light will go out.

Only the

(Abdul-Baha, The Secret of Divine Civilization, p. 55)

The uhj writes, "Protest, even the mildest and most reasonable, was smothered by a secret police unconstrained by any constitutional oversight"! Their hypocrisy clearly knows no bounds. The "personal files" mentioned by Lena, essentially dossiers of slander and abuse compiled by spying on fellow Bahais, ought to be considered in this context, as should the uhj's treatment of many dozens, if not thousands, of people during the last decade, documented thoroughly now on a number of websites.

The uhj further writes, "From all sides today one hears cries of protest against endemic rights and the suppression of thought," clearly deaf to the protest they themselves have provoked by their incessant abuse of Abdul-Baha's Teachings respecting free speech and conscience.

The uhj goes on to mention "the slander of Baha'u'llah's Cause" as though they themselves have not participated and supported one of the most vitriolic and deceitful campaigns of slander against numerous individuals for well over several years, always "grossly false and whose sole aim is to arouse popular contempt and antagonism. No calumny has been too vile; no lie too outrageous. At no point during those long years ... were ... the victims of this vilification, given an opportunity, however slight, to defend yourselves and to provide the facts that would have exposed such calculated poisoning of the public mind." One need only think of the treatment of Juan Cole, the Walbridges, Michael McKenny, Alison Marshall, and many others, by the likes of the lowest creatures of the administrative order to perceive the appalling degree of hypocrisy used by the uhj on the Day of the Covenant. (Mirza Ahmad Sohrab and the Chanlers received the same "slanderous vilification" decades ago.)

The uhj demonstrates it knows well how to wield the weapons of slander and personal abuse and how to train its spokespersons to their designs: "...the spiritual damage done to the victims. Deliberate oppression aims at dehumanizing those whom it subjugates and at de-legitimizing them as members of society, entitled to neither rights nor consideration. Where such conditions persist over any length of time, many of those affected lose confidence in their own perception of themselves. Inexorably, they become drained of that spirit of initiative that is integral to human nature and are reduced to the level of objects to be dealt with as their rulers decide." Few familiar with the record of the "administrative order" over the last decade or so will think for a moment that such knowledge was learned by observing events in Iran rather than by meting out its own tyrannical and dastardly deeds upon all too many innocents.

No better than the Son of the Wolf and the other oppressors and despots who tyrannized over Baha'u'llah....

That the uhj has been successful in deceiving government and ecclesiastical officials, the general public through its manipulation of the media, as well as itself, does not change the appalling record of its own disgraceful, fundamentalist acts of censorship and tyranny in defiance of Abdul-Baha's indelible Teaching "that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected;

and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of creation, and manifestation of the hidden verities of the contingent world." Abdul-Baha's Words were not a tactic; they were and are the standard by which every tyrant must be judged, including the corrupted "universal" house of "justice."

THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE BAHA'I WORLD CENTRE

Department of the Secretariat
7 April 1999
To all National Spiritual Assemblies

Dear Baha'i Friends,

Issues Related to the Study of the Baha'i Faith

In May of 1998, Baha'i Canada reproduced a collection of letters which the Universal House of Justice had written to various individuals on the subject of the academic study of the Baha'i Faith. Copies of this compilation were subsequently mailed by the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly to its sister Assemblies. The reprint has now been made generally available in booklet form by the United States Baha'i Publishing Trust. The House of Justice has asked us to forward you a copy of the latter publication with the following comments.

As a number of the friends are aware, a campaign of internal opposition to the Teachings is currently being carried on through the use of the Internet, a communications system that now reaches virtually every part of the world. Differing from attacks familiar in the past, it seeks to recast the entire Faith into a socio-political ideology alien to Baha'u'llah's intent. In the place of the institutional authority established by His Covenant, it promotes a kind of interpretive authority which those behind it attribute to the views of persons technically trained in Middle East studies.

Early in 1996, the deliberate nature of the plan was revealed in an accidental posting to an Internet list which Baha'i subscribers had believed was dedicated to scholarly exploration of the Cause. Some of the people responsible resigned from the Faith when Counsellors pointed out to them the direction their activities were taking. A small number of others continue to promote the campaign within the Baha'i community.

In the past, in situations of a somewhat similar nature, the patience and compassion shown by 'Abdul-Baha and the Guardian helped various believers who had been misled by ill-intentioned persons to eventually free themselves from such entanglements. In this same spirit of forbearance the Universal House of Justice has intervened in the current situation only to the extent that has been unavoidable, trusting to the good sense and the goodwill of the believers involved to awaken to the spiritual dangers to which they are exposing themselves. Nevertheless, certain Counsellors and National Spiritual Assemblies are monitoring the problem closely, and the friends can be confident that whatever further steps are needed to protect the integrity of the Cause will be taken.

As passages in the enclosed reprint make clear, this campaign of internal opposition -- while purporting to accept the legitimacy of the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice as twin successors of Baha'u'llah and the Centre of His Covenant -- attempts to cast doubt on the nature and scope of the authority conferred on them in the Writings. When other Baha'is have pointed out that such arguments contradict explicit statements of the Master, persons behind the scheme have responded by calling into question the soundness of 'Abdul-Baha's own judgement and perspective. Gradually, these arguments have exposed the view of those involved that Baha'u'llah Himself was not the voice of God to our age but merely a particularly enlightened moral philosopher, one whose primary concern was to reform existing society.

By itself, such opposition would likely stand little chance of influencing reasonably informed Baha'is. As one of the letters in the enclosed reprint (20 July 1997) points out, the scheme relies for effect, therefore, on exploiting the confusion created in modern thought by the reigning doctrines of materialism. Although the reality of God's continuous relationship with His creation and His intervention in human life and history are the very essence of the teachings of the Founders of the revealed religions, dogmatic materialism today insists that even the nature of religion itself can be adequately understood only through the use of an academic methodology designed to ignore the truths that make religion what it is.

In general, the strategy being pursued has been to avoid direct attacks on the Faith's Central Figures. The effort, rather, has been to sow the seeds of doubt among believers about the Faith's teachings and institutions by appealing to unexamined prejudices that Baha'is may have unconsciously absorbed from non-Baha'i society. In defiance of the clear interpretation of 'Abdul-Baha and the Guardian, for example, Baha'u'llah's limiting of membership on the Universal House of Justice to men is misrepresented as merely a "temporary measure" subject to eventual revision if sufficient pressure is brought to bear. Similarly, Shoghi Effendi's explanation of Baha'u'llah's vision of the future Baha'i World Commonwealth that will unite spiritual and civil authority is dismissed in favour of the assertion that the modern political concept of "separation of church and state" is somehow one that Baha'u'llah intended as a basic principle of the World Order He has founded. Particularly subtle is an attempt to suggest that the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar should evolve into a seat of quasi-doctrinal authority, parallel to and essentially independent of the Local House of Justice, which would permit various interests to insinuate themselves into the direction of the life processes of the Cause.

Typically, when misrepresentations of the kind described are challenged, the reaction of those behind the campaign has been to claim that their civil rights are being threatened, an assertion that is of course meaningless in the light of the purely voluntary nature of Baha'i membership. Much emphasis is placed by them also on academic freedom, their view of which proves, on examination, to be merely freedom on their part to pervert scholarly discourse to the promotion of their own ideological agenda, while seeking to exclude from discussion features of the Baha'i Faith that are central to the Writings of its Founders.

The effect of continued exposure to such insincerity about matters vital
to humanity's well-being is spiritually corrosive. When we encounter minds that are closed and hearts that are darkened by evident malice, Baha'u'llah urges that we leave such persons to God and turn our attention to the opportunities which multiply daily for the promotion of the truths which He teaches. In words written at the direction of the Guardian, regarding a situation similar to, though much less serious than, the present one, " ... the friends should be advised to just leave these people alone, for their influence can be nothing but negative and destructive...."

To all National Spiritual Assemblies

7 April 1999

The enclosed material is being sent to your Assembly less out of concern over the immediate situation, which is being systematically addressed, than because of longer-term considerations to which it lends perspective. What we are currently seeing, in a relatively primitive form, is the emergence of a new kind of internal opposition to Baha'u'llah's Mission. While it will no doubt assume other features as time passes, it is a kind of opposition that takes aim directly at Baha'u'llah's assertion of the spiritual nature of reality and of humanity's dependence on the interventions of Divine Revelation.

Developments of the kind described will come as no surprise to friends who are familiar with the Guardian's description of the successive waves of "crisis" and "victory" that have marked the history of the Faith ever since its inception. It is precisely this cyclical process, Shoghi Effendi says, that has propelled the steady unfoldment of Baha'u'llah's intent, testing our commitment to His Teachings, purifying His community, and releasing a greater measure of the capacities latent in His Revelation. That resistance to Baha'u'llah should now be emerging in yet a new guise is itself a tribute to the gathering strength of the Cause, offering the friends everywhere new opportunities for the deepening of their faith and the energizing of their work.

With loving Baha'i greetings,

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Subject: ** bahai ** uhj LIES to United Nations & US Government Date: Saturday, June 10, 2000 9:37 AM

The uhj in "The Turning Point for All Nations," a 1997 policy piece aimed at the United Nations, presented to many prominent people in several different governments, hypocritically writes,

"The minimum standards for conduct by a government towards its people have been well established in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and subsequent international covenants, collectively referred to as the International Bill of Human Rights."

"Without an unshakable commitment to regular and periodic elections with universal participation by secret ballot, to ***freedom of expression*** and to other such ***human rights***, a member state stands in the way of the active and intelligent participation of the vast majority of its population in the affairs of its own communities."

"We propose that there should be ***consequences*** for member states that violate these standards. Similarly, nations seeking recognition should be denied membership until they openly espouse these standards or make recognizable efforts to move in that direction."

Yet the truth is that uhj has hypocritically violated the human rights of many, many Bahais, often intellectuals who have candidly expressed their views, often in the context of their studies and research, driving them out of the Bahai faith or ostracizing them, including academics in major American universities.

It has done so without any ***consequences*** whatsoever, with impunity. The UN and other official government bodies should at least hold it accountable, instead of always being deceived by Bahai public relations people every time there is a crisis in Iran.

The uhj continues its hypocrisy by saying

"Far from encouraging the punitive spirit that has often masqueraded under its name in past ages, justice is the practical expression of awareness that, in the achievement of human progress, the interests of the individual and those of society are inextricably linked. To the extent that justice becomes a guiding concern of human interaction, a ***consultative climate*** is encouraged that permits options to be examined dispassionately and appropriate courses of action selected. In such a climate the perennial tendencies toward manipulation and partisanship are far less likely to deflect the decision-making process."

It is the uhj itself that has poisoned the climate of the Bahai faith through suppression and tyranny and a pervasive ***punitive spirit*** that can only tolerate its own fundamentalist voice. Many such passages of hypocrisy exist in the documents the uhj generates for release to the UN and various governments and public officials.

After reading ALL of the above, think carefully about the influence on the UN of someone like Doug Martin who holds such a fundamentalist interpretation of the bahai faith.

Does the UN know the record of the bahai faith regarding freedom of conscience within its own ranks? I would find it very worrisome if it does.

My guess is that bahais at the UN, such as Techeste Ahderom, co-chair of the Millennium Forum and the principal bahai representative to the United Nations, dismiss concerns whenever they are raised by anyone within the Organization, essentially participating in deception.

Message from discussion 7th Circuit Ct of Appeals Judges hammer NSA's attorney

Mr. Jeffrey Goldberg comments below, quotes from the Court Record, and follows up with further comment at the end:

The oral arguments of the Wilmette NSA's appeal of Judge St. Eve's decision favoring the Orthodox Baha'is was held on 20 February 2009 in Chicago Illinois.

Here is a transcript of part of the exchange between Mr. Handelman, the attorney for the NSA, and a couple of the Judges of the Court of Appeals. No matter how hard he tried to obfuscate the outrageous position of the NSA, the Judges carefully questioned him and exposed the oppressive and fascist nature of the NSA's position, and it is here for all the world to see. [Incidentally, Judge Bauer below persistently questions Mr. Handelman on how the 1966 injunction was entered and Mr. Handelman evades the fundamental truth that only the NSA appeared at the "hearing" and that the Remey organization did not appear and put on evidence (for some unknown reason). Mr. Handelman later admitted that only the NSA appeared which means the Injunction was effectively entered by "default"]

Here is part of the oral argument. Enjoy:

Judge William J. Bauer Judge Sykes

Jeffery A. Handelman, for Defendant-Appellant National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States: The principle we are here advancing today has been adopted by other courts of appeals and that is that a-- while the general rule is that a nonparty cannot be bound by an injunction issued in a case in which it wasn't named as a party, there are -- there is an important exception to that general rule and that is a nonparty is bound by an injunction if he is legally identified with the defendant corporation...

Judge William J. Bauer: Do you know of any case involving that particular rule that you enunciated to us in a civil rights case?

Handelman: Your honor, there are a couple of cases on point, the Federal Circuit in Additive Controls addressed this question of what do you do in applying an injunction when the corporate defendant has been dissolved.

Judge Bauer: That had to do with a patent infringement case?

Handelman: That is correct.

Judge Bauer: Other than a patent infringement case, do you have anything besides-- civil rights cases that involve that theory that you just enunciated?

Handelman: The two cases we rely on-- one is a patent infringement case Additive Controls. The other one is a trademark infringement case

Judge Bauer: Also from the Circuit?

Handelman: That is from the First Circuit

Judge Bauer: The First Circuit?

Handelman: Correct. Both of these cases draw on, first of all, the fact that Rule 65d codified the common law in this regard and so Justice Jackson in the Regal Knitwear case summarized Rule 65d: "is derived from the common law doctrine that a decree of injunction not only binds the parties defendant but also those identified with them in interest."

Judge Bauer: Let me intrude myself again. Was the original injunction a consent decree or was it a fought out battle?

Handelman: No the scenario leading to the injunction, the...

Judge Bauer: No, all I ask is a very simple question. Did Judge Austin formulate this decree himself or was it a consent decree?

Handelman: It was not a consent decree.

Judge Bauer: OK

Handelman: There were findings of fact and conclusions of law...

Judge Bauer: Based on a contested argument before, and presentation of evidence before Judge Austin?

Handelman: The... my understanding is that the NSA...

Judge Bauer: See you weren't around in those days. I was.

Handelman: But your Honor Judge Austin.. Bare in mind this was the counterclaim, the original was, was against the NSA. The trademark infringement claim was brought by way of a counterclaim. So they started it. We responded and there was a findings of fact and conclusions of law entered by Judge Aspen.

Judge Bauer: After a hearing?

Handelman: I do not know if there was testimony at the hearing. I do not believe there was testimony given at the hearing by both sides but Judge Austin...

Judge Bauer: What was the predicate for the decision? Stipulation of facts?

Handelman: No, there was no stipulation, the NSA...

Judge Bauer: Then how did he arrive at a decree at all?

Handelman: The uh, I believe, the NSA submitted, appeared at the hearing and presented Judge Austin. I don't know if there was live testimony at the hearing or not but it presented evidence on which the findings and conclusions were based.

Judge Bauer: What evidence did they and how did they present it?

Handelman: Well, for example, the deposition of the chairman of the UHG was taken and submitted to the Court, so we had the deposition...

Judge Bauer: Accepted by both sides as factually true?

Handelman: The testimony was sworn deposition testimony of the Chairman

Judge Bauer: There is sworn testimony on each side of the case normally but I want to know, how did Judge Austin arrive at the conclusion if there was no presentation of live witnesses?

Handelman: Um

Judge Bauer: Was it a stipulation of facts? In which case..

Handelman: No I do not believe it was a stipulation, your honor. We can look into whether Judge Bauer: It was a question of fact, and he made a resolution based on affidavits?

Handelman: If I could look into that and get back to you I would prefer to do that.

Judge Bauer: I have no idea how the decree came to be, thats my problem

Handelman: OK

Judge Diane S. Sykes: Do you know whether the constitutionality of issuing such an Injunction was litigated, given the religious context?

Handelman: Yeah, I believe Judge Austin made explicit findings that the trademark laws apply equally to religious organizations and commercial organizations and that this, this case involved a blatant infringement of trademark rights that were recognized under federal law.

Judge Sykes: The legal landscape in this area of course has changed since then. We are talking of, about an injunction issued 40 years ago and the Supreme Court, in the meantime has issued the Presbyterian Church case that talks about the principles, the neutral principles doctrine that needs to be applied in this context, and of course that case wasn't on the books at the time.

Handelman: That is correct your honor. With respect to, first of all the validity of the trademark and the finding of infringement, those issues are not open to be retried in the context of a contempt proceeding as a prefatory matter, but beyond that the law is well settled that religious organizations as I mentioned are entitled to the protection of the trademark laws and in this case...

Judge Sykes: But they are not entitled to a judicial declaration that their church is the one true church and thats what Judge Austin said.

Handelman: Well if, your honor, in the context of a religious case under the Lanham Act, the mark is valid. There is no per se rule against trademark protection in the religious organization context. What you look at is whether the mark in question signifies affiliation or membership with a single organization and in this case the National Spiritual Assembly has a three tiered administrative structure as is laid out in the briefs. You have the Universal House of Justice at the highest level, you have the national spiritual assemblies at the intermediate level of which there are 183 worldwide, and then you have the local spiritual assembly. The Baha'i mark is federally registered, is extensively used, was federally registered at the time of the original injunction, and it signifies members who are affiliated with national spiritual assemblies authorized by the Universal House of Justice in Haifa. Now whats happening in this case, the Alleged Contemnors, are through their web sites calling themselves the official, in one case, the SIBC has a web site where it calls itself the official Universal House of Justice, and as a result prospective members are going to that site thinking they are contacting our client, the Universal House of Justice in Haifa Israel, when they are not. They are also believing that the content on the site is approved by the Universal House of Justice, when it is not. And this is precisely the harm that the Lanham Act is intended to prevent and Professor McCarthy in his treatise recognizes as much, and if I could quote briefly: "If a parent religious society remains true to the tenets of the religion it is entitled to protection against the minority's use of the same name. For example, a preliminary injunction can be obtained by the Mother Church against a local which has disaffiliated as it stops paying to the Mother Church and the rationale makes sense because without a preliminary injunction the Mother Church would be outside of..."

Judge Bauer: Who are you quoting at the moment?

Handelman: Professor McCarthy, his treatise on Trademark and Unfair Competition. So he is recognizing...

Judge Bauer: He is recognizing but the Supreme Court is more significant than Professor McCarthy is I would suspect, wouldn't you?

Handelman: But the point is that this case does not call upon this Court to evaluate religious doctrine. It calls upon this Court to apply the Lanham Act to religious organizations which has been done before.

Judge Sykes: Well to the extent that you are reading the injunction as prohibiting anyone other than the NSA from using the word Baha'i in the title of the religious organization's name, um, that clearly raises some constitutional concerns. Is that how you are reading the injunction? That you have exclusive, that your client has exclusive rights to the term Baha'i and no schismatic organization, schismatic group, breakaway group could ever use it into perpetuity in the United States?

Handelman: As long as the trademark rights are valid and federally registered and not abandoned, that is correct, as Professor...

Judge Sykes: The word Baha'i? So to use a hypothetical. Someone could copyright Christianity. Somebody could copyright Judaism, and that would prohibit anybody else from using that terminology in the title of their religious organization?

Handelman: No, each, each religious name or

Judge Sykes: I am sorry, not copyright, trademark.

Handelman: Yeah, each religious name or mark has to be evaluated on its own merits. There is no blanket...

Judge Sykes: But whats the response to the hypothetical, though?

Handelman: The hypothetical is yes, we. In other words a splinter group that is not affiliated with the National Spiritual Assembly authorized by the Universal House of Justice is not permitted to use the term Baha'i in a way where it is holding itself out as being affiliated with the group headed by and authorized by the Universal House of Justice.

Judge Sykes: Well that's, that's, different. But they can use the word Baha'i in the name of their new church, but they just can't use it in a way that implies affiliation with the Mother Church.

Handelman: That is correct. They cannot, cannot confuse the public into believing that they are affiliated with the Mother church when they are not, particularly where, as here, their doctrines are in many cases antithetical to those espoused by the Mother Church.

Judge Sykes: What could they call themselves and escape liability for contempt?

Handelman: They would have to use a non-confusingly similar name because they are not...

Judge Sykes: Can they use the word Baha'i?

Handelman: It would depend on-- not if it suggested affiliation with the Mother Church.

Judge Bauer: How about Reform Bahai? Can they use that term?

Handelman: That would be a hypothetical that...

Judge Bauer: That's my hypothetical...

Handelman: It would...

Judge Bauer: And I want a hypothetical answer.

Handelman: If the use suggested affiliation...

Judge Bauer: I just gave it to you. Reform Bahai.

Handelman: No, that. Under the injunction, that would be pro-pro-prohibited. The injunction...

Judge Bauer: Yeah, I read the Injunction. I just don't know how it came to be. But you're going to enlighten me on that subject.

Handelman: So the injunction would prohibit a use likely to cause confusion as to affiliation....

For documentation regard the generic term "Bahai" being used in the USA since 1900, see the January 7, 2008 letter from the Reform Bahai Faith at [Letters to Judge Amy St. Eve - Reform Bahai Faith, Response to the US District Court Ruling ]

Funny thing is Mr. Handelman quotes from Professor McCarthy that "If a parent religious society remains true to the tenets of the religion it is entitled to protection against the minority's use of the same name." Of course, the Wilmette NSA DOES NOT REMAIN TRUE to the tenets of the religion as the Orthodox Baha'is are constantly pointing out.

We do not know how the Court will rule, but clearly the Judges of the 7th Circuit are not fooled by the NSA's obfuscation. The NSA wants the Courts to enforce their belief that they are the one and only Baha'i Faith, and the NSA has proved itself to be in contempt of the basic religious freedoms of this country, even while the publicly whine about similarly motivated persecution against them in Iran, a country that does not have the same traditions of freedom of religion.

The true colors of the NSA come out here. They would trample over our freedom of religion and the Bill of Rights of the U.S. constitution. This is the World Order they seek to impose upon the world.

Jeffrey

There has been no evidence that the Orthodox Baha'is have any web sites or publications that confuse the public to believe that we are affiliated with the headless UHJ. To the contrary, everything on our sites is critical of that organization and expressly points out our differences. But they have taken the position that simply use of the word "Baha'i" somehow creates the confusion and this is an absurd and over-reaching view.

Jeffrey

The suit involves both the Orthodox Baha'is and the Baha'is under the Provisions of the Covenant (which is the Jensen/Chase group and I believe is responsible for the web site you mentioned). My point was that there is nothing like that from the OBF group. The NSA's actual position, as stated by Handelman after questioning by the Judges, is that nobody else can use the word Baha'i, and this position is outrageous if only you could see dispassionately and free of fanatic blinders.

Jeffrey

There is no confusion in use of terms. The NSA's attorney was trying his best not to state what their position was, but after being hammered by the Judges, he was forced to admit that the NSA wants to enforce the Judgment's finding that they are the one true Baha'i Faith and they are the only ones who could call themselves Baha'i.

This finding happens to be unconstitutional and goes against a long line of Supreme Court precedent which began in 1969, several years after the Judgment was entered. This is what bothers the Judges of the Court of Appeals. The NSA is asking them to deny us our religious freedom-- the right to call ourselves Baha'is.

Jeffrey

The comments of the heterodox believers demonstrates their lack of understanding of the Faith. They don't think that preventing us from calling ourselves Baha'i would prevent us from practicing our religion. But isn't that what the Iranian authorities are doing: "Stop saying you are a Baha'i and then we will restore your rights"?

They effectively wish us to recant our Faith.

Jeffrey

The Supreme Court case was not decided until 1969, and at the time of the 1966 Judgment the federal courts were split on the issue (which split was resolved by the Supreme Court).

The Orthodox Baha'is did raise the issue and the line of cases from 1969 on neutrality principles, but Judge St. Eve never even reached the issue because she ruled that the Orthodox Baha'is were not even bound by the Judgment. Since we are not bound by it, the question of the Judgment's enforceability did not have to be decided.

Jeffrey

I believe this is a correct statement. There is binding authority and persuasive authority. A decision of this Court of Appeals is binding only in the 7th Circuit, although its logic and reasoning will be persuasive beyond that.

Jeffrey

Not only does Judge Bauer mention Reform Baha'i but he insists that the NSA's attorney answer whether or not someone could call himself a Reform Baha'i, and the NSA attorney finally is forced to admit the NSA's position which is that nobody can call themselves a Baha'i unless they are recognized by his client's UHJ.

Jeffrey

Not only is it disgraceful, but it is extremely hypocritical for them to run to Congress seeking its condemnation of Iran for persecution of Baha'is when they are doing the same to us. While the NSA's persecution of the OBF may be different in scale (but only because the NSA does not have the power to imprison us or execute us), they are motivated by the same idea that they perceive us to be heretical and because we are opposed to their religious authority. It is mind-boggling for these people to expect the federal courts in the United States to enforce their version of the Baha'i Faith, to say they are the one true Faith and everyone else cannot be Baha'is.

It really does not matter, though, whether they get a court order against us, or whether they have suckered a whole bunch of people so that they have larger numbers. It does not matter how small we are. The only thing that matters is what is true and what is false. They are false and they are destined to fail. Their entire organization is a house of cards ready to tumble down at any time. Thank God for that!

Jeffrey

"[T]he chain of successorship lacks a link," wrote the Honorable Amy J. St Eve, United States District Court Judge, in her Judgment in favor of theChicago_trial_january_7_2008_006 Orthodox Bahai Faith and the Baha'i Publishers Under the Provisions of the Covenant. The Court ruled on April 23, 2008 after holding an evidentiary hearing last January 7, 2008 in Chicago, Illinois on the contempt motion brought by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States (Wilmette NSA).

In her decision, the Court stated that: "the vast weight of the record (including credible testimony) reflects that there was a significant doctrinal rift on a critical tenet of each group's faith, and that the PNBC's membership varied materially from that of the NSA-UHG. The record further reflects a demonstrable lack of intent to violate the injunction, and that the PNBC was not created to avoid the effect of the injunction. Simply put, there is no substantial continuity between the NSA-UHG and the PNBC, and, as a result, Mr. Schlatter, Mr. Marangella, and the PNBC have not violated the injunction."

Excerpts:

p: 12
II. Application To The Court's Findings of Fact Applying the above-stated principles here, none of the Alleged Contemnors is in privity with the bound entity, and thus none has violated the injunction. In rendering this finding, the Court has carefully and deliberately weighed all of the evidence adduced at the hearing and otherwise submitted by the parties. The Court closely assessed the demeanor of each testifying witness, including his or her body language, tone of voice, facial expressions, mannerisms, and other factors indicative of credibility.

p. 27

Rather, the vast weight of the record (including credible testimony) reflects that there was a significant doctrinal rift on a critical tenet of each group's faith, and that the PNBC's membership varied materially from that of the NSA-UHG. The record further reflects a demonstrable lack of intent to violate the injunction, and that the PNBC was not created to avoid the effect of the injunction. Simply put, there is no substantial continuity between the NSA-UHG and the PNBC, and, as a result, Mr. Schlatter, Mr. Marangella, and the PNBC have not violated the injunction.

p. 31

After considering the full record in this case, the Court finds that SIBC and the BPUPC are not in privity with the NSA-UHG....

p. 32

CONCLUSION

For the above reasons, the Court finds that the Alleged Contemnors are not in privity with the NSA-UHG and, in turn, that they are not in contempt of the injunction.

Re: Civil Action No. 64 C 1878

Dear Judge St. Eve:

As amici curiae, members of the Reform Bahai Faith are concerned about the impact of the present lawsuit upon our denomination, though differing in view from all named parties. Religious liberty is not only involved but is the issue before the Court. [nsa-memo.pdf for the lie made before the court that "No question of religious liberty is involved," page 2.]

While all named parties essentially differ over their interpretation of the purported will and testament of Abdul-Baha, members of the Reform Bahai Faith agree with the 1929 opinion of Bahai Ruth White and the 1930 Report of Dr. Charles Ainsworth Mitchell that the will is a fraudulent document.

Dr. Mitchell was a leading forensic researcher of the time at the British Museum and his work is still cited in academic sources. His Report is deposited with the Library of Congress (LC Control No.: mm 81000871) and a recently obtained certified copy is herewith provided to the Court.

The key passage of Dr. Mitchell's Report, on the last page, second to the last paragraph, reads, "A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdu'l-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens."

Respectfully,

Re: Civil Action No. 64 C 1878

Dear Judge St. Eve:

As amici curiae, members of the Reform Bahai Faith are very concerned about the impact of this lawsuit upon our denomination.

The lawyer [delete] has reported to us that the nsa of the Haifan Baha'i denomination has claimed in Court that the Reform Bahai Faith does not exist. I am writing to inform you that there are approximately [delete] members of the Reform Bahai Faith, most of whom are citizens of the United States of America. The Reform Bahai Press is a legally registered entity in Oakland County, Michigan and will publish its first book in 2008.

As mentioned in my March 8, 2007 amici curiae letter to you, while members of the Reform Bahai Faith believe the will and testament of Abdul-Baha was a fraudulent document, the Reform Bahai Faith looks to the beginning of our denomination in the numerous books and writings of Ruth White, Julie Chanler, and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, from 1928 through the 1950s. The latter two were both described in New York Times obituaries as members of the Reform Bahai Movement, and I herewith provide documentation.

In our view, the nsa of the Haifan Baha'i denomination is hiding behind and using, indeed manipulating corporate law to conduct what is essentially a doctrinal struggle with the several Bahai denominations that have evolved and have existed since as early as 1928 in the case of Ruth White. The nsa has done this repeatedly through the US courts and legal system: in 1928 through misrepresentation and fraud it copyrighted and trademarked the word Bahai; in 1941, it sued unsuccessfully Chanler and Sohrab twice; it sued Mason Remey in 1966 but he was reportedly too old and feeble to show up and defend himself being out of the country; it is now attempting to use the US District Court of Northern Illinois to silence the several active and existing Bahai denominations with which it differs on religious doctrine and interpretation. For decades, in and out of the courts, the NSA has used such reprehensible tactics as slander, ad hominem, shunning, and intimidation, and the like, to muzzle and discredit dissenters and other denominations.

We ask the Court to protect both our Constitutional right to religious freedom and conscience and to protect us from having to choose between our loyalty to our government and legal system and the integrity of our beliefs. Though small in number from our beginning in 2004, we are sincere in our religious convictions, and ask the Court to protect our right to grow and develop unharassed by those who under the guise of corporate law seek to destroy us.

Respectfully,

Courtroom 1241, Chambers 1260
Everett McKinley Dirksen Federal Building

Dear Judge St. Eve:

The Reform Bahai Faith submits to the Court that the NSA of Wilmette, while publicly hiding behind a facade of liberalism, is essentially practicing Islamic "takfir," in the words of the scholar of Islam Bernard Lewis, "recognizing and denouncing apostasy," labeling people "kafir" or infidels, and issuing "fatwas" or decrees, denying the very existence of other Bahais and denominations, all indicative of the worst in the Shiite Islamic heritage of the Bahai Faith-practices Baha'u'llah specifically rejected, teaching tolerance of different religious views congruent with modern Western custom and practice. Nothing could be more diametrically opposed to the democracy of our civic and legal order. The NSA of Wilmette is essentially seeking to use the Court in a type of jihad.

Although the Reform Bahai Faith is not a party to Civil Action No. 64 C 1878, we have knowledge of what we believe are malicious and slanderous misrepresentations made to the Court on behalf of the NSA of Wilmette in Document 49-2:

"14. The Web site at 'reformbahai.org' is the site of an outspoken critic of NSA named FG. While the Web site gives the impression that an organization is associated with Mr. Glaysher, there is no such organization. On information and belief, Mr. Glaysher's claims are simply not taken seriously by any one. The Web site is merely a stage, in a corner of the Web, for Mr. Glaysher's unusual fixation upon, and animus toward, NSA. This, of course, is not evidence of a Baha'i Faith denomination. The attached affidavit of Tracey Giertz indicates there was no content at this site until September 3, 2004. See id at ¶ 18."

The NSA of Wilmette offers the Court no "information" but ad hominem and slanderous vilification, which it has routinely used against other Bahai denominations since as early as the 1930s. Tracey Giertz, in her affidavit ends with Paragraph 16, making no mention of the Reform Bahai Faith or www.reformbahai.org, only the Free Bahais. Neither I nor the Reform Bahai Faith has ever had any interest in, or ownership of, the Free Bahais and their website. Nor have I or the Reform Bahai Faith ever been involved in any way with the Unitarian Bahais and their website. Our website was available online beginning August 19, 2004. By chance, the Reform Bahai website is registered through the same registration service as the Free Bahais, GoDaddy.com, one of the least expensive, used by over 25 million people, and which protects personal information from identity thieves. The Archive service Tracey Giertz used often takes a week or two to find and document new websites.

With approximately [deleted] members, most of whom are US citizens, Reform Bahais indeed do exist and are actively seeking to grow and develop in accordance with the rights and obligations of the Constitution and Bill of Rights. The NSA is seeking to use the ruling of a US Court against Bahai denominations who hold other religious opinions and thereby prohibit the "free exercise" of their and our First Amendment rights.

I also wish to inform the Court that the Reform Bahai Press has just published its first book of Bahai writings, The Universal Principles of the Reform Bahai Faith, available for sale throughout the country and much of the world since December 14, 2007. I have enclosed a copy of the book for the Court as further evidence of our existence as a growing, independent Bahai denomination.

The Reform Bahai Faith does not use either an apostrophe nor diacritical marks in the generic word Bahai, a spelling widely used in the USA since as early as 1900.

The Reform Bahai Faith emphatically presents before the Court the fact that it does not look to other Bahai denominations for its understanding of the Teachings of Baha'u'llah, especially all those denominations who are named parties, all of which we believe are based upon a fraudulent will and testament, purporting to be that of Abdul-Baha, and which document gave birth to the fundamentalist religious organization that has initiated the lawsuit before the Court, pretending to be a mere corporation. We provided the Court with a certified copy from the Library of Congress of Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha on March 8, 2007.

The animus of the NSA of Wilmette against the Reform Bahai Faith stems, among those reasons already alluded to, from the fact that the Reform Bahai Faith does not believe in an eventual Bahai theocracy; but a separation of church and state; rejects the infallibility of any Bahai Universal House of Justice; accepts that women can serve at all elected levels, including someday on a properly elected Bahai Universal House of Justice, unlike the corrupt one now located in Haifa, Israel.

We draw the attention of the Court to twenty-six pages of selections from Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom (1942), documenting the attempts by the NSA of Wilmette to trademark and copyright the generic term Bahai in 1928, though Bahais of different belief already existed at that time in Ruth White and others; the 1941 case before Judge Valente of the New York Supreme Court, in New York County; both revealing the unmitigated viciousness that the NSA has directed in the past against American citizens who were Bahais holding different religious convictions. Available via the Internet, Excerpts regarding the 1941 New York Supreme Court Case before Judge Valente:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/BrokenSilence,CourtCase.pdf>

We again appeal to the Court to protect our Constitutional rights to religious freedom and liberty.

Most respectfully yours,

Reform Bahai Faith

Subject: Re: "Conflict and contention are categorically forbidden"

Jeffrey,

I agree with and share your regard for Baha'u'llah's admonition forbidding contention. To my mind, is it applicable in this case? Abdul-Baha spoke forcefully about confronting evil doers, not forgiving them, lest they only continue in their treachery. Further, you're referring to a Baha'i denomination that has knowingly based in its claim to authority on a fraudulent will and testament, while harassing and destroying the lives of countless Baha'is and families throughout the decades. Baha'u'llah Himself confronted the Son of the Wolf and others in unequivocal language and terms. I don't believe the quotation quite fits the conditions.

Reflecting on how the Wilmette nsa and Haifan uhj have reacted to and treated such set backs in the past, I highly doubt you'll see much change in them. They will continue as they have, with you and other Baha'i denominations. Consider that Judge Valente, of the Supreme Court of New York in no uncertain terms ruled against them in their lawsuit against Sohrab and Chanler, pointing out the word Bahai was a generic term that couldn't not be copyrighted or monopolized by one denomination. Time went by, everyone was looking in a different direction. They took out another bogus copyright with the patent office, adding diacritics and an apostrophe, but none the less the same game. A Constitutional lawyer I spoke with about it just laughed, saying it would never stand up in court and that anyone can copyright anything with the government clerks, which is utterly meaningless. But the purpose is to intimidate other Bahais into thinking it means something, as though they own it....

Their thinking isn't based on the reason and rational constructs that make sense in a Western court of law. Sohrab understood quite well that Shoghi Effendi had gone back to the medieval frame of reference, creating a system more resonant with the Shiite worldview. I'm afraid that's the case and why so many of our fellow Bahais are trapped in an iron cage of tyranny and fanaticism. One more Western judge who's a *kafir* won't make a difference in Haifa, or, here's the fact difficult to appreciate, in Wilmette.... They simply aren't going to change as result of this lawsuit. It's hoping for too much from a pernicious system that has demonstrated for so long that it's incapable of change.

It's only a matter of time until they trump up some other bogus lawsuit to justify to themselves their fanaticism. Abdul-Baha spoke of defending people threatened. All Orthodox Baha'is are still under threat. As all denominations are. I doubt the Haifan administration will learn anything from this lawsuit. They've never learned anything from the past but have only intensified their fanaticism at ever turn.

As damaged parties you have legal rights. If they appeal Judge St. Eve's ruling, which they probably will, all the better, because your damages will be all the more undeniable to another judge, or, preferably, a jury. I don't believe a jury of Americans would fail to see through the contemptible tactics of Haifan "administrators." After hearing the whole story, they would eagerly award very high punitive damages to the innocent. Constitutional issues are involved. That puts the entire matter into a different and higher realm of importance.

It's the Haifans who have dragged the Faith through the mud in public. A successful lawsuit against them would help Americans, including people in Chicago, wake up to what kind of organization they really are. That would help cleanse the Faith of the mire that now bogs it down in every way. Eventually, it will happen.

That's my view.

Jeffrey,

Upon further reflection this morning, I would emphasize that what is of concern is not vengeance nor money but justice-- and defending the weak, the vulnerable, the uninformed, the deceived, the simple, the trusting, the unsuspecting from such trauma as many thousands, if not tens of thousands, of American citizens have been subjected to in one way or another by the spiritually sick and corrupt organization that has imposed itself upon Baha'u'llah's Faith, subverting it into a fanatical system of oppression almost beyond what the average person can imagine, as recounted below in your own words in the court documents:

<https://www.truebahai.com/court/obf-goldberg.pdf>

"26. On May 27, 1997, my wife and I were declared to be covenant-breakers and all of my friends in the Faith were instructed to shun me entirely and never to have any contact with me or face the same expulsion themselves. A true and correct copy of the NSA's letter of May 27, 1997, and the front page of The American Bahá'í for June 24, 1997, are attached as Exhibit 5).

27. My wife did not join the OBF at that time but she was also expelled and shunned because she refused to take my children and divorce me as they had insisted she must.

28. The NSA organization claims that shunning us as covenant-breakers is required to maintain the unity of the Faith. The OBF believe, on the other hand, that unity in the Faith is achieved and maintained by obedience to the Center of the Cause, the living Guardian, and that a covenant-breaker is one who rejects the authority of the Guardian.

29. Only one member of my former community, the Bahá'ís of Barrington, Illinois, was willing to speak with me (Janice Franco). At first, I was reluctant to tell Ms. Franco what I had learned because I did not want her to face the same dilemma that I now faced. She insisted, however, that I explain to her what I discovered. I then carefully explained the situation using only materials officially accepted by the NSA to show her my belief that the Hands wrongfully usurped authority and that their Universal House of Justice should have the Guardian as its head. Ms. Franco was declared to be a covenant-breaker and shunned after she dared to share these arguments with the rest of the community. The other community members rejected these arguments after they were threatened by a representative of the NSA's organization that they too would be shunned and cut off forever from many of their friends and family unless they rejected these ideas and shunned my family and I, and Ms. Franco.

30. Just before I had declared my acceptance of the Guardianship, my brother, who was not a Bahá'í at all, coincidentally became engaged to marry a believer under the NSA's organization.

31. I was not permitted to attend my brother's wedding, and my family thereafter had to hold separate family functions so that I would not be present at the same time as brother's wife who literally held the belief that I was satanic and my breath was poisonous so that mere contact with me would be dangerous.

32. After the birth of my nephew, I was not allowed to see him at all, nor does he even know of the existence of his uncle and the rest of my family.

33. My story is by no means unique. Many of my fellow believers within the OBF report similar experiences. Juan Cole, a professor of modern Middle East and Southeastern Asian history for the History department of the University of Michigan has written about the fanatical shunning behavior exhibited by the NSA and its organization, characterizing it as "cultlike." Attached as Exhibit 6 are emails written by Dr. Cole. Attached as Exhibit 7 is an article by Dr Cole detailing the shunning practices."

<https://www.truebahai.com/court/> Related documents regarding nsa lawsuit in 2007 against the Orthodox Baha'i Faith

In a different context, Baha'u'llah wrote "crush the oppressor who flourisheth with the rod of the commandments of your Lord," addressing the leaders of the United States. Admittedly referring to international conflict, he nevertheless allowed and presupposed there are times when force must be used for the benefit of social order and preservation of the values of a humane society. There are despots in this world who understand nothing but force. The perverted organization of the Wilmette nsa and Haifan uhj has beyond doubt demonstrated for many decades its toxic corruption to the body politic and its own members for whom it has very little regard.

In my view, it would be a mistake to treat it in a manner better than it deserves, for it will only continue to malign and persecute other innocents if not brought to bar of justice under the full force of the law. The heavy burden Baha'u'llah places on secular and religious leaders is to understand the wisdom that there are times when they must "crush the oppressor who flourisheth," for the common good.

If you didn't notice the sneering and contempt, I would say you either missed it or misread it.

Jeffrey,

I'd urge you to consider the history of the nsa, whether from your perspective, the last fifty years, or over eighty years, from view. It has incessantly harassed and hounded people for matters of conscience, deeply injured countless individuals and families, schemed and conspired, coerced and deceived, used the most despicable tactics, to deprive fellow citizens of their Constitutional right to freedom of religious belief and conviction.

Such criminals should now be shown no mercy whatsoever, but prosecuted to the fullest extent of American law. They would have shown Orthodox Baha'is no mercy or tolerance if they had prevailed in deceiving the Court. Indeed, the obvious purpose of their lawsuit was to strip you of your civil rights, while pretending to be a mere corporation. Anything less than many tens of millions of dollars will fail to penetrate their corrupt mentality and fail to protect present and future Bahais, of all persuasions, from their sick, complacent self-righteousness. It is just to expose them for what they have become and are. "The best of all to Me is Justice." --Baha'u'llah

There's a very long and detailed historical record of their criminal acts, in numerous books and on the Internet. As you're probably aware, there also exists a large number of people most likely eager to testify in court to defend the civilized values that Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha taught, which the corrupt "administration" left behind so many long decades ago.

Congratulations, again. You fought an arduous and noble battle, virtually alone, out spent, yet won. It must be a gratifying feeling to know you have successfully defended the most precious values of a civilized society and of Baha'u'llah's Teachings. You can rightly be proud of that.

My deepest, sincere respect.

Jeffrey,

I would think, given their harassment and attempt to deprive Orthodox Baha'is, and other denominations, of their and our first admendment rights, you might want to consider suing the Haifan Baha'is for costs and damages. All of your lives were severely impacted by their deceptive and fraudulent lawsuit, forcing many older people to travel long distances and forage through numerous documents under what had to be extremely stressful and emotional duress attempting to protect themselves. It would only be just for you to sue them back in self-defense. They're not going to be leaving you and others alone otherwise. The underlings here have already been immediately sneering at the Judge Amy St. Eve's Opinion. You know they're doing it elsewhere.

I would suggest punitive damages of $50 to $100 million. The more the better, given the criminals you're dealing with and the tactics they've regularly used, which you can easily prove and document. Many six-hundred-dollar-an-hour lawyers will work pro-bono for serious settlements in that range, though go for more if they think you can get it. Issues of first admendment rights, and intentionally and criminally infringing on them, have historically proven highly lucrative for lawyers. That's what the lawyers I've consulted with tell me.

If you don't teach them the lesson they need to learn now, they will only continue their harassment of Orthodox Baha'is other Baha'i denominations and their associated criminal activities. Of course, I'm not so naive as to imagine, though, that they'll ever fully reform. It's more about self-defense than doing them a good turn. The fanatics and criminals among the Haifan Baha'is are beyond redemption, but you would be giving the more practical heads a reason for considering various changes of behavior.

They'll never be content with "an inability to silence" you. I am speaking from over 12 years of dealing with the fanatics online, since 1996.... I would suggest you need another judgement or two that further establishes the facts and protects the religious rights of Orthodox Baha'is in clear and unequivocal terms. That's what I would think you'd want to do.

That's my view.

Subject: Re: Court issues decision in NSA contempt case against Orthodox Baha'is

Dear Non-Bahai Observers,

Please consider that after spending over $100,000 trying to destroy three Baha'i denominations of fewer than a 100 people, and after Judge Amy St. Eve of the U. S. District Court of Northern Illinois has ruled against the Wilmette nsa in its frivolous lawsuit, seeking to deprive U. S. citizens of their Constitutional rights, the usual tactic of ignoring and changing the issue is now being deployed by members of the Baha'i denomination based on a fraudulent will and testament.

Such tactics have been used for decades by the Haifan Baha'is, in and out of courts of law, to slander and smear the individual and other Bahai denominations. They are the same tactics used by all fanatics and fundamentalists, religious or political, to stigmatize or demonize the person of dissenting opinion. Quotations from numerous individuals documenting these tactics, spanning decades, may be found below:

"The Bahai Technique":

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

Shunning & Slander > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

Fortunately, for the sake of the freedom and liberty of Orthodox Baha'is and Baha'is of other denominations, Judge Amy St. Eve was not fooled by such cult techniques. Her name will live forever in Bahai circles where the principles actually taught by Abdul-Baha, extolling the conscience of the individual, are honored, revered, and practiced.

The response of the Haifan apologists is evidence, once again, why the Orthodox Baha'is should counter-sue the Haifan Baha'is for the damages they have incurred from the frivolous lawsuit, which have indeed been wreaked upon individual Orthodox Baha'is and the denomination as a whole, as I have outlined in previous posts.

The only unmoderated, i.e., uncensored forum on the Internet for discussion of all things Baha'i. Note well that one of the tactics of Baha'i fundamentalists regarding talk.religion.bahai is, and has been, to pollute the atmosphere with disinformation and discredit liberals with abuse and slander, so that they can then point to talk.religion.bahai as what happens without supposedly superior control and restraint on free speech and conscience, extolling their tightly controlled mouthpiece, soc.religion.bahai.

Similarly, most of the Baha'i discussions groups on Yahoo that are moderated are used to identify and control dissenters, including "unenrolled" Baha'i, Bahai-Apologetics, and talisman9. A concomitant result on all forums, as on BeliefNet, is preventing the development of serious critical thought, reflection, and discussion. Further, the abuse liberals are subjected to convinces independently minded Baha'is to remain silent and keep a low profile, which is precisely the aim of fundamentalists.

A further tactic has been the use of false identities, many quite outrageous and flamboyant, which only extensive reading of talk.religion.bahai can begin to reveal, longer than the usual cursory non-bahai visitor or lurker will linger. Essentially, some false identities are actually *double agents* pretending to be opposed to the Haifan denomination while actually working on its behalf, especially on talk.religion.bahai

Whereas Almighty God hath created the mind free; that all attempts to influence it by temporal punishments or burthens, or by civil incapacitations, tend only to beget habits of hypocrisy and meanness, and are a departure from the plan of the Holy author of our religion, who being Lord both of body and mind, yet chose not to propagate it by coercions on either, as it was in his Almighty power to do; that the impious presumption of legislators and rulers, civil as well as ecclesiastical, who being themselves but fallible and uninspired men, have assumed dominion over the faith of others, setting up their own opinions and modes of thinking as the only true and infallible, and as such endeavouring to impose them on others, hath established and maintained false religions over the greatest part of the world, and through all time; that to compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves, is sinful and tyrannical; that even the forcing him to support this or that teacher of his own religious persuasion, is depriving him of the comfortable liberty of giving his contributions to the particular pastor, whose morals he would make his pattern, and whose powers he feels most persuasive to righteousness, and is withdrawing from the ministry those temporary rewards, which proceeding from an approbation of their personal conduct, are an additional incitement to earnest and unremitting labours for the instruction of mankind; that our civil rights have no dependence on our religious opinions, any more than our opinions in physics or geometry; that therefore the proscribing any citizen as unworthy the public confidence by laying upon him an incapacity of being called to offices of trust and emolument, unless he profess or renounce this or that religious opinion, is depriving him injuriously of those privileges and advantages to which in common with his fellow-citizens he has a natural right; that it tends only to corrupt the principles of that religion it is meant to encourage, by bribing with a monopoly of worldly honours and emoluments, those who will externally profess and conform to it; that though indeed these are criminal who do not withstand such temptation, yet neither are those innocent who lay the bait in their way; that to suffer the civil magistrate to intrude his powers into the field of opinion, and to restrain the profession or propagation of principles on supposition of their ill tendency, is a dangerous fallacy, which at once destroys all religious liberty, because he being of course judge of that tendency will make his opinions the rule of judgment, and approve or condemn the sentiments of others only as they shall square with or differ from his own; that it is time enough for the rightful purposes of civil government, for its officers to interfere when principles break out into overt acts against peace and good order; and finally, that truth is great and will prevail if left to herself, that she is the proper and sufficient antagonist to error, and has nothing to fear from the conflict, unless by human interposition disarmed of her natural weapons, free argument and debate, errors ceasing to be dangerous when it is permitted freely to contradict them:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That no man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever, nor shall be enforced, restrained, molested, or burthened in his body or goods, nor shall otherwise suffer on account of his religious opinions or belief; but that all men shall be free to profess, and by argument to maintain, their opinion in matters of religion, and that the same shall in no wise diminish enlarge, or affect their civil capacities.

And though we well know that this assembly elected by the people for the ordinary purposes of legislation only, have no power to restrain the acts of succeeding assemblies, constituted with powers equal to our own, and that therefore to declare this act to be irrevocable would be of no effect in law; yet we are free to declare, and do declare, that the rights hereby asserted are of the natural rights of mankind, and that if any act shall be hereafter passed to repeal the present, or to narrow its operation, such act shall be an infringement of natural right.

Subject: Obituary for Linda Walbridge

Linda Walbridge died of cancer Monday, 9 December 2002, in Bloomington, Indiana.

Linda was an active poster to Talisman-1 and many of her messages can be found in its archives. I append just a few for flavor below.

Linda, born in New Jersey into a Catholic family, was a devoted and self-sacrificing Baha'i from the late 1960s until 1996. She served as a pioneer in Lebanon in 1973-1974 and again in Jordan some years later.

In

Jordan she lived in difficult circumstances with two young children. She once remarked to me that she had spent much of her life in penury to serve the Faith, depriving her children in ways she later regretted. In the late 1980s she did a Ph.D at Wayne State University on the Shi'ite community of Detroit, later published as *Without Forgetting the Imam.* She served in the 1990s as deputy director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University and then taught anthropology at Indiana University.

Linda was an outspoken champion of women's rights, the need for women to serve on the Universal House of Justice, and of an approach to the Faith that allowed Baha'is to accommodate themselves to science and rationality. She appears to have particularly infuriated and inspired anxiety in the more male chauvinist men in the Baha'i community. As a former Catholic, she was alive to the need for a sense of mystery and mysticism in religion. Her liveliness and genial sense of humor come through vividly in her talisman messages.

With her husband John, Linda published the controversial, "Baha'i Laws and the Status of Men" in World Order, Fall 1984. 25-36, in response to which a forum was published in Dialogue magazine. Linda also published "Rituals: An American Baha'i Dilemma" in the Baha'i Studies Review, available here: https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/abs/bsr05/58\_walbridge\_rituals.htm. Her unpublished "Reforming the Marja` : the Baha'i Example" is available at: <https://bahai-library.org/unpubl.articles/marja.taqlid.html>.

In April of 1996, she and her husband were threatened by Stephen Birkland at the orders of Farzam Arbab, Ian Semple, and Douglas Martin with being held in contravention of "the covenant" because of their email messages at talisman@i... in 1994-1996. These email messages in fact had nothing to do with the covenant one way or another, of course. She declined to speak to Mr. Birkland when he tried to get her to come to the telephone. Catholics recognize an inquisition when they see one, and know that no good can come of speaking to the inquisitor.

Broken-hearted and betrayed (and not a little furious at this shoddy treatment), Linda ultimately reverted to the Catholicism of her youth for the last few years of her life, especially in Pakistan where she lived for two years doing research. Her book on Pakistani Christians has just been published. She spent most of her life, however, as a believing Baha'i who made enormous sacrifices for the Faith she loved.

Her family requests that "In lieu of flowers, contributions should be made to the scholarship fund of St. Joseph's Boys High School, Gujranwala, Pakistan, c/o St. Paul's Catholic Center, 1413 E. 17 th Street, Bloomington IN 47408." Old-time talismanians will want to send a contribution in her name.

Linda, we raise a glass of the choice wine to you there in the Abha Kingdom. You fought the good fight.

Sincerely,

Juan Cole

Subject: standing by my words

To: talisman@i...

Dear Robert, I do think that Ken and Rob's excellent responses on the subject of evolution are quite adequate to prove my point that there are highly intelligent and knowledgeable people here on Talisman who can explain the concept quite adequately. I refuse to return to the bad old days when science had to conform to theology. And, I trust you read the posting from Juan of Abdu'l Baha's talk in New York. This says it all. We should not follow blindly.

I feel quite confident that, if the information we have now on evolution were available to Abdu'l Baha, that he would have explained things differently. He was not a scientist. He was a true religious leader - a moral guide for us to follow. It belittles his station (in my eyes) to make him into some cult figure who somehow had all knowledge of all aspects of life. This was not his claim, Robert. We should read his words to feed our hearts, not to nit pick about scientific issues. Let's leave that to the scientists, please!!

I found Ahang's posting about the story of Fadil to be both fascinating and heart wrenching. I suppose I can relate so strongly to it because of the Encyclopoedia project. Three cheers for the battle against Fundamentalism!

And, Derek. Long may your power outage continue.

Dear friends, just as I was posting this note to Derek, the telephone rang. It was my dear nemesis, Derek. He and Burl now have a campaign of telephone torment. I will never be left in peace. I dread tuning into Talisman on Monday for the Derek and Burl scandal hour. They admit to conspiring against me. Is this the example that Abdu'l Baha gave us? Should we not be asking ourselves, would Abdu'l Baha approve of Derek and Burl's treatment of me? (We are supposed to ask ourselves questions like that, aren't we?) By the way, Burl has unsubscribed from Talisman for the week. However, I do believe that he will be sorry. I suggest that everyone forward their messages to Burl this week to make sure he has plenty of reading material when he returns. Thank you in advance for your cooperation in this matter. Linda

Dear Mark, I cannot for the life of me understand what you mean by not having the tools for studying evolution empirically. There are a multitude of ways to study various aspects of evolution using excellent scientific methodology. What else do you want? Why do Baha'is in the 1990s have to sound like my Christian fundamentalist students who literally will not look at ape and hominid skulls when I take them for tours of the anthropology museum? This stuff is so exciting. I find it difficult to believe that intelligent Baha'is don't relish in this stuff knowing that we are liberated from old religious views that denied people the right to explore the universe without fear of breaking religious law.

I guess my comments to Derek will have to wait. My husband, the Beloved Listowner, has summoned me to assist him with some matter. I have not even asked what it is, so dutiful and obedient a wife am I. Submissively, Linda

Subject: religious images
To: talisman@i...

John's posting on Fadil and his writings on the Babis made great sense to me. There is a continual struggle in the religions with which I am familiar for control of the image that the religion wishes to project.

I have some difficulty, though not nearly to the extent that John, Juan, Todd, and others have, in doing anthropological work among the Shi'a because the more learned Shi'a don't want the world to think that the extreme "irrational" aspects of Shi'ism are really present in the world today. They prefer to present an image of Islam (and Shi'ism) as being very legalistic, rational, and in harmony with modern life. For me to explore other aspects of the religion makes them a tad nervous. However, they don't try to stop me. They just express exasperation that I persist in speaking to the "wrong" people.

My feeling is that the Baha'i Faith won't really gain "respectability" until we are allowed to explore all aspects of the Babi and Baha'i religions and present them as openly as we would any other body of material. I have watched scholars become Muslims even though they are exploring this religion using "cold" Western scientific methodology in their studies. This type of writing is not going to harm the Faith. It will deepen and broaden it. Right now, it is stuck in a groove and, alas, is appearing to be a bit naive. I hope that Talisman's success is to open the doors for all sorts of new understandings.

Subject: how mystical can this be?
To: talisman@i...

First, thank you, Jackson for your posting. I second Terry's suggestion that Talismanians read your book if they have not already done so. It is a very important book and should be on the "must read" list of Baha'i books.

Chesmack, you should be coming to this conference at Bosch. Such a spiritually uplifting (a delicately put message to our ever-sensitive Derek) event it should be. And no doubt it would provide you with many opportunities to resolve conflicts. If you do not come, it may be that the only way to avoid conflict is by putting Burl, Derek, and me in opposite parts of Bosch. Since Burl suggested putting me to sleep, I would like to suggest in turn that he be placed in the fountains with the water on. I am surprised anyone is going to show up at this conference. Surely, Derek and Burl have done nothing to put people in the proper frame of mind. If Burl thinks that his "I see Jesus" line is going to convince people of his mystical bent, I think he needs to read more Talisman postings and learn something.

Arsalon, you will note the weakness of Derek's argument against me. Since when does my decking 3 monks mean that I don't know a crook when I see one? Linda

Subject: being honest

Linda (the one who is always soft spoken and demure) feels that she cannot avoid the discussion of women and their position in the Baha'i Faith.

First, I want to applaud Milissa, Sandy, and Leigh on their forthright statements. Sugar coating things only works for a little while. Sooner or later the sugar wears off and your gagging on the hard to swallow stuff. In my heart of hearts I don't really care who used the word "exempt" from the UHJ. I think it is merely a way to make the idea more palatable. We are excluded. Period. And there are many of us who don't like it. And it is going to become a bigger problem as time goes on and the world finds it increasingly acceptable to find women in places of power.

Frankly, I can't imagine how Baha'u'llah living in 19th Century Iran could have advocated having women on the UHJ. It would have been unthinkable at that time. It also would have caused so much trouble to have been unimaginable. The Iranian Baha'is faced a great deal of persecution, from what I understand, because men and women were socializing together in Baha'i meetings when they should have been segregated. While I don't want to overgeneralize, I have seen Iranian women, mostly in the M.E., who even in the past couple of decades, would not dare to speak up at an Assembly meeting or Feast for fear of chastisement from their husbands. (Now, I know there are going to be blasts at me for this statement. However, I know this for a fact - not just from observation, but because the women told me of their fears. Certainly this is not a universal situation, but it is indicative of the fact that speaking up in public has been a real issue for Iranian women. I am sure there are plenty of people on the list who will object to my explaining this law in such specifically sociological terms. However, why is it that we accept the fact that discrimination against women occurred in past religions because of social conditions but won't accept the fact that the Baha'i Faith was founded at a time when women in Iranian society were living in seclusion? I don't understand the difference.

I have shocked people before by my statements that scripture is only a small part of religion. RELigion is a living phenomenon constantly being shaped by social forces. The Baha'i Faith is no different in this regard. If you go to Botswana you are going to find a different expression of the Baha'i Faith than if you are in the U.S. There are a few basic ideas that serve as unifying factors, but most of the religion will be pretty much a cultural phenomenon.

I can't help comparing the situation with the Shi'ites with whom I am working. These are all people who "live with scripture." Of all Shi'ites, these are the ones most informed about what the ulama teach and can quote the great ayatollahs about women's place, her "nature," her limitations, etc. However, in spite of this I see a changing expectation for women. Some of receiving college educations. Some are slowly "coming out" and becoming a little more visible. And, what is most interesting, I am meeting a lot of men who wish to see their wives and daughters becoming more educated and informed of the world around them.

The fact that they speak so openly to me and deal with me on such equal terms confirms my belief that, though they might know what their grand ayatollahs might say about women's inferior station, the fact is that they are faced with reality and are responding in intelligent, rational ways to it. Yes, even the turbaned ones that are supposed to be so backwards.

My point? Well, I guess it is just plod on. There are very good reasons for modern women to feel unhappy with being excluded from the UHJ. This is where major decisions are made. After all, everytime there is any disagreement on Talisman, there are those who want to run to the UHJ and ask them to solve the problem. So, we turn to the men - always - to handle the really big issues, don't we? So, I don't think women need to shut up about this. There are no scietific reasons to think that women cannot make rational judgements and be just as logical as men. So, we can just simply go on saying that "this is the law and it can't be changed," but I don't see how long that sort of attitude is going to continue in the modern world.

This is so much longer than I expected. Sorry, folks. If Burl and Derek would let me on their very secret list, I could post all these ideas into that vaccuum and you would never have to read this stuff. Linda

Why I Don't Respond to Fundamentalists

Why I Don't Respond to Fundamentalists

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Why1.htm>

Having observed the tactics of fundamentalists among my fellow bahais for over twenty-seven years, I've learnt a few things about the way they operate:

- 1. Ad Hominem, Scapegoat, Libel, Slander, Defame, Demonize, Cast in a False Light, Ostracize, Shun, Banish, Smear, Discredit, Suppress, Attack, Bully, Intimidate, Threaten, Malign, Silence, Harass, Deceive, etc., etc., the individual...all of which has become known as "The Baha'i Technique":
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>*
- 2. Lure into supposed discussion then cut the jugular.
- 3. Work together to create the perception for uninformed non-bahais that the individual in question is unbalanced, aberrant, "spamming," a liar, a slanderer, crazy, disgruntled, reprobate, paranoid, nasty, obnoxious, mean, enemy of faith, violator of Covenant, Cyberstalker, etc.... No explanation, substantiation, justification for any of these attacks and slanders will EVER be forthcoming no matter how, or how frequently, one asks.
- 4. Change or ignore the subject by shifting to the past and arguing over who said what, when, where, how, etc.... Commit cut'n'paste forgery, lie, misrepresent, evade all core issues and pertinent questions. If cornered or exposed fundamentalists resort to point #3 and impose the killfile technique. Fundamentalists will then talk 'about' the killfiled individual through a third person and raise further slander, allegations and ad hominem... but never respond to them with more than 'drive by' attacks. Employ thinly veiled innuendo and glib, trite, evasive non-answers to any question or challenge.

These and a host of other immoral, unethical and abhorrent behaviors have been ongoing in Baha'i cyberspace for years. These behaviors have been linked, verified, exposed, discussed and confirmed. The majority of online Baha'is simply do not care that the Baha'i Faith has become a community detached from, and uninterested in, the basic principles of justice.....the Best Beloved of All Things.
Shunning > Menu
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

As long as the uhj uses the "temporary measure" of "review," for over 80 years now, to censor and suppress all free thought and discussion and encourages such unseemly tactics, attempting to discuss anything with the fundamentalists among my fellow bahais is simply a waste of time and energy, given the pervasive atmosphere of lies, deception, and propaganda, all of which may be readily found on the AOL message boards, BeliefNet, Talisman9, and elsewhere in bahai cyberspace. After more than eight years, talk.religion.bahai remains the only online place of discussion that cannot be censored by either bahai

fundamentalists or intolerant and misguided liberals.

Impartial nonbahai observers might wish to compare and decide for themselves whether the picture fundamentalists labor so hard to paint of me is accurate or not:
<https://fglaysher.com/bio.htm>

It is my hope that the distortions of the uhj will begin to be purged,
it will gradually Reform itself, acknowledging the broad and liberal Teachings of Baha'u'llah that it has betrayed for so many years....

My crossposts to soc.culture.israel, soc.culture.iranian, and talk.religion.misc are entirely within the acceptable parameters for crossposting to newsgroups related to the subject at hand:

The bahai faith *began* in Iran in 1844, the major bahai religious sites and institutions are *located* in *Israel*, *all* religions may join discussion on talk.religion.misc.

The unsuspecting public ought to be informed and have the opportunity to judge and decide the facts for itself.

It should be evident to any intelligent person that bahai fundamentalists have a hidden agenda and their self-interest in mind when they malign me and many, many other people on talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, AOL, and elsewhere.

Since fundamentalists among my fellow bahais have always relied on their ability to operate one way in one country and another elsewhere and the Internet now no longer makes that possible, as dramatically demonstrated with the former USSR and China, the universal house of "justice," like other totalitarian regimes, will have to confront and answer for the consequences of their own hypocrisy. Their slandering me for "spamming" also won't prevent perceptive people from realizing what's really going on....

Those interested in judging independently for themselves my background and whether I'm "unbalanced," as bahai fundamentalist struggle to portray me, may do so by reading my Biographical Note:
<https://fglaysher.com/bio.htm>

I believe it is my duty, bahai and otherwise, to inform my fellow citizens, local and global, of the appalling and incessant hypocrisy that lies behind the deceptive, progressive facade that the uhj so often fobs off on the unsuspecting public....

[Incidentally, this resignation letter to the nsa is from a Baha'i with a national reputation.]
--

Why I Left...

To:
Sent: Friday, February 16, 2007 1:09 AM
Subject: Why I Left...

You may use the content of the email resignation I have sent you; however, please withhold my name.

--
I was a devoted Baha'i for over 30 years. I have at last decided to resign. You may find interesting my letter of resignation which encapsulates my experience over three decades. You may use it as you wish.

-----
Dear National Assembly Members:

Please accept my resignation from the Baha'î Faith.

Perhaps you will find instructive what has led me to this decision.

When I joined the Baha'î Faith over 30 years ago, I did so largely because I was promised that enrolling would be the most effective means for me to help transform the planet. I was told all my abilities and passion to change the world would be put to use furthering the Cause which held an unerring blueprint "a divine mandate" for ushering in a new world. I was in my late teens; the offer was irresistible.

I never received that â?promisedâ? opportunity to utilize my talents; I can only surmise it is because my voice and manner were foreign to the predominant culture of the Bahaâ?Ti Faith. For credulous people who simply want to believe, I asked too many hard questions. A religion that prizes â? unquestioned loyaltyâ? and â? selfless devotionâ? as the paramount qualities in its adherents, it has been my experience, ultimately breeds a culture of blind faith populated by docile, compliant followers.

It is also my perception that the Bahaâ?Ti Faith was not capable of fairly utilizing the energy and competence that exists in the rank and file of followers; people like me. Ahead of me in line there was always a coterie of â? favoritesâ?, â? regularsâ?, relatives of those already in authority, and unquestioning â? loyalistsâ? who were content to accept things as they found them and who were rewarded accordingly.

As the years went by, a number of issues eroded my ability to believe. Thereâ?Ts no point listing them here. Still, I waited and waited and waited over 30 years for the Bahaâ?Ti Faith to emerge, evolve and take leadership in changing the world; a situation in which I believed I would indeed have a role equal to my skills and interests. I felt like a solitary man waiting on the platform for a train that never arrives; always telling myself, â? itâ?Ts coming next year; have faith, itâ?Ts comingâ?. But the train never came for me. And now, at over 50 years of age, my existential dilemma is that I no longer have the faith necessary to continue waiting.

Now, as for that unerring â? blueprintâ? to transform the planetâ?!

What has at last driven me to my decision are a range of recent developments; most prominent among these is the over-administration and â? clusterizationâ? of the Bahaâ?Ti Faith, which I have found completely maddening and counter-intuitive. And yet, despite my unspoken grave reservations, I had loyally put my shoulder to the wheel: I hosted and studied three books of Ruhi, and dutifully held devotionals in creaky cold shacks in the middle of nowhere â? attended by no one â? trying to convince myself that my shivering in the dark was doing some good somewhere. All the while I lived with the cognitive dissonance, the sheer duality of knowing deep down with my heart and mind: that you simply canâ?Tt transform a planet with a handful of badly written workbooks; that it is nonsensical for local communities to extract their meaning, identity and status from an arbitrarily assigned alphabetic letter designation that it appears is not entirely based on merit. Out of the earshot of officialdom, this is what I found a number of thinking Bahaâ?Tis to be saying, too.

In short, I could see that the Baha'i Faith had lost its way and for the first time in my life it was actually moving retrograde. No matter how often you repeat the disingenuous, Orwellian cant about an "outward-looking orientation" – deep down everyone knows the current focus is overwhelmingly internal. Disastrously so. Stagnant enrolment rates, disappointing fund contribution levels, and low retention and participation numbers provide the evidence; so too does the fact that the Baha'i Faith is increasingly marginalized and omitted from significant interfaith and public undertakings. From where I stand, the inward-focused Baha'i Faith has reversed into deepening obscurity.

Alas, you have embarked upon an ill-conceived course that is destined to fail miserably. I have concluded that it will take something in the order of the Chinese Cultural Revolution or an internal purge or schism to correct what amounts to a 100-year mistake. My saying this, I realize, places me squarely in a heterodox position. Yet, as a consequence of the constant retooling, revamping, wholesale refitting and about-faces that have marked the flawed cluster and institute processes – and the concomitant burgeoning over-administration – everything comes into question.

Even by the accounts of the House itself, one must conclude the current approach is in serious trouble. At Ridvan 2005 the House wrote the following:

"While inadequate to express the full significance of the developments taking place, the statistics suggest something of the scope of what is being achieved. The human resources of the Faith have steadily multiplied. Altogether, more than 200,000 worldwide have completed Book 1 of the Ruhi Institute's .."

So then, after five years of single-minded promotion of this defective project, the House announces that only 200,000 have chosen to complete Book 1. Even if we were to assume that all 200,000 are drawn solely from among the world's 5 million Baha'is – which is unlikely – at best that amounts to a lowly four percent buy-in. How can a four percent adoption rate be regarded as a success?

In other organizations, such results would prompt the leaders to abandon the failed stratagem, resign in disgrace or, at the very least, call an investigation into the problem. After nearly five years of ceaseless worldwide promotion â?" only a four percent buy-in? Thatâ?Ts like scoring 1 out of 25 on a test after studying for five years, and then attempting to frame it as a success.

One is left to conclude that either the believers are not â?~buyingâ?T the plan and the leadership has failed to leadâ?|or there are nowhere near the reported 5 million Bahaâ?Tis.

Let me approach it another way. We will yield a measure of our personal freedom and believe in a religious system if it fills two key functions: it meets our emotional needs; and it organizes and explains our world in a way that makes sense to us. The Bahaâ?Ti Faith has failed me on both counts.

On the emotional side it no longer affords me any sense of rapture, ecstasy and awe. Thatâ?Ts not really surprising. After all, the current planâ?Ts slavish left-brain obsession with statistics has warped its feasts and community life, and transformed the Faithâ?Ts adherents into virtual actuaries burdened with devoting their uncompensated labor to tracking endless minutiae; dedicating hundreds of hours every year to an onerous administration that has become an end in itself. I need something more.

On the matter of the Bahaâ?Ti Faithâ?Ts ability to help make sense of my world â?" there, too, it fails me. You see, a devoted adherent expects his or her religion to be constant, unwavering. This Faith, in its current incarnation, has strayed far from the one I joined. For me, once the Bahaâ?Ti Faith was like the line painted up the middle of the highway. Perhaps Iâ?Td occasionally deviate and tack back and forth across the line, but I depended on the line itself to always remain true â?" the fixed reference point by which I navigated my life. However, the constant extensive revisions to the plan(s), the organization and its institutions in recent years, combined with the unfathomable elevation and promotion of often unqualified people, led me to a satori-like awakening:

â?oThereâ?Ts something very wrong. Instead of me, it is THEY who are weaving all over the place and straying from their courseâ?|and now I am compelled to navigate solely by my own reckoning.â?□

The rest came unravelled from that point.

So distressed was I, that I was driven to make a special pilgrimage of the soul to Wilmette to pray for guidance two years ago. While there, I received a blindingly clear and evident message:

"When you joined this Faith many years ago, we made you a promise. A promise that you would help transform the planet by joining with us. A promise that we would utilize all of your talents to that end. You loyally spent decades attending meetings and sublimating your true self and identity. You held up your end. But we didn't use your talents. We didn't keep our word to you. You are free to go now. Go now. Go in peace."

My faith, my credulity is spent. And so, at long last I am leaving the Baha'î Faith.

My decision and my rights in this matter are protected under Article 18, Universal Declaration of Human Rights (cited in the Baha'î International Community's Freedom to Believe statement, October 2005).

I ask that you please respect my decision " and my right " to go.

Sincerely,

Wikipedia Entry > Baha'i Censorship of FG Page

N.B. Please rely on my own books and publications as representative of my views. I've been stalked, harassed, and misrepresented, on and offline, by fanatical Haifan Baha'is and Iranian Shiite and other Muslims for over a decade and a half, some of the latter frequently anti-semites, as well as possibly other religious fanatics, posting to the Internet false information and mashups intended to libel and discredit me. There's a very long history of Haifan Baha'is repeatedly opposing a Wikipedia article about me. Since at least 1996, I have been a critic of Baha'i fanaticism and its attempt to create a literally global theocracy based on a fraudulent 1921 will and testament, a Scientology-like criminal cult, based on Iranian Shiite millennialism, deceiving and brainwashing its unsuspecting members into a false version of its history and then using them to carry on Baha'i jihads against dissidents and critics. As Professor Juan Cole writes in his book Modernity and the Millennium, Columbia University Press (1998), the Baha'i administration has increasingly come under the control of fundamentalists, "stressing scriptural literalism... theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values" (196).

At the time the "FG" article on Wikipedia was under debate in 2008, Wjhonson observed,

"Their only purpose is to attack Glaysher. This del entry should be voided on that basis solely...."

"The attacks imho are religion-based as this person is a vocal critic of certain Baha'i institutions. There is no evidence that his works are vanity-press publications. The article is fairly new and deserves new eyes to expand it, instead of this pressure by a vested group or a few individuals to suppress it. Wjhonson 4 April 2008"

It should be noted that many Bahais of various Bahai denominations have complained about the Haifan Baha'i censorship that has existed on Wikipedia since its inception.

"Wikipedia's articles relating to Baha'i are almost transparently influenced by propaganda.

In such cases, Wik's controllers would be well advised to restrict access to the writing and editing of such articles, and to append a section for pro-and con- articles or addenda, so that at least the reader can avail himself of other online resources, for example, the Former Baha'is website. Unfortunately, most people will, I fear, take the easy way."

I am appealing the decision of Wikipedia to delete the article on me, "FG," in April of 2008. Because of the dominance of Baha'is of the largest Baha'i denomination on Wikipedia, I believe my appeal can not and will not receive a fair hearing through the normal procedure. Because of the increasing importance of Wikipedia during the last decade, and the Haifan Baha'i determination to keep any article about me off Wikipedia, I believe they have severely damaged the recognition and growth of my career, as a poet and writer.

At the time the "FG" article was under debate in 2008, Wjhonson observed,

"The attacks imho are religion-based as this person is a vocal critic of certain Baha'i institutions. There is no evidence that his works are vanity-press publications. The article is fairly new and deserves new eyes to expand it, instead of this pressure by a vested group or a few individuals to suppress it. Wjhonson 4 April 2008"

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wikipedia:Articles\_for\_deletion/Frederick\_Glaysher

Wjhonson had also stated, "Their only purpose is to attack Glaysher. This del entry should be voided on that basis solely...."

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wikipedia:Articles\_for\_deletion/Log/2008\_April\_4#Frederick\_Glaysher

In addition to Wjhonson, other Wikipedia participants also had misgivings about how the discussion and deletion were conducted. Please refer to the Wikipedia database for details. The record of my being a "vocal critic of certain Baha'i institutions" can be found on my website The

The "FG" article there has had over 6,500 hits on it during the last two years, which I believe demonstrate there's significant interest in who I am and my career, both as a poet and literary critic and as a reformer within the Bahai religious tradition. During the last two years, significant new material has also made its way onto the Internet about my work as both a poet and Bahai reformer.

In order to help Wikipedia understand the ferocity and deception involved in the treatment I have received from Baha'is who dominate discussion of articles that they perceive to be related to their interests, I believe it is necessary to describe in a few paragraphs the Bahai religious conflict that is taking place behind the scenes on Wikipedia, and which led to the deletion of the "FG" article.

I have been publicly attacked by Baha'is and slandered in many venues, on and off-line, and as an "apostate" by Moojan Momen in a leading British academic journal: 'Marginality and Apostasy in the Baha'i Community'" in [Religion 37 \[2007\] 187-209](#).

My published "Response to Takfir" (denunciation of infidels) appeared in Religion 38 No 4 2008. Original journal source

Since the Reform Bahai Faith has often been attacked and slandered in the past by the larger denomination of the Baha'i Faith located in Haifa, Israel and Wilmette, Illinois, as have several other Baha'i denominations, I must point out that I believe the Reform Bahai Faith has also been misrepresented and suppressed on Wikipedia, by the Haifan Baha'is. As documentary evidence of the harassment that several Bahai denominations regularly experienced from Haifan and Wilmette Bahais, please visit the website of the Orthodox Bahais who are currently being sued by the dominant Baha'i denomination in the US Court of Appeals, along with two other small Bahai denominations. Contempt Motion by Wilmette NSA against Orthodox Bahá'í Faith: https://trueseeker.typepad.com/true\_seeker/court\_case.html

On February 20, 2009, the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals of Northern Illinois vigorously questioned the Haifan Baha'is on their harassment of other denominations, including Reform Bahai. Judge Diane S. Sykes stated that their conduct "Clearly raises some Constitutional concerns." A brief 3-minute official court recording of the proceedings may be listened to at https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/US\_Court\_of\_Appeals\_2-20-09.mp3

A link is provided on the following page to the original 30-minute US Court recording from which the 3-minute excerpt above is taken, should you wish to verify its authenticity: https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USCourt\_Appeals09.htm

The Reform Bahai Faith is a peaceful, open, universal interpretation of the spiritual teachings of the founder Baha'u'llah. Knowing that the Reform Bahai Faith has been misrepresented on Wikipedia, when not completely suppressed, I ask you to consider our own understanding of who we are and what we believe, if necessary. About the Reform Bahai Faith <https://www.reformbahai.org/about.html>

All matters Baha'i aside, my career as a poet and writer is being adversely affected, and I appeal to Wikipedia on that basis for an impartial evaluation and decision. I wish to note that my two books of poems received over twenty-five reviews, several of which are available on the Internet. Many poets on Wikipedia have nowhere near that number of reviews, including my other citations, for instance, in an interview with the Nobel Laureate Saul Bellow.

If Wikipedia consensus does choose to permit an article on me, I request that consideration be given to "locking" or handling it in some way that will prevent future abuse of it by continuing Baha'i fanaticism directed against me out of religious hatred.

Thank you for your careful consideration of my appeal.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

William Garlington. The Bahai Faith in America. Praeger. 2005. c.221p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-275-98413-3. $39.95.

The American Bahai Mixture

After becoming a Bahai in the 1960s, William Garlington moved to Australia, where he wrote his dissertation on Bahai mass teaching in Malwa, India, eventually returning to the United States. For over twenty-five years, he taught religious studies in Australia and the US. In the 1980s he withdrew his membership in the Bahai Faith, essentially he says over doctrinal issues relating to revelation and the infallibility of Bahai institutions.

Since the majority of available books on the Bahai Faith are written by members and must be officially "reviewed" and approved by Bahai institutions, Garlington's book is important as a rare attempt at an objective appraisal of the Bahai Faith and its actual history and practice. Life as it is lived, versus theory. The last few decades have been crucial years for revealing much that has hitherto been largely kept hidden from public knowledge. Garlington's experience as both a believer and a scholar of religion serves him well in his often insightful treatment of the major conflicts and disagreements over theological issues.

More than any other book to date, Garlington reveals the extent to which people have been harassed and hounded out of the Bahai Faith for the slightest deviation of thought and belief, even to the extent of having to spurn their own family, with the roots of such treatment extending back into the earliest years of Bahai history in the United States. While he discusses or mentions the incidents surrounding Ruth White, Ahmad Sohrab, Mrs. Chanler, and Mason Remey, among others, I do believe he fails to adequately investigate the circumstances of their individual beliefs and basically repeats the usual official line that dismisses all of them as heretics or "covenant breakers." For instance, Lewis Chanler was the Lieutenant Governor of the State of New York, a fact always conveniently left out of "reviewed" Bahai publications. Neither he nor his wife were fringe elements as they are so often portrayed. Ruth White has routinely been discredited as the later devotee of an Indian guru, as though nothing more need be said, playing on both Islamic and Western prejudices, which nevertheless entirely evades answering her charge that the leading British handwriting expert of the day, Charles Ainsworth Mitchell, judged Abdu'l-Baha's will and testament a fraud. Garlington brings no new material, archival or documentary, to the understanding of such incidents of excommunication (takfir). Sohrab's own book Broken Silence raises many profound issues that neither Garlington nor any other researcher has made sufficient effort to address or understand. Other scholars might very well want to start by independently examining what actually happened in such cases.

Of even more interest to me is Garlington's discussion of the many incidents that have developed in connection with the rise of the Internet during the mid and late '90s since I participated in the long battle to create what is still the only uncensored forum for the discussion of the Bahai Faith, talk.religion.bahai on Usenet. As with China, the Bahai Faith found itself confronted for the first time with a means of communication it couldn't entirely control and silence. Like China, the Bahai Faith has developed an apologetical cadre for monitoring, influencing and controlling discussion on the Internet. Yet the early atmosphere of the talisman mailing list, as with other online forums, was euphoric with new found liberty and freedom for Bahais to speak honestly about the Bahai Faith, setting off paroxysms of outrage and self-righteous allegations by fundamentalists that others were "tending toward covenant breaking," "divisive," "not Bahai," and so on. Much of it, along with other incidents touching on religious freedom, can still be found documented on the Internet through University of Michigan Professor Juan Cole's website, my own, www.FG.com/bahaicensorship, and the Google archive for talk.religion.bahai.

Another shortcoming in Garlington's book is that while his Conclusion acknowledges that "vocal and liberal Bahais" are becoming "an ever-decreasing minority," he fails to examine sufficiently why that is, namely, the extreme and alarming tactics used to drive liberals out of the Bahai Faith, exemplified in the attacks on Ruth White and Ahmad Sohrab--the most vicious shunning and slandering techniques used by perhaps any religion in America today. Official Bahai sources and the Internet abound with examples. Garlington barely scratches the surface of the extent to which "hikmat," so-called wisdom, operates in Bahai history, as do "taqlid," blind obedience, and "takfir," excommunication. Much more needs to be said in this regard.

The real test of any religious ethic is not the treatment of those who keep their mouths closed, never thinking or questioning anything (taqlid), but rather the treatment of those writers and scholars of capacity, deeply grounded in the intellectual history and traditions of their culture. The Bahai Faith has so thoroughly failed that test, especially during the last few decades, that no individual or country should take its claims at face value without reading and reflecting on such books as William Garlington's. It should be noted that the December 2005 Library Journal review of Garlington's book, by William P. Collins, a conservative apologist for Bahai orthodoxy, employs the usual Bahai tactic of discrediting and slandering any dissident opinion, while recommending books that have passed "Bahai review," in reality, censorship. The reader might want to reflect on the fact that William P. Collins is a librarian at the Library of Congress, yet readily uses his position to defend a system of administration regularly attacking the liberal values that make a library worthy of the name possible and to discourage acquisition librarians from ordering Garlington's book.

In his closing paragraph Garlington urges the Bahai leadership to manifest a higher degree of wisdom, echoing all too much for me the practices of "hikmat" that resulted, in the Western world, often in the most cynical manipulation of the "rank and file." Rather, I would say, what's required is a higher level of normal decency, humility, and respect for the individual's freedom and liberty of conscience, along the lines of Isaiah Berlin. It doesn't take much wisdom to realize what kind of world the present arrogant and utopian administration would create. One needs only to look at American Bahai history and the abuse of now countless individuals and families.

In addition to Garlington's book, the serious student of Bahai history should also read Professor Juan Cole's Modernity and the Millennium, and Peter Smith's Babi and Bahai Religions. The few Christian polemical writers, who have bothered to write anything, can't hold a match to those who have been burned by the shunning and slander of Bahai fundamentalism. Yet all three authors merely touch the surface of too many incidents that raise serious questions for any American concerned about preserving religious freedom and liberty. There is a very real need for fresh research and excavation of any surviving original material that might throw more light on the major conflicts of American Bahai history. While Garlington seldom moves very far beyond the received version of American Bahai history, his book is at least the first written by a scholar trying to discover essentially what Edward Gibbon called the "inevitable mixture of error and corruption" that a religion contracts "in a long residence upon earth," versus the predictably self-serving propaganda of the converted. The publisher Praeger is to be applauded for its commitment to free speech and discussion.

From: Juan R. I. Cole <jrcole@umich.edu> To:
talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu> Subject: two wrongs make a wrong Date: Tuesday, February 10, 1998 12:12 AM

Not only, as Milissa says, do two wrongs not make a right, but in this case both wrongs were committed by the same parties! So they especially don't make a right. Susan has started making the ultra logical argument that if the Baha'i institutions ever act wrongly, and if anyone criticizes them for that, then the very criticism justifies the wrong done in the first place!!! What I hear from her is, "My country, right or wrong." I was taught in grade school that this sentiment was always immoral; it seems Susan had a less rigorous ethical education. She has justified: the expulsion of Michael McKenny, the false charges of covenant breaking against the Talismanians, the false charges against the Dialogue editors, the harassment of Nima Hazini (and she even slandered poor Nima in the process). And on what grounds? "My religion, right or wrong." It was a bad sentiment in 19th century jingoistic America. But for it seriously to be put forward as an ethical standard by an adherent of a religion that aims at uniting humankind and providing justice for all is so tragic that one wants to weep.

And let me get this straight. Susan Maneck apparently puts forth seriously, an argument that the fact that Dr. Hossein Danesh was charged by *three* of his women patients with taking advantage of them and that the Royal College of Physicians found these charges plausible and that he paid a large fine and promised never to practice psychiatry again--the fact that these matters were discussed on Talisman is said by Dr. Maneck to justify Dr. Ghadirian standing up in front of a large audience of Baha'is in London (and before that in Montreal) and making false and quite frankly libellous statements about Juan Cole (and really about all Talisman and Irfan listmembers)!

Dr. Danesh's case was reported in the newspapers and is a matter of public record. No one can know the entire truth of the matter. But that *three* such accusations were launched and that his professional association took them so seriously certainly cannot be ignored. And to think that people like Michael McKenny or Linda Walbridge were chased out of the Baha'i faith, having loyally served and sacrificed for the religion, while Dr. Danesh was protected by the Canadian NSA and then actually appointed to run the prestigious (and cushy) Landegg Academy in Switzerland--all of this left a very bad taste in Linda Walbridge's mouth, and I don't blame her.

cheers    Juan

Letter to a Baha'i Scholar - February 14, 2004

I appreciate your replying. I too am not in touch with the bahai community, and I definitely don't care to be, given its state of affairs. I feel the administration has thoroughly betrayed the more moderate and liberal side of the writings and of common sense. My background is Catholic, which gave me a vision of the history of evil and corruption behind the veil that fundamentalist bahais have only confirmed with their own oppressively organized form of religion. You may regard me as too gloomy but I assert my low opinion of bahais is grounded in a justifiably low opinion of human nature, especially when people seek to control and manipulate others. I doubt twenty-five years will make a difference.

I've been reading Jonathan Swift, Cervantes, and Boccaccio of late. Anything but modern literature. Incidentally, given his experience as a prisoner of the Moors, Cervantes wrote a great deal about Islam. I recommend him to you.

Best wishes,
